Children tell burial ordeal

CHOWCHILLA — The lost children of Chowchilla came home Saturday — many of them red-eyed from hours of crying, all exhausted and bewildered by a nightmare kidnaping and the horror of being buried alive by masked captors.

The outpouring of emotion in this small Central California town was enough to capture the hearts of the world.

With the children came a hero — the weary, plainspoken school bus driver who for 29 agonizing hours protected and comforted his charges, got them bravely singing, and then organized the frightened youngsters in a successful escape from their prison at the bottom of a gravel pit 100 miles from home.

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown offered a $10,000 state reward Saturday for information leading to arrests and convictions in the Chowchilla bus hijacking.

The predawn return of the victims of the most bizarre mass-kidnaping in history not only solved the mystery of how 26 schoolchildren and bus driver Ed Ray could vanish without a trace, but it also touched off a celebration like the town has never seen.

Jubilant parents, friends and neighbors gathered all over town to give thanks for the safe return of their children, who were held captive in a makeshift, sealed cavern by at least three armed abductors.

The children's homecoming was greeted with whistles, cheers and tears from the townspeople and a placard at city hall which proclaimed simply: "Welcome home, kids."

The three men who engineered the kidnaping were mysteriously silent throughout most of the ordeal, but may have slipped up by using one of their names in front of the victims.

Authorities issued an all-points bulletin Saturday for a "Jerry McCune" in connection with the case. They declined to say how they got the full name, but two of the victims said they heard one kidnaper address another as "Jerry."

There was no further identification of McCune.

Shivering and dazed, the children and driver returned from their journey into terror and described the nightmare of being buried alive by their abductors. They told of their descent into a stiffling, earth-covered cavern fashioned from an old moving truck

Ford widens his lead

Associated Press

President Ford and Ronald Reagan each scored sweeps on the last day of GOP state convention voting Saturday, but Ford ended the day with a net gain of 15 votes over Reagan, moving to within 64 delegates of the presidential nomination.

Ford took all 35 delegates at stake in the Connecticut convention, bringing his delegate total to 1,066, according to the Associated Press tally. Reagan has 1,020 of the 1,130 needed for nomination.

Reagan won all 20 delegates available at the Utah convention in Salt Lake City.

Both victories were expected and left the balance of power with the 172 delegates who remain uncommitted. No more delegates remain to be chosen before the party meets for its national convention Aug. 16 in Kansas City.

Ford called for unity at the Connecticut convention in Hartford, to "center our attack not on fellow Republicans but on this Democratic Congress, the Democratic platform and the Democratic ticket which tries to be all things to all people.

"Now we must resolve to stop fighting each other and start helping each other."

It was his first political address since Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale won the Democratic presidential and vice-presidential nominations Thursday.

Ford got a rousing welcome at the Hartford convention, but outside the hall a group of about 50 Reagan supporters chanted "We want Reagan" and waved placards.

The Reagan camp claimed Connecticut party leaders had stacked the deck against them at the convention by refusing to give them 20 per cent of the delegation. They contended that proportion of the convention supported Reagan.

While Ford called for unity in Hartford, Reagan was repeating his attacks on the President's foreign and domestic policies, telling Utah delegates that Ford had created an illusion of prosperity by deficit spending in an election year. He charged that Ford had failed to tell Americans the truth about the nation's military weaknesses.

"WE'RE TOLD THAT we're having a solid economic recovery. I don't believe that. We've been given the illusion of prosperity in an election year by printing-press money. But what happens then?

"You cannot spend your way to prosperity. You cannot build prosperity by going into debt."

On Friday, Reagan inserted the Watergate scandal into the intra-party struggle for delegates, saying Ford's pardon of former President Nixon would be a campaign issue that would hurt Republicans in the fall if the party gave its nomination to Ford.

Brown had the floor but lacked the polish

By BOB SCHMIDT
Ridder Convention Bureau

NEW YORK — Jimmy Carter won and Jerry Brown lost, and all the profound hindsight in the world isn't going to change that.

And after a week of observing the Carter and Brown operations in action at the Democratic National Convention in New York City, and after watching and listening to the two candidates in person, the feeling is strong that even if hindsight could somehow change the convention's results, it shouldn't.

For Carter, the convention was unnecessary, a ritualistic confirmation of a fact long since established: He is the presidential choice of more Democratic voters than any other candidate.

For Brown, the convention was vital. He needed it to show those Democrats who had come to know him only through the media what he was really like. He had to showcase himself as a future presidential possibility should Carter fail in November, or win in November but fail to perform well in his first term.

It was Carter, however, who treated the week-long conclave as if the nomination were going to be won or lost in New York City. He and his aides stroked the delegates, made the phone calls, held the meetings with unhappy blocs in an effort to make them happy.

If there was any design to Brown's activities last week, it could only have been conceived by Jess Unruh or Bob Moretti, two former Assembly speakers not known for their affection for the governor.

Bus driver tells of terror

Courage gets a new meaning

By ALTON SLAGLE

CHOWCHILLA — He thought once they must be trying to kill them, the 27 of them crammed together into the airless, half-buried old truck body.

They could hear the hated men above them slowly, deliberately cut the metal mesh and canvas that formed a roof and held back the heavy soil and rock piled atop it.

The dirt and the rocks began cascading down on the crying, scared-to-death youngsters and on Ed Ray, the only adult among them. He tried to comfort the most frightened of the kids and at the same time frantically devise a plan to lead them all to safety.

More pictures and stories on Page A-8

Then the sounds stopped. The clip-clip of shoes above them ceased. They waited for what seemed an eternity in the darkened, steaming body of the old truck that had been carefully designed to contain them for whatever amount of time, and for whatever twisted reason, the three stocking-masked men had intended.

Quietly, the captives made a pile of the mattresses and springs that had been laid inside their macabre prison. The older of the children, those in their teens up to 15, helped as Ray, a stocky 55-year-old, shoved and directed.

The little ones cried for their parents and for food and for some understanding of the ordeal to which they had been so suddenly subjected Thursday afternoon. Five is a tender age to expect such understanding, to know the minds of the beasts who would do such a thing.

The work was hard, but the task proved successful.

Now, in the warm first light of a Saturday morning, Frank Edward Ray, school bus driver, could recount the bizarre story to the eager ears and eyes of the world's press.

They were all gathered here, huddled together in a press room hastily created from the garage of this village's modern fire department. The trucks had been parked outside so that the cameras and the typewriters and the telephones would fit.

The children were back with their overjoyed parents and, finally, Ed Ray, who in 26 years had driven some of those parents to their own classes, could draw a breath.

Nervously, in a dirty green jumpsuit, his square jaw trembling slightly as he regarded his wife, Odessa, at his side, he talked. This is his story:

"I left Dairyland School about 10 minutes to four with my busload of kids. I left off two stops, left off another stop, and then came back

U.S. seeks overland evacuation of Beirut

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials preparing a second evacuation of Americans from strife-torn Beirut favor using a motor convoy overland to Syria, State Department sources said Saturday. However, if warring forces in Lebanon are unable to assure protection for the road convoy, the U.S. may resort to a sea operation similar to the first evacuation last month, which involved sending in a naval amphibious craft. No final decision is expected until shortly before the start of the operation early Tuesday. The U.S. Embassy in Beirut said Saturday that its staff would be reduced to a "bare minimum" and strongly urged the remaining 1,000 Americans to leave Lebanon.

Teamsters 'hold line'

ANCHORAGE — Alaska's powerful Teamsters union Saturday announced unprecedented "hold the line" agreements with the Associated General Contractors and the Alaska Carriers' Association. Local 959 Secretary-Treasurer Jesse Carr said in Anchorage the union had negotiated a one-year extension of existing contracts, with no wage increases after Jan. 1. But Carr said if time brings no display of restraint from other groups, the Teamsters will seek catch-up increases and more in the next bargaining sessions.

Arson fire kills 2

CHICAGO — An arson fire blazed through a 120-resident Northwest Side apartment house Saturday, killing five children and two adults. Firemen rescued many other residents from the four-story building. One fireman said they "came flying down (the) ladders." Four survivors were injured. "As far as we're concerned, this was done by an arsonist," a fire department official said. One witness told police she heard several explosions and then saw a young man running from the building.

South Pacific tremor

GOLDEN, Colo. — A "strong" earthquake rocked a lightly populated area of the Pacific Ocean about 1,200 miles south of Guam Saturday, government scientists here said. The quake, which measured 6.6 on the Richter scale, was centered in the New Ireland area of the South Pacific, a scientist for the U.S. Geological Survey's Earthquake Information Center said. The area hit by the quake is not heavily populated, and minimal damage was expected.

Back to business

WASHINGTON — Extension of the present individual income-tax cuts for Americans is a No. 1 item of business when Congress returns Monday from a two-week recess. Also awaiting decision is an extension of the revenue-sharing plan for state and local governments. The congressional recess that began July 2 covered both the Fourth of July holiday and the Democratic National Convention. Members will recess again Oct. 12 through Aug. 20 for the Republican National Convention. They plan to end their 1976 session on Oct. 2 to give time for campaigning before the November election.

Space flight flop

WASHINGTON — A research rocket designed to strew East Coast skies with red, white and blue clouds blasted off Saturday night — but moments later it plunged into the Atlantic Ocean. Officials said the mission was thwarted by a mechanical failure. The blastoff from Wallops Island Flight Center on Virginia's eastern shore had been postponed Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights because clouds would have obscured the view of four East Coast observation stations that tracked the rocket. The purpose of the colored chemicals was to allow scientists to study upper-air winds and electric and magnetic fields.

Youth's year in jail not spent behind bars

VIRGINIA CITY, Nev. (AP) — Rod Sessum walked out an open jail door to freedom Saturday. Actually, the door had been unlocked for months and Sessum says the sentence was "about the best thing that ever happened to me."

Instead of staying behind bars, Sessum, 19, had worked at odd jobs around this old mining town and often ate dinner at residents' homes instead of in his century-old cell.

By the time he finished his jail term, he had friends, gifts of clothes, offers of full-time jobs, a college scholarship, donations of money and even an old car — which he rebuilt and got to run on Thursday.

The youth, first convicted of assault in the robbery of a hitchhiker, got probation but was later caught in his home state of Louisiana driving a stolen car. He was returned here as a parole violator and in October 1975 was sentenced to a year in jail.

Normally authorities would send prisoners to the state prison in nearby Carson City. But Sheriff Bob Del Carlo said because of Sessum's youth authorities decided to let him stay in the dungeon-like jail.

After Sessum's first six weeks of imprisonment, the cell door was unlocked. He began working around town, getting a chance to meet residents of the community.

"If I had been anywhere else I wouldn't have had this happen," said Sessum. "I wouldn't have made the friends that I made here."

Sessum, asked whether he figures he can now make it in the outside world, said, "Oh, yes, I think I can make it."

He said he plans to rent a house with another youth here for the rest of the summer and then go to Sierra Nevada College at Incline Village, Nev., in the fall.

In the meantime he is trying to line up "some outside work. I don't like to be inside all day long."

Sheriff Del Carlo said Sessum "has come around 100 per cent since we got him. He knows now what he is capable of. He has a lot of self-confidence he didn't have before."

Residents here "aren't bending over backwards for him, but they're sure willing to go along if he is willing to show he can do what he has to and show that he cares," said Del Carlo.

Arab oil nations to prop up Egypt

CAIRO — Four oil-rich Arab countries proposed Saturday to create a $2-billion fund to prop up Egypt's sagging economy. Finance Minister Ahmed Abu Ismail said. The money would be chaneled through, and presumably managed by, a body to be known as the Gulf Organization for Development in Egypt, Abu Ismail told the official Middle East News Agency. The report followed Abu Ismail's meeting with the finance ministers of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates to discuss the project. The proposed fund falls far short of the $12 billion Egypt had originally sought from the four countries toward financing the country's $20 billion 1976-1980 economic plan.

Lockheed impasse

TOKYO — Two officials of the Japanese Supreme Court flew to California on Saturday to help break a legal impasse blocking the questioning of a former Lockheed Aircraft Corp. executive in the multimillion-dollar Lockheed payoff scandal. Lockheed has admitted spending $12 million in Japan to promote sales of its aircraft. Lockheed executives have said at least $2 million of that went to Japanese government officials. A U.S. District Court judge in Los Angeles has allowed Japanese and American prosecutors to question top Lockheed officials under oath. However, he has ordered the testimony kept secret until A. Carl Kotchian, former Lockheed vice president; A. H. Elliot, former Lockheed marketing executive; and J. W. Clutter, former head of the firm's Far Eastern operations, are given complete immunity from prosecution in Japanese courts.

Antarctic cooperation

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union and the U.S. have agreed to cooperate in studying antarctic waters to determine the effect of the South Pole on the world's climate, Tass reported Saturday. Polar explorers from each country will team up on research ships on the Australian and South American sides of Antarctica, the news agency said. A memorandum on the cooperative research project was signed Friday in Leningrad after a five-day conference for polar explorers from both countries.

Retaliation pressure

NAIROBI, Kenya — A Ugandan military spokesman was quoted by the official radio Saturday as saying President Idi Amin was under pressure to avenge the July 4 Israeli commando raid on Entebbe Airport by striking against Kenya. Amin has accused Kenya of collusion with Israel in the raid that freed more than 100 hostages held at Entebbe by pro-Palestinian guerrillas. Kenya has denied the charge, but relations between the two countries remain tense and each has accused the other in the past week of beefing up their military forces along the border. The official Ugandan radio quoted the spokesman, widely believed to be Amin himself, as saying Amin was under pressure to take action against Kenya "to pay back for the blood of Ugandan soldiers and Palestinians" killed in the raid.

Jamaica payoff

KINGSTON, Jamaica — The ruling People's National Party of Jamaica received a $20,000 campaign contribution from the Aluminum Company of America in 1972, according to the party's finance chairman. That contribution was in addition to $25,000 Alcoa has told the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission it gave to the Jamaican Labor Party in 1971, when that party was in power, at the urging of then-U.S. Ambassador Vincent DeRoulet. DeRoulet, who died last year, was trying to prevent nationalization of American bauxite interests in Jamaica, U.S. sources said. Bauxite is the raw material from which aluminum is made.

Reconciliation plea

LISBON — Mario Soares, Portugal's premier-designate and leader of the Socialist Party, ignored widespread attacks against his plan to form a minority Socialist government and urged "national reconciliation" Saturday. In his first public statement since his nomination Friday night, Soares said his government would carry out a program for "national reconstruction" and hoped it would receive broad support crossing party lines. One of the immediate problems facing the new government is how to handle the cases of people implicated in unsuccessful left- and right-wing coup attempts since the revolution.

Moderates sworn in

LIMA, Peru — Twelve generals, four admirals and two civilians were sworn in Saturday as ministers in the Peruvian military government's new, more moderate cabinet. Thirteen of the ministers were holdovers from the cabinet that resigned late Friday in a government crisis that had an ideological tone. Four leftists were fired, leaving more conservative officers in a position to determine the future of the Peruvian military's eight-year experiment in socialism.

Producer Hornblow dies

Combined News Services

Arthur Hornblow Jr., who reigned as a top Hollywood movie producer for nearly 40 years, died Saturday in Lenox Hill (N.Y.) Hospital at the age of 83.

His last three movies, which he produced independently, were "Oklahoma," "Witness for the Prosecution" and an adaptation of John Hersey's novel "The War Lovers."

Hornblow, whose father was editor of the now-defunct "Theater" magazine, gave up a legal career as a young man and started producing plays on Broadway before entering the film world.

He remained active until his death, planning to produce a film adaptation of "The Captive." The play electrified the theater world when he presented it on Broadway 50 years ago because it dealt with lesbian relationships.

Hornblow produced the stage version of the "Cardboard Lover," starring Tallulah Bankhead, before going to work as a production executive for film magnate Samuel Goldwyn in 1927.

In 1933, Hornblow went to work for Paramount Pictures. In 1949 he went to Metro Goldwyn Mayer, where his productions included "Gaslight," "Weekend at the Waldorf" and "Asphalt Jungle," in which Marilyn Monroe won notice.

Almost every able person is swimming in China's rivers, lakes and coastal waters this summer to mark the 10th anniversary of Chairman Mao Tse-tung's historic swim in the Yangtze River, the official Hsinhua news agency said Saturday.

Mao reportedly swam 15 kilometers (almost 9½ miles) in one hour and five minutes on July 16, 1966, at the age of 73, Hsinhua said, riding the "winds and waves of the turbulent Yangtze."

Capt. Tim Severin, the English explorer-writer who piloted the banana-shaped open boat fashioned from 42 ox hides, is trying to prove that Irish monk St. Brendan could have sailed to North America in a similar vessel nine centuries before Christopher Columbus.

Forgotten

Temporarily forgotten in the hoopla of the Democratic National Convention, Rep. Wayne Hays of Ohio is preparing to return to Washington Monday when Congress convenes after a 2½-week recess.

The 65-year-old Democrat, a central figure in the congressional payroll sex scandal, will face his colleagues in the House — stripped of his chairmanship of the powerful Administration Committee — for the first time since he took an overdose of sleeping pills at his farm home in Belmont, Ohio, June 10.

A spokesman for the House Ethics Committee, which began an investigation of Hays' affair with Elizabeth Ray to determine whether she was on the government payroll for that purpose, said the committee has no action planned next week. A Justice Department probe also is continuing, but nothing significant is expected.

Way cleared for branch Y facility in Scherer Park

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

A local conservationist's unsuccessful bid to block the lease of some city park land has left the way open for construction of a branch YMCA in North Long Beach's Scherer Park.

At the same time, it has raised questions about the manner in which the city approved the lease.

Lester Denevan tried to convince the City Planning Commission last week that the lease robs the citizens of valuable open space in violation of the open-space element of the city's general plan.

But the commission, by a 5-to-1 vote, approved a special permit that exempts the Y from the zoning requirements of the two-acre parcel of park land that is located at Atlantic Avenue and Del Amo Boulevard. (Commissioner Shirley Blumberg voted against the permit.)

Observers agreed that the commission's vote was more a formality than anything else since the City Council had approved the lease agreement with the Y as far back as September of 1974.

Denevan also has challenged that aspect of the arrangement.

The citizen watchdog and former member of the City Planning Department staff said that, for all intents and purposes, the city had reversed the normal approval process by executing a lease before the planning commission had seen the Y's plans and given it a special permit, as well as a favorable environmental impact report. The impact report was approved at the commission's regular meeting Thursday.

Denevan also claimed that the City Park Commission, which has a vital stake in the matter, was ignored in the approval process — although Robert Felder, general manager of the Greater Long Beach YMCA, said that Park Director Chance Hill had been involved in preliminary discussions of the lease. (Hill was on vacation last week and could not be reached for comment.)

With the formality of a special permit out of the way, the Y is now free to start work on the initial phase of the project. Felder said ground will be broken at the 2.2-acre site at the end of this month, and construction of the facility's main structure — a leadership building — will be completed in about 10 months.

The 5,400-square-foot leadership building will house a social hall, a meeting room, administrative offices and service facilities. An off-street parking area for 60 cars also will be part of the first phase of development.

Depending on the availability of private funds, a swimming pool and locker room facilities will be added to the building at a later date, after which a recreation room and Indian Guide cave will be built.

No timetable has been set for the additions.

Felder said the Y felt fortunate to get the city lease, since the organization's recent fund-raising efforts have met with only limited success.

He said the Y was "out to raise $4 million" for a construction program that included a new downtown YMCA, as well as the North Long Beach branch facility, but that only $2.2 million had been raised

Normally, he said, the Y likes to buy the property on which it builds. "We had some real thoughts about whether we wanted to build on somebody else's land," he explained.

As it is, the Y will lease the Scherer Park property for a nominal fee of $1 a year.

Felder said the organization had given consideration to 12 other possible sites in the area, then narrowed those down to seven. In the end, though, the Y just couldn't put together a suitable private deal, he said.

In response to Denevan's charge that the city is "nibbling away" at its precious stock of open space, city planning officials noted that the city intends to "offset" the institutional use of the park land by developing a new 26-acre park in North Long Beach. It will be

Action Line is your service, solving your problems, getting your answers, cutting red tape and standing up for your rights. To get action, write Action Line, Box 230, Long Beach, Calif. 90844. Questions are selected for their general interest and helpfulness. Please, do not send original documents you want returned.

Record

Lately, when I've dialed directory assistance from Pacific Telephone a recording says "If you've checked your directory and are unable to find the number you want, please stay on the line and a directory assistance operator will answer." Can Action Line find out if this gentle look-it-up-yourself reminder is reducing the number of calls for information. Does Pacific Telephone know how many callers hang up after the recording? I.S., Long Beach.

Pacific Telephone isn't monitoring the calls to see how many people hang up "because it would be too expensive to install meters," but there are indications that show a reduced demand for directory assistance, according to a spokesman for the company. He said the number of calls made Mondays through Fridays in June 1975 averaged 718,000 per day. In comparison, soon after the recordings began, 546,000 calls were made on Monday, June 21. Monday is the busiest day of the week for directory assistance calls, he said. Although this isn't a true comparison -- an average compared with a specific day — it does show a 24 per cent drop in requests. So far, the spokesman said, "73 per cent of Pacific's 213 area code has been converted to the recording." A spokesman for General Telephone told Action Line his company does not have such a recording an has no plans for one at this time. But, he said, "We are watching with interest Pacific Telephone's experiment."

Payments paid

My husband was disabled from Dec. 4 to June 1 and he was laid off from his job. We have disability insurance through our mortgage holder, the Majestic Investment Co. in Denver, Colo., to cover our house payments, but we've been notified that there is an $835 delinquency on our account. We've sent in the disability forms to Majestic and called the company many times. We've also been trying to straighten out a problem with our impound account. For the past two years, Majestic has overpaid our property taxes because of a mix-up with our homeowner's exemption. The county has refunded the overpayment to Majestic and this money should be applied to our house payments or paid to us, but all we get are promises. Can Action Line look into this? Mrs. T.F., Hawaiian Gardens.

Your house payments are now paid up to August. Majestic had been sending your disability forms to the insurance company and benefits were being paid, but they hadn't all been credited to your account. After Action Line contacted Majestic, the firm did a complete audit on your account, crediting the insurance benefits paid to date and paying the excess impound funds on your loan balance. You will receive a new account statement. Your insurance covers only about 90 per cent of your house payments, but the extra impound funds made up the difference.

Restoration

Being a family genealogist, I have acquired many old photographs and I would like to learn how to restore them. I'm considering doing this as an occupation. Can Action Line tell me where I can learn this technique? Mrs. L.T., Lakewood.

When commercial photographers "restore" an old picture, they actually make a copy of it, touch up the reproduction using spot dyeing or airbrush techniques and then rephotograph it. There really is no effective way to restore the original, according to the photographers Action Line contacted. Long Beach City College's Pacific Coast Campus, 1305 E. Pacific Coast Highway, offers general photography classes, which include instruction on spot-dyeing methods to touch up photographs. But the only class on airbrush techniques we could find is at Los Angeles Trade-Technical College, 400 W. Washington Blvd., downtown Los Angeles. The class, "Airbrush Photo Retouching," which is part of the college's commercial art program, will be offered in the fall on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 6:30 to 9:30. Registration for fall classes will be held Aug. 16 through Sept. 10 from 9 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Some background in photography is helpful for persons wanting to take the airbrush class.

REACTION

Action Line recently mentioned that fees at county hospitals such as Harbor General are based on the patient's ability to pay. While this was previously correct, the current policy is that all patients are charged in full for the cost of their care, regardless of their ability to pay. However, payments are arranged based on ability to pay. The only exception is that psychiatric patients are billed based on their ability to pay for both inpatient and outpatient care. W.K., Harbor General Hospital, Torrance.

Captain loses pay for freeing man

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Police Capt. Felix Luna has been suspended five days without pay for releasing retired City Manager Richard Rathfon, who had been stopped for going the wrong way on a one-way street, police said.

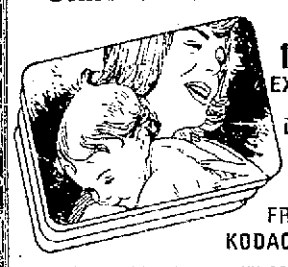

Rathfon pleaded innocent Friday to a drunken-driving charge filed last week in the May 29 incident.

PG&E head dies in river mishap

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Shermer L. Sibley, board chairman and chief executive officer of Pacific Gas and Electric Co., died when he was swept away from fishing companions in a flood-swollen river in British Columbia, the utility firm reported Saturday.

Sibley, 62, was with a group of friends on the Dean River, 300 miles north of Vancouver, B.C., Friday when he appeared to be stricken and doubled over into the swift-flowing water, his friends said.

They said he floated face-down for a moment, then disappeared before the others could reach him.

The utility said it was told by Royal Canadian Mounted Police in Bella Coola, B.C., that Sibley's body had not been recovered.

Sibley joined PG&E in 1936 and rose within the firm as it grew to become one of the nation's largest private utilities. Sibley, who lived in suburban Lafayette, was a native of Oakland. He joined PG&E after graduating in electrical engineering from the University of California at Berkeley.

He became assistant to the general manager in 1946, vice president and assistant general manager in 1955 and vice president and general manager in 1958. He was elected president and chief operating officer in 1965, chief executive officer in 1969 and chairman in 1972.

Sibley played a major role in postwar expansion of PG&E electric and natural-gas service in Northern and Central California.

He also was a director of General Motors and Del Monte Corp. and held offices in utility-industry organizations.

Survivors include his widow, Mary; a daughter, Mrs. Patricia Allen; two sons, Peter and Jeffrey; a sister, Mrs. Julie S. Egan; brothers Edward F. Sibley, a PG&E vice president of Piedmont, Calif.; and Dr. John H. Sibley, a dentist of Alamo, Calif., and two grandchildren.

Viking still set for Tuesday landing

By RICHARD SALTUS
AP Science Writer

PASADENA — With little of the hoopla that attended America's moon landing just seven years ago, the United States Tuesday will attempt a feat of space exploration in many ways more difficult and less assured of success.

Early in the morning, Viking 1 will attempt to land its small biology laboratory safely on the surface of Mars to conduct its automated tests and see whether there is life on the Red Planet.

MORE THAN 200 million miles away, hundreds of space engineers and scientists will wait in suspense as the unmanned probe falls toward the surface, hopefully for a safe, gentle landing.

As valuable as the probe is — more than eight years of planning and the country's most advanced technology — direct control of its landing is not possible because Mars is so distant that radio waves take 18 minutes to travel there from Earth.

Once released by the orbiting mother ship, the 2,000-pound lander will be guided by a computer as it falls toward its target area, switching on small rockets in the last few seconds to cushion its landing. Because of the radio lag, no one will know until 18 minutes after its touchdown whether it landed or crashed.

The ambitiousness of the billion-dollar mission reminds one Viking official of the myth of Daedalus and Icarus. That father and son fixed feathered wings to their arms with wax in attempting to fly, but the bolder Icarus flew too high and the sun melted his wings.

"All along we've designed this mission more like Icarus than Daedalus," said Dr. Gentry Lee, director for science analysis and mission planning.

"We may have tried to go too near the Sun. But if we succeed, the jackpot will be enormous."

The mission is being carried out in the shadow of several past Soviet tries — all unsuccessful. Three Russian probes made it to the surface, but one crashed and the other two mysteriously fell silent just after touchdown. Scientists don't know whether the problem was the vicious Martian winds that can gust up to 600 miles per hour, a hazard such as a boulder or pothole, or something else.

Viking 1 blasted off from Earth on Aug. 20, 1975. It is a two-part craft consisting of the orbiting mother ship and the squat, three-legged lander. The orbiter began circling Mars June 19, taking pictures in greater detail than past fly-by missions so the technicians on Earth could choose a landing site.

A dry moon-like plain that may once have been a lake or inland sea will be Viking's home, for once it lands it cannot move. The area is called the Western Slope of Chryse Basin and is about 23½ degrees above the Martian equator, equivalent to the latitude of northern Mexico on Earth.

In September a second Viking is scheduled to land. It may be commanded to go farther north, where scientists believe a little water might be found, or south of the equator to the edge of an awesome, rugged canyon.

Soon after Viking 1 touches down — within seconds, in fact — a camera will take the first of many photographs of the surrounding terrain. These will be beamed back to Earth for study.

On the eighth day, a telescoping arm with a small shovel will dig into the surface, scoop up a sample of soil and dump it into a funnel that leads to the three biology experiments. The search for living organisms will be on.

The answer won't come immediately, though, and probably will arrive in bits and pieces. With Viking's July 4 landing postponed because of rough terrain at the originally chosen landing site, the search will be more than two weeks behind schedule.

The first hints of positive findings would not come before the middle of August and could not be confirmed for another two weeks at the earliest.

The fact that Viking controllers had the capability of delaying the landing several times is a sign of how adaptable — and therefore complex — the Viking mission is.

In contrast to Soviet missions, where all the events followed a preset time schedule and no scouting of landing sites was possible, Viking can be continually revised.

Lee, whose flight team group consists of brainstormers who constantly work out "What if?" problems, said, "We have the capability of redesigning the entire mission in 16 days."

Once the lander is on the surface of Mars, its daily chores can be rearranged by sending a signal from Earth that reprograms the lander's computer.

So sophisticated is the Viking way of doing things that there has been some criticism. It might have been better, said the critics, to probe the atmosphere and surface with cruder tools before risking the landers, which cost about $180 million each.

"Some people would have been in favor of a very simple, nonecrushable design," Lee said, "that would have gotten down, taken a couple of pictures, told us something about the surface . . . and died."

NEW BRANCH Y

In addition, the city plans to construct a 7-acre park as part of the redevelopment of Carmelitos Housing Project.

Denevan insisted that if DeForest park is developed, the citizens ought to know how much they'll pay for it in so-called replacement costs — intimating that the taxpayers will pay, in part, at least, for what should otherwise be the Y's obligation.

Denevan said his major quarrel, however, was with the city's "gobbling up of open space.

"Space is getting scarce," he said. "There's not much open land in the city," and Long Beach citizens simply can't afford to give up valuable park land for private use — however commendable that use may be.

In challenging the special permit, Denevan quoted a planning department document that said the branch facility "does not conform to either the general plan or current zoning."

But planning officials claimed that the facility was not required to conform to the general plan under existing law. And insofar as zoning was concerned, the law allowed the commission to grant an exemption from existing zoning requirements by means of the special permit.

In its report to the planning commission, the planning staff claimed that the special permit would not adversely affect the general plan. It said the proposed facility would, in fact, supplement the park with recreation uses.

The issue was first raised in 1974, when former City Manager John Mansell, in a letter to the City Council, said that "both city officials and Y representatives realize that, if at all possible, it is not desirable to construct non-park improvements in areas devoted to park use."

The letter added that "such use should be considered only in the most exceptional circumstances.

"In this particular instance," Mansell went on, "we have concluded that an exception could be justified on the basis that the site in question is underutilized for park purposes and probably will continue to be underutilized."

More significant, Mansell added, was the fact that the proposed use of the land would "contribute to the welfare and physical and moral development" of North Long Beach youngsters who would use the facility.

"Accordingly, we feel that the human values inherent in this proposal transcend the environmental and park policy factors to which we would normally defer in a situation such as this," he declared.

Thieves break car's wind-wing

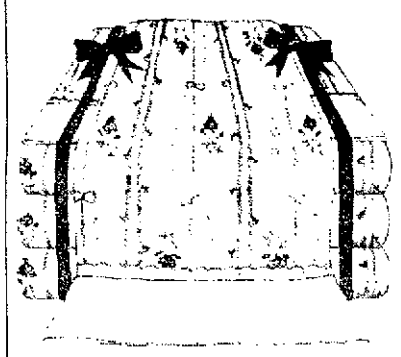

Thieves broke a wind-wing to enter the car of Elizabeth Walmsley while it was parked near her home at 2178 Chestnut Ave. and took a radio/tape player valued at $80, Long Beach police reported Saturday.

Union chief asks firing of top Civil Service officials

By ARTHUR SIDDON
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON—Charging political interference, the president of a federal employe union has asked President Ford to fire the chairman and other top officials of the U.S. Civil Service Commission.

In a letter to Ford, Nathan T. Wolkomir, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes (NFFE), said that Robert E. Hampton, commission chairman, should be removed to "rebuild public confidence" in the merit system.

Wolkomir's allegations were based on a seven-month probe of the commission's hiring and recruitment practices. The study was authorized by the commission and headed by a former Civil Service official, Milton I. Sharon.

The study disclosed that:

—Until 1973, the commission commonly gave special treatment to individuals recommended by the White House and members of Congress.

—Civil Service commissioners participated in such recommendations.

—The commission did not respond adequately to signs of political interference in the system.

"Chairman Hampton, it appears, was silent on or even supportive of the rape of the merit principle while the greatest spoils raid in modern history was under way," Wolkomir wrote Ford.

But in an interview, Wolkomir admitted that the Sharon report did not recommend Hampton's dismissal and that he had no evidence that Hampton actually participated in granting political favors.

Wolkomir urged that there be a housecleaning at the commission to show that the abuses of the Nixon administration would not be tolerated.

"Bob Hampton, however unfairly, cannot fail to have become a symbol of a pervasive scheme to subvert the merit system," Wolkomir wrote to Ford.

"While we are certain that he is essentially a true believer, the record of his support, and that of his top associates on his absolutely key and crucial issue, is dismal and negative," he told Ford.

The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee also has probed the abuses of the merit system and plans to issue a report by the end of July.

One incident the Sharon study investigated occurred in 1970, when a special White House assistant sent two confidential memoranda to the commission's executive director, seeking help in placing 17 individuals with the 1970 White House Conference on Children and Youth.

Several names on the list were those of sons and daughters of high-ranking White House and administration officials. All 17 received positions, while almost 16,000 others who applied were turned down.

In another case, a senator wrote to the chairman in 1969 asking for employment information on behalf of a constituent. Within three weeks the constituent was working at the job of his choice with the Small Business Administration.

Payoff in Teamster loan told

CHICAGO (AP) — A California businessman has told federal investigators he made a $200,000 payoff to obtain a $1.3-million loan from the Teamsters Union's Central States Pension Fund, a source close to the fund said Saturday.

The source, who asked to remain unidentified, confirmed for the Associated Press details of the payment as reported by the Chicago Sun-Times.

He said Foy E. Bryant, owner of the Mount Vernon Mortuary in Fair Oaks, Calif., has told federal officials he made three payments of $50,000, $75,000 and $75,000 to Alvin Baron, 50, formerly a powerful official in the fund who handled short-term investments, the source said.

A spokesman for the fund said it would have no official comment since the matter was under investigation.

Bryant was not immediately available for comment.

A FEDERAL grand jury is investigating Bryant's allegations against the fund, which has assets of $1.4 billion and covers 450,000 Teamsters and retirees in 33 states.

U.S. Atty. Samuel Skinner, heading the investigation, declined comment.

The Internal Revenue Service, in a separate action, reportedly has withdrawn the fund's tax-exempt status — effective Sept. 1 — because of questions about the fund's management.

The fund also is being scrutinized by the departments of Labor and Justice for alleged mismanagement and for making substantial loans to shaky business ventures, some associated with organized crime.

Records examined by the Sun-Times showed Bryant's Mount Vernon corporation borrowed a total of $2.6 million from the fund. Initial loans, the newspaper said, totaled $1.5 million in 1964 and 1965.

Bryant went back to the pension fund in 1974 and negotiated an additional $1.3 million loan after dealing with Baron, the source said.

BRYANT THEN had trouble making the loan payments and requested a delay. His corporate records showed a $200,000 expenditure as "loan fees" in connection with the $1.3 million loan made in December 1974, the Sun-Times reported.

When asked by Teamsters officials, Bryant said the money was a payoff to Baron, the source said.

The information was then carried to federal investigators on the advice of Teamsters President Frank E. Fitzsimmons, the source said, and Bryant repeated his story in a subsequent interview with federal authorities.

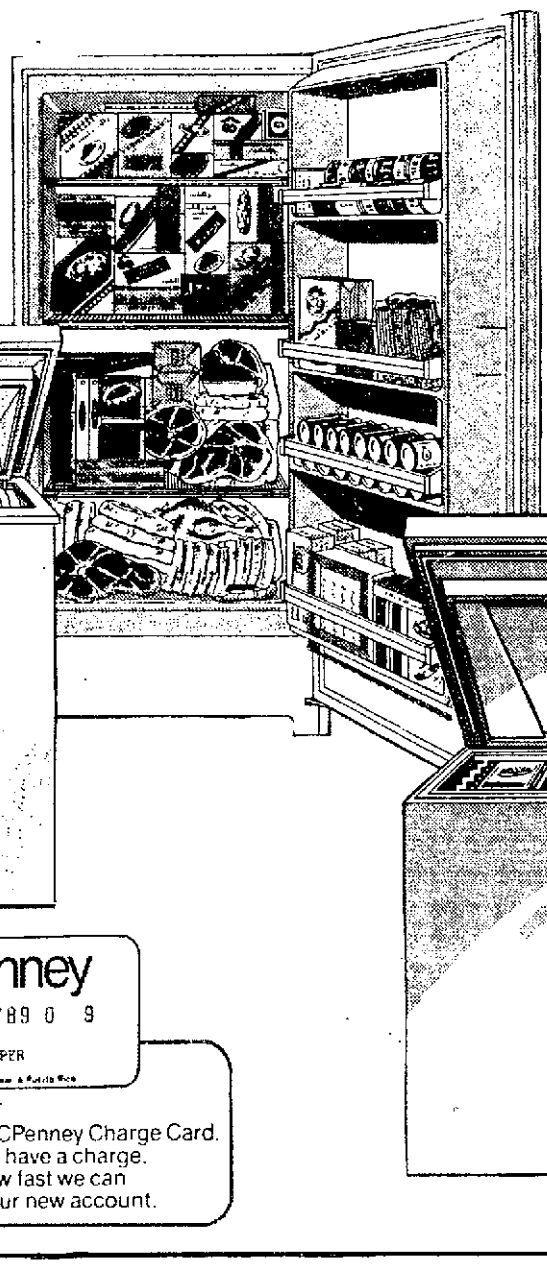

Baron, who lives in Las Vegas, was asked to resign by the fund's trustees, a source said, and his duties were assumed by Daniel Shannon, the fund executive director, who was unavailable for comment.

Starts Sunday, July 18.

Democratic change of guard

Humphrey shaped new party

By WILLIAM BROOM
Ridder Convention Bureau

NEW YORK — A changing of the guard in politics is accomplished in many ways.

It can be abrupt or unpleasant, with the old order banished to the sidelines in disgrace, despair or defeat.

It can happen in full view on the field of battle or stealthily in smoke-filled rooms.

It can leave a bitter residue or it can be an inspiring turning point leading to renewal and a new era.

For the Democratic Party, it took place last week in Madison Square Garden before millions of television viewers and thousands of delegates to the party's national convention.

It was all wrapped up in the words and gestures of two speeches delivered by a man who has been at the vortex of eight Democratic conventions starting in 1948, Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota.

On Tuesday, Humphrey received a thunderous and emotional ovation as he gave what just as easily could have served as an acceptance speech for the winning candidate for the presidential nomination. After four unsuccessful tries for the presidency, it was Humphrey's farewell address. He and the crowd knew it, and that awareness heightened the moment and the poignancy for both.

On Thursday, Humphrey was back at the podium again, this time to nominate for the vice presidency his longtime friend and protege, Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota.

It was the changing of the guard, a moment brought on by forces neither man could control but that were shaped as much by Humphrey as by anyone.

"This has been a banner year for me, the greatest gift of my life," Humphrey said the following morning in his hotel suits. "I am at the top of the public-opinion polls. I've got what a man like me needs — friendship, respect, affection.

"I'm going back to Minnesota as happy as can be, knowing we've got a great ticket and knowing that my close friend Fritz Mondale will be the next vice president. I have truly enjoyed what happened here and have no remorse."

No regrets, no sense of loss knowing that will be no more opportunities to become President Humphrey?

"I don't need it," said Humphrey, "I want to live. I've never been happier in the Senate than the past two years, never felt more the sense of accomplishment."

The speculation that his efforts brought about Mondale's selection by Jimmy Carter obviously pleased Humphrey, but he rejects it. He says he was certain that given time and enough exposure to Mondale, Carter would eventually come to realize that Mondale was the best selection.

But Humphrey was available for repeated consultation with Mondale and with Carter and Charles Kirbo, his aide in charge of researching the vice-presidential candidates.

Humphrey conceded that early in June "certain forces were set in motion," activist, liberal, labor, black and Jewish elements in the party who were not enthusiastic about Carter's candidacy. Humphrey believes those groups are now wholeheartedly committed to the ticket.

During the process, Carter and his aides seemed most interested in whether the men they were considering were team players, compatible with Carter, able to advocate and execute effectively policies they might not totally approve — and whether each man could be a good president.

"I told them anybody who can live with me, like Fritz Mondale has, and still be cooperative and still be his own man was somebody extraordinary, somebody hard to find," said Humphrey.

SENS. MONDALE AND HUMPHREY CAMPAIGN IN MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., SATURDAY
—AP Wirephoto

The Minnesota Delegation was urged to talk up Mondale to other delegates at the convention, and Humphrey believes that also contributed to Carter's selection of him.

"The real reason Fritz got it was that he fits in with Carter," said Humphrey. "He, like Carter, is rather new on the ntional scene, and because they are new they have good vibes."

It could have been a different convention, different but for the chemistry and character of Hubert Humphrey.

After the Pennsylvania primary went to Carter, the party's traditional activist groups stepped up pressure on Humphrey to run. Joseph Crangle, New York state political leader, said he had 500 delegates committed to Humphrey. But Humphrey declined.

"If I had come in here with 400 or 500 delegates, there would have been a knockdown, pitched battle, very divisive, and I knew it," said Humphrey. "It would have been of no help to me in the election, and I knew that.

"The press and the media would have called me an old man and a spoiler."

And so for Humphrey the final arena will be the Senate and not the White House. He heads the Joint Economic Committee and in reality, if not in title, runs the Foreign Relations Committee. He has epochal legislation heading toward passage, and he prides himself that the past two years have been the most fruitful in two tours of duty in the Senate.

The Senate and Mondale in the vice presidency are his consolation.

"It was the time for some younger people, some new people," Humphrey said.

Just Plains folks coin cash from Carter's candidacy

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Jimmy Carter's friends and neighbors opened their cash registers to visitors Saturday.

But at least one local entrepreneur suffered. Amy Carter, the Democratic presidential nominee's 8-year-old daughter, had to shut down the lemonade stand she had run for thirsty reporters.

Security precautions barred reporters from sitting on the street outside Carter's ranch-style home.

Inside the home, sealed off from the public, Carter savored his nomination.

He also prepared for his Sunday-school lesson at the First Baptist Church, caught up with Georgia press coverage of the convention in New York and dipped into biographies of two other Democratic politicians: Minnesota Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey and the late President Johnson.

When Carter returned to Plains from New York he expressed hope that the pressures of his presidential campaign wouldn't change him or his neighbors. But change was hard to prevent, and its signs were everywhere.

Carter's house is the only one on Woodland Drive, and Secret Service agents erected guardhouses and barricades to seal it off from the curious. There was an unconfirmed report from knowledgeable sources that communications equipment last used at the Key Biscayne, Fla., house of former President Nixon had been installed.

Down on Main Street, Carter's first cousin, State Sen. Hugh Carter, was selling peanuts at $4.95 for a five-pound burlap bag and his own privately produced "Carter For President" pins.

Elsewhere in town, Carter campaign workers in the headquarters building that once housed the railroad station sold hand-painted Carter tote bags and purses, $15 scarves and other souvenirs.

An enterprising druggist bottled boiled peanuts in glass pill bottles and sold them for $1.50 each.

Carter achieves dream, the grand coalition

By GIL BAILEY
Ridder Convention Bureau

NEW YORK — For the first time in 12 years the Democrats got it all together here. And now it's up to Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale to translate "unity" into victory.

The Democratic Convention last week put the party, which fell apart in 1968 and 1972, back together. And as the convention closed, it provided some much-needed enthusiasm for the Democratic nominees.

ANALYSIS

At the final moments, Alabama Gov. George Wallace shared a podium with Carter, Mondale, Sens. Hubert Humphrey, Henry Jackson and George McGovern, Rep. Morris K. Udall and California Gov. Brown, while the Rev. Martin Luther King Sr. gave an emotional benediction.

CARTER, at least on the surface, has translated his dream of re-establishing the old Democratic grand coalition of the South, the minorities, the cities, labor, agriculture and the liberals, the coalition which was first split in 1948 over civil rights and later broken apart on the rock of the Vietnam War and the riots of the late 1960s.

But 1976 is a far different year from 1932, when Franklin Roosevelt first established that coalition. And Carter now must find the issues that stir the American people if he is to make that coalition produce the votes that make presidents.

He sounded his theme in his acceptance speech and that theme, as in the primaries, was that the American people can trust him to restore the American dream.

THE DEMOCRATS, in the three convention days, did more than select candidates and heal wounds.

A New South has risen, a South that may be more liberal on race questions than, say, a city such as Boston. And a man from the Deep South has a chance, depending on his own efforts, to be the first southern president in more than 100 years.

In addition, that tired old cliche, a "new generation of leader-ship," actually took office. Carter, 51, and Mondale, 48, represent a new generation of leadership for the Democratic Party.

Humphrey, McGovern, Eugene McCarthy, Wallace, if not retired, at least have become "senior statesmen." Most of the old wounds are healed, on the surface, and in some cases below the surface.

ONLY DURING the vice-presidentialnominating process did two of those wounds surface.

Reps. Ronald Dellums and John Conyers, both black, reminded the convention that the minorities still want a piece of the action. But they did so in terms that made it clear they feel that action will only come from the Democratic nominees.

"We believe in unity. We witnessed the unity of the '60s, when people of every background came together . . . in the struggle of justice that still continues," Conyers said.

The Vietnam War also still hurts, as Marine Sgt. Ron Kovic told the convention from a wheelchair.

Kovik quieted the crowd as he spoke of his wounds and the wounds of others. His left him "with legs that would not stand, a body that would not feel and a pain and anguish that would never leave me."

He was followed by the anti-war, amnesty candidate for the vice presidency, Chris Efaw, who left the country to avoid service in a war he opposed.

One delegate held his nose as Efaw called, like Kovic before him, for total amnesty. Carter supports amnesty for those who refused to serve, as Efaw did, but not those who deserted from the military.

Those two brief flashes of disunity were quickly set aside as the pleaders also pledged themselves to Carter and Mondale.

The Democrats were unified, and it had been Carter's careful doing.

He stacked and stage-managed the convention with an iron discipline that left no room for disagreement.

In fact, the convention was so well managed that it was dull, and that dullness threatened to dampen the enthusiasm necessary for victory.

The Democrats were on time, and sometimes ahead of time, leaving television's merciless cameras with nothing to catch. Americans watched anything else offered on television other than the convention.

On Monday night, New Yorkers preferred that great old movie "Casablanca" to the convention. On Tuesday night, even the reporters and many delegates watched baseball"s all-star game rather than a dull recital of the Democratic platform.

Meantime, Carter and his aides put out any threatening fires, including an effort by female activists to get 50 per cent of the delegates at the next convention.

Jerry Brown tried to stir up a little action, but fell on his face. He hoped to rally 500 delegates to his cause, but he still fell short of the Udall vote count.

Udall conceded in a happy and witty speech that brought the convention to its feet, and his speech was the best thing going for Carter until Carter and Mondale spoke for themselves. Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Tex., also proved again that she has a voice and an eloquence that can stir the hearts of Democrats.

"She'll be our first woman president," one enthusiastic Democrat said.

Carter himself finally stirred the convention. His choice of Mondale brought the liberal and activist camp to his side.

Labor wanted Mondale, the blacks had been urging Mondale, the activists wanted Mondale. Mondale it was and the Democratic left was ecstatic

Little recognized, but also a factor, is the Carter-Mondale appeal to agriculture. Both are from farm states. Carter is a farmer and knows farm problems first hand. And many farmers are vastly unhappy with the Ford administration, particularly over the administration's policy concerning grain transactions and embargoes.

So as the convention closed, Carter was in a position to carry his message to the American people for their decision.

"We have been shaken by a tragic war abroad and by scandals and broken promises at home. Our people are seeking new voices, new ideas and new leaders," he said.

"Although government has its limits and cannot solve all our problems, we Americans reject the view that we must be reconciled to failures and mediocrity, or to an inferior quality of life," Carter told the convention.

He promised jobs. He promised tax reform. He promised reform of the bureaucracy. He promised justice for all.

He punctuated his remarks with the sentence: "You can depend on it."

That sentence was built on the foundation of Carter's previous assumptions, seemingly naive, that he would be nominated and would be elected president, assumptions that drew laughter when he first announced this candicay.

No one laughed Thursday night.

But the speech contained few specifics, and in the coming debate with the Republican nominee, specifics are going to be demanded. Carter may resist that demand, remembering George McGovern's massive problems when he got specific.

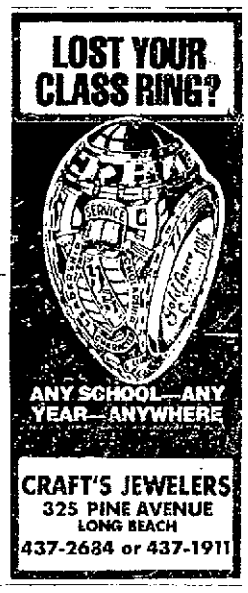

Carter will face other problems, and one of them is his stand on abortion.

Representatives of the Catholic Church are not happy with Carter's refusal to call for an anti-abortion constitutional amendment. However, polls of Catholics, and others, show that most of the American people, including Catholics, support the court's decision.

In fact, when Carter tried to mollify the anti-abortion criticism at a Thursday press conference, he risked offending the majority opinion and raised once again the question of whether Carter speaks on both sides of the issue.

Carter faces one further political problem. He is a southern Baptist, "born again in Christ," and, as is proper, he speaks of that rebirth. Millions of Americans share that belief, and it may be the strongest religious belief in the nation, but others do not share nor are they knowledgeable of conservative Protestantism. Some are suspicious.

LAWMEN WORK AROUND OPENING TO BURIED TRUCK WHERE 26 CHILDREN WERE HELD
—AP Wirephoto

Kidnapers were prepared

Truck fixed as prison

LIVERMORE (AP) — The prison that held 26 children and one adult for nearly 18 hours was probably an old military moving-van type of truck abandoned years ago and only recently renovated to receive the hostages.

"It has been here for a very long time, maybe just after World War II," Alameda County Sheriff Tom Houchins said Saturday as he led reporters around the heavily guarded site.

"I thought we were going to die down there," said Mike Marshall, 14, one of the abducted children.

Teams of FBI agents and sheriff's deputies were probing for clues as Houchins explained that the kidnapers apparently had worked long and hard to get the truck ready for the children.

The vehicle had six feet of dirt on top of the roof and was in an old burial ground for surplus military equipment. A circular hole, about two feet in diameter, had been cut in the roof for access.

Dead brush, six feet high or more, was planted in the dirt to camouflage the site.

"Whoever they were, they obviously took a great deal of time to fix it up," said Houchins. "There was a fresh supply of food — sandwiches, potato chips and the like, mattresses, bedspreads and a water supply."

The food was enough to last about two days, he said.

"We don't know how the truck got here. We don't know what, if anything, it was used for. We don't know what they planned to do with it in the future," said FBI agent Charles Bates.

Suddenly, in dark, kids began singing

By PATRICK ARNOLD
Associated Press

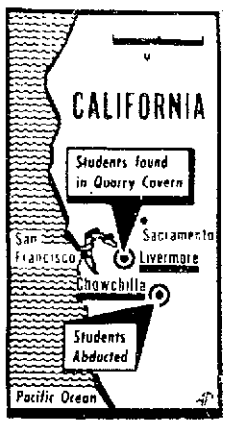

CHOWCHILLA — At first, some thought it was a joke. But as 26 school children were taken to a dark, half-underground prison and shut in, some wet their pants, and a little girl fainted.

But the panic didn't last long, and soon, a little hesitantly at first but with gathering enthusiasm, they were all bravely singing to keep their spirits up.

"We kids were asking all the time why they were doing this to us," said 9-year-old Jennifer Brown. "They didn't say anything."

The children, along with their driver, were spirited from their school bus Thursday by three silent men, then buried alive in a quarry nearly 100 miles away. Many doubted they would come home alive to this farm community.

"We didn't think we'd ever get out," 11-year-old Michelle Robison said Saturday after being reunited with her family. "I thought it was a joke at first. But I didn't when they put us in the vans."

Darla Daniels, a deeply tanned 10-year-old who aspires to movie stardom, said the bus from Dairyland Unified School District was stopped by three gunmen who blocked the roadway with their van. She said the gunmen were wearing ties, but later switched to white coveralls.

During the ride north to a Livermore quarry, Darla said, the two-van caravan stopped three times so the kidnapers could refuel the vans from gasoline cans they carried. She said the children were hot because they were covered with a tent-like tarp, and they weren't permitted to go out to the bathroom, so "all of us had to go in our pants."

They were herded down a ladder and locked into a what might have been the body of a World War II-vintage moving van covered with earth. The kidnapers provided them with potato chips, cereal, and eight gallons of water, then they were left alone with only a flashlight for light.

The children and their driver, Frank Edward Ray, did what they could to keep their fear under control in the stifling underground atmosphere.

"We were singing songs like on the radio," Darla related.

When the children came to the police station Saturday to be questioned and fingerprinted (to check off prints on the school bus) some spoke with reporters. None could even guess why they were abducted.

Nine-year-old Rebecca Reynolds, asked how it felt to be home and wearing clean clothes, said earnestly: "It's better than being in that hole all covered up."

In town of fear

Relief, then lynch talk

By JAMES SCHUTZE
Knight News Service

CHOWCHILLA — This town struggled to return to life Saturday but with mixed sentiments — great relief, bitterness and fear.

The kindly smile vanished from the face of Marguerite Steyer, a white-haired widow who says she is "a little short of 64," when the subject of the kidnapers came up.

"I begin to see why people got the rope in the old days," she said.

"But I was so, so relieved when I heard the kids were all right."

The people of this dairy and cotton farming community, whose first instinct, they say, has always been to fix lunch for strangers, talked often of vengeance during their long ordeal.

Rose Taylor, 59, whose 11-year-old grandson, Jodie Heffington, was among the kidnaped children, talked about lynching.

The people of Chowchilla, 90 per cent of whom are white, live in houses worth an average of $25,000 to $35,000. They describe themselves almost universally as modest, hospitable people, who nevertheless are capable of standing up firmly in a fight.

The wives of Chowchilla's volunteer firemen amazed the large and frenzied army of reporters by supplying them with a steady flow of food, coffee and encouragement through the all-night vigil.

Somehow the residents, whose grief was real, always seemed to be comforting the press, whose trials were merely professional.

But up and down the main street Saturday, where white oleander blossoms floated on the breeze like snow, the talk implied almost guiltily that perhaps the town has been naive too long.

Rodney Tucker, 42, nursing an 8 a.m. beer in the Corral Bar, said, "I sure hope people will tighten up."

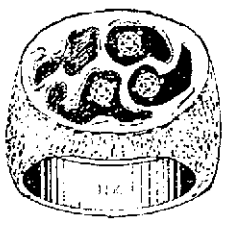

Tucker then snorted and said, "I do not want to see this happen again. I just keep wondering why Chowchilla, way down here in the middle of the state?"

There was talk along the street of Charles Manson and the Zodiac killer, as if California's major cities somehow were fielding an alliance of madmen against the rural interior.

But invariably, angry words gave way to expressions of relief and profound gratitude that the children were safe.

Bob Boscarri, 52, leaned against the school bus he was fixing at his auto shop Saturday and said, "I just thank the good Lord that everybody's all right."

U.S., Germany end Bonn's role in funding troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and West Germany announced Saturday that they are ending a multibillion-dollar program under which the Bonn government, for the past 14 years, has partially compensated the United States for the stationing of troops in West Germany.

The announcement was made in a joint statement by President Ford and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt at the conclusion of Schmidt's two-day Bicentennial visit here. Schmidt flew to Philadelphia Saturday morning.

Ford and Schmidt also announced that West Germany will contribute $ 8.5 million for the relocation of a U.S. combat brigade, totaling 3,800 men, near Bremen in northern Germany. The brigade will be transferred from the United States.

OFFICIALS SAID the move was part of a plan to place greater emphasis on U.S. combat capability in Europe and phase down support facilities.

The West German contribution to the relocation is about 60 per cent of the total cost, and officials said the brigade is expected to be in place at the end of 1977.

The United States has about 217,000 troops stationed in West Germany, and by way of so-called "offset agreements" over the years the West Germans have contributed $11.2 billion under various formulas to help defray balance of payments costs to Washington.

The last such agreement, costing West Germany $2.2 billion, expired in fiscal year 1975. Much of the German contribution over the years was made in the form of purchases of U.S. military equipment.

Officials said that, even though the West Germans will no longer be tied to a specific arrangement for compensating the United States, they will continue to be a major purchaser of American military equipment.

SINCE THE expiration of the last offset agreement 13 months ago, officials said, West Germany has acquired several hundred million dollars worth of U.S. equipment.

A senior American official said the United States had decided before Schdmit's visit that it was not interested in a new offset agreement, but Pentagon sources disputed this statement.

They described the U.S. decision not to press the issue as a major concession to West Germany.

The announcement said the two governments felt a new agreement was not necessary in view of the improved strength of the dollar and the more acceptable U.S. balance of payments situation.

Italy warned 'loans stop' if Communists given cabinet posts

By LESLIE H. GELB
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The United States, West Germany, France and Britain have reached an informal understanding to bar further loans to Italy if Communists hold cabinet posts in any new Italian government.

Administration officials said Saturday, however, that under the formula advanced by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Communist Party participation in the government, short of membership in the cabinet, would not constitute an obstacle to further financial aid.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt disclosed the understanding, which was reached during a seven-nation economic conference held in Puerto Rico last month, in a background briefing to reporters here Friday. The White House deputy press secretary, John G. Carlson, said Saturday: "I would have no quarrel with what the chancellor said."

ROME (AP) — The Italian left and the dominant Christian Democrats reacted angrily Saturday to the disclosure that the United States and three Western European nations have decided to deny economic aid to Italy if Communists are included in the next cabinet. An official of Premier-designate Giulio Andreotti's Christian Democrat Party said he was annoyed above all by the fact that West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt broke the news at a time when Andreotti is trying to woo the Communists and the labor movement into a soft stand.

THE UNDERSTANDING goes well beyond previous warnings by administration leaders about the consequences of Communists' coming to governmental power in Italy. Administration officials said the understanding had been communicated to leaders of the Italian Christian Democratic Party in an effort to dissuade some of them who might otherwise be tempted to share cabinet authority with Communists.

As a result of last month's parliamentary elections, the Communists hold 228 of the 630 seats in the Chamber of Deputies, the lower house, where they are second only to the Christian Democrats.

Administration officials said that Canada and Japan, two other participants in the Puerto Rican conference, had raised no objections to the formula. Italy was the seventh participant in the meeting, which was called to discuss mutual economic problems.

THE SUBJECT of financial aid to Italy was not specifically on the formal agenda, but officials said it had been discussed in informal meetings between U.S. leaders and the other heads of government.

The officials maintained that in terms of the timing of the conference — just after the Italian elections and before the American political conventions — the question of what to do about Italy was uppermost in the minds of the American participants.

As one high administration official put it, "Our objective was to link further financial aid to Italy to certain economic and political conditions."

If these conditions were met, officials explained, one possibility for generating additional loans to Italy would be for the International Monetary Fund to use its authority to provide aid "in special circumstances" out of its $5-billion to $6-billion reserve for industrial countries.

Administration officials seemed to have been taken off guard by Schmidt's conversation with reporters Friday. "The State Department refused through the day to make an official comment. West German diplomats spoke as though the chancellor had done nothing more than say the obvious.

Brown may have lost big chance

First of all, there was Brown's decision to insist on being nominated "so those people who worked so hard for me could exercise their prerogative to cast a vote."

But surely the people who supported the campaigns of Morris Udall, George Wallace, Henry Jackson, Frank Church, Fred Harris and Ellen McCormack believed in their candidates as much as the people who supported Brown's believed in their's, and worked as hard.

Yet all the candidates, save Brown, believed the appearance of party unity was at least as important. Udall let his delegates cast a symbolic vote for him, but only after he had spoken from the convention podium and stated the concerns which had caused him to be a candidate. He then pledged support for Carter.

Brown, too, had concerns that he thought were not being considered by the candidates and so he had entered the race. Just a few days before the convention he said that, despite Carter's certain nomination, "those issues are still there."

Where better to articulate those concerns than the convention podium, with 30 million Americans watching? How better to plant in those viewers' minds, and in the minds of the delegates present, the memory of Jerry Brown as the leader who had expressed those concerns, and in so doing indicate a unique sensitivity to the people's needs and aspirations?

Udall chose to do that, and he did it well, before adding a gracious acknowledgment of Carter's clear victory.

The Californian chose, instead, to pass up the chance.

"When I take that podium," he said in some exasperation late Wednesday night, after the roll call, "it will be when I have something significant to say."

There were other decisions of questionable merit.

Cesar Chavez was chosen as Brown's main nomination speaker, and the United Farm Worker's leader who has so often spoken with incisiveness and passion and powerful persuasion chose instead to read a prepared speech — certainly a decision in which the Brown team participated — and it came across as dull and curiously without emotion.

But without doubt the most startling decision was the one to ask Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards to give a seconding speech for Brown.

Organized labor has a unanimous antipathy for right-to-work laws. No Democratic presidential hopeful in his right mind would deliberately antagonize labor. Yet Brown identified himself with a governor who only recently signed a right-to-work law.

As if that were not enough, a few weeks ago Edwards was asked why he was not supporting Carter, a Southerner like himself, instead of Brown.

Because Carter, he said, does not understand the plight of the oil companies.

Which suggests that Brown had revised his thinking on oil companies. His previous statements indicated that he would not use the word "plight" to describe the current circumstance of oil companies.

Brown has attracted national interest because of his unorthodoxy, but he has sometimes seemed to be straining to nourish that image. He seemed to be straining at the convention.

He said after it was all over that he planned to go to a Trappist retreat to think things over. It is time he did.

Fallen protester

James Holiday, one of more than 150 blacks in a march calling for open housing in the southwest side of Chicago, falls to the street after being struck by a thrown object Saturday. Whites in the area tossed rocks and bottles at the marchers. At least 28 persons were injured and 62 were arrested. The marchers were members of the Martin Luther King Jr. Movement. A federal judge earlier declined to block the march after city officials argued there would be trouble.

Marines' maltreatment continues

By EVERETT R. HOLLES
New York Times Service

SAN DIEGO — The maltreatment of boot-camp recruits by drill sergeants at the Marine Corps training depot here has continued in the wake of the scandal arising from the fatal beating of a mentally retarded youth seven months ago, official sources have acknowledged.

Since Pvt. Lynn E. McClure, 20, of Lufkin, Tex., was clubbed to the ground last Dec. 6, there have been at least 33 other cases in which drill instructors have been punished for abusing recruits, are awaiting court-martial or have been suspended.

The 33 incidents are in addition to charges brought against six Marines, three of them officers, for allowing McClure to be knocked unconscious during mock bayonet combat with 12-pound pugil sticks while he was on probation in a since-disbanded "motivation" platoon.

Pugil-stick bouts still are taking a toll of injuries at the San Diego recruit depot, with 18 casualties reported since Jan. 1, none of them fatal.

A spokesman for the base commander, Maj. Gen. Kenneth J. Houghton, confirmed that courts-martial for maltreatment were running at double last year's rate. The charges range from hazing, harassment and "borrowing" of money from recruits, to dereliction of duty, violation of training regulations and aggravated assault.

The court-martial of the second drill sergeant in the McClure case, Staff Sgt. Henry C. Wallraff, 27, of St. Croix, Minn., will be resumed Monday before a four-man special court on three charges of dereliction of duty.

Wallraff was watch supervisor on Dec. 6 of the special training battalion that included the disciplinary motivation platoon and four other platoons made up of various types of "problem" recruits.

Staff Sgt. Harold L. Bronson, 30, of Freeport, Fla., who allowed "three blows" to be struck against McClure after the Texas youth threw down his pugil stick and refused to fight, was acquitted June 28 by a general court-martial on seven charges including involuntary manslaughter.

NEW KIND OF COURAGE

on Avenue 21. There was a white van parked down the road with the door open, and I slowed up because he was over the white line.

"I slowed up to go around him and out jumped a man with two guns and a mask on. He ordered me to open my door. Then two other guys jumped out of the van. One of them ordered me to the back seat, and the other took over my bus. He continued on down the road for about a mile, then turned into the slough (dry creek) bottom, into the tules (reeds), with my bus with all the kids on it.

"The white van pulled up by my door, backed up and ordered about half the kids in. Then they pulled a black van up and loaded the rest of 'em. I was in the black van. It was just solid dark in there.

"We got stuck, and I thought he wasn't gonna' get out. But he got out and we traveled and traveled and traveled to get to where we were.

"We got to this one spot. He runs through some brush and stuff. I could hear it scratching the van. He left the cooler on for a while, and then he shut it off. We thought we was gonna' suffocate in there for a while. I pulled the carpet loose to try to get air.

Then about 3:30 in the morning, he backed the van up to this thing that was all canvassed over. He unloaded us through the back door. He wanted the bus driver first, so I got out and he asked me my name and my age. Then he wanted my pants and my boots, so I had to give him them.

"Then he unloaded all the kids and asked for a name and age. He gave me a flashlight and I had to help the kids down through this hole, about a three-foot hole, down into this old truck body I guess it was. When they got through, they pulled the ladder up and put a big steel plate over the hole, so there we was down in there.

"They had some food and some water for us, some Cheerios and 'tater chips, plenty of water and a couple of loaves of bread.

"They had this thing all lined with big ol' mesh wire. They stood on the outside and we could hear them cutting the wires and the ceiling started to cave in. We thought we were gonna' have it right then. We kept beggin' them to let us out.

"In the afternoon we never did hear 'em cutting the wires no more, so me and a couple of the boys decide we'd better start diggin'. When we started to move this steel plate, we couldn't hardly move it because it had two great big ol' batteries on top of it. One of the batteries I couldn't even lift myself. I had to get the kids to help me. We had to pile up mattresses and stuff to get us close enough to the hole to get out.

"They had another big box filled about 30 inches high. They had dirt piled on each side and on the top, and we couldn't start to move it. It's just lucky we had a short block of wood in the thing there that they had for a brace, and we used it to pry.

"We'd throw water over our heads to try to cool off, then go up and dig some more. I'd say it was about 7 o'clock we got dug out. I handed the kids up to the other boys and we got out. Just lucky enough there was a gravel pit there, within 200 feet of us, and there was a man over there, so we told him what happened. He went and called the sheriff, and the sheriff's men and the fire trucks and everything else acame and we had a big crowd and we all got home safe."

They had found themselves in a gravel pit outside of Livermore, 100 miles from Chowchilla.

Ray spoke with modesty about how he had "kept quieting the kids down so those guys didn't get mad at us. We had a lot of cryin' and beggin' for their mamas and stuff." However, he said, the children were never actually threatened.

The abductors had cut small holes in the metal sides of the 8-by-16-foot prison. But the air inside was stifling, Ray said, and it became increasingly difficult to breathe.

He said the kidnapers said nothing to him except to ask his name. "I never did as much as hear 'em speak to one another," he added.

But the frightened children made up for their silence. " I just talked to 'em and begged 'em not to holler and scream, that we're gonna try to get out of here," he said.

The three men all were wearing stocking masks, Ray said, "but I think I'll know one man if I ever see him again because I looked at him the whole time I was helping those kids down the ladder. I looked straight up at him."

When they started cutting the wire mesh, and the dirt started caving in, Ray became fearful that the men meant to kill their prisoners. "That's the only thing I thought about," he said.

And how does he feel about the abductors now?

"I wouldn't let 'em live if I could get a-hold of 'em," he said.

But now it was over. It was 6 a.m., and he had spent nearly 30 minutes reliving his recent horror. The pink rays of the sun shone brighter and, in the new morning light, Ed Ray looked extremely tired.

"How do you feel ? a questioner asked gently.

"I feel a lot better than I did a while ago," he answered simply.

It had been nearly 40 hours since the ordeal began, and the gentle bus driver rose to leave. His audience applauded loudly.

And suddenly, in a little firehouse in Chowchilla, the word courage had a new meaning.

CHILDREN TELL ORDEAL

which they believed was intended to be their coffin.

"We didn't think we'd ever get out," said 11-year-old Michelle Robison as the children came to the police station to be questioned and fingerprinted (for comparison with prints on the school bus). "I thought it was a joke at first, but I didn't when they put us in the vans."

Mike Marshall, the 14-year-old son of a rodeo performer, said, "We didn't know if they were going to be there pointing guns at our heads or what . . . I thought we were going to die down there . . .

"We were really sweating bad because we had no air," said Mike, whose five hours of digging finally allowed the children and the driver to escape Friday night.

Mike also said that he and a friend heard one of the kidnapers call another kidnaper "Jerry."

An all-points bulletin was issued for the three men, believed to be traveling in two vans, one white and one medium blue, each with two CB radio antennas.

Police said they were looking for a man about 35 years old, with black curly hair, a chipped front tooth and a tattoo on his right forearm. Another kidnaper was described as about 27, with brown hair, blue eyes and a hairy mole on his right cheek.

The descriptions only deepened the mystery. It was not known how authorities obtained the detailed descriptions, since the kidnapers reportedly wore stocking masks. And the APB's description of the vans conflicted with the description given by bus driver Ray, who said one van was white and the other black.

Of the ordeal, Ray said: "We thought we'd had it. The kids kept hollering, 'Why'd they do this to us?'

"I don't know either," the 55-year-old driver added.

As a statewide search was in progress for the three kidnapers and the two vans, authorities allowed more than 100 reporters and photographers to view the bunker-like prison, buried six feet underground at the rear of a quarry near Livermore, about 100 miles to the northeast, toward San Francisco.

The makeshift prison had been equipped with ventilation tubes, two exhaust fans, a portable toilet, mattresses, bedding and food supplies.

"The roof was shored up with 4-by-4s," said Alameda County Sheriff Tom Houchins. "Whoever they were, they obviously took a great deal of time to fix it up."

Madera County Sheriff Ed Bates said the FBI was leaving the case "at this time" because there was no proof the kidnapers had crossed a state line. However, he said the bureau would continue to offer asssistance of its lab facilities.

The sheriff noted that the FBI "developed some very good investigative leads," but "motive is one of the areas where we have the least amount of information."

Authorities said no ransom request had been received, and they noted that Chowchilla is not an affluent town, nor did any terrorist group claim responsibility or demand a swap of political prisoners for the children.

When the children arrived back home, weary but unharmed, the whole town was up to greet them in the moonlit, predawn hours.

The children, ages 6 to 14, were rumpled and dirty, most of them lost in oversized prison jumpsuits hastily brought in to replace clothing taken by the kidnapers.

Diplomats studying up on Carter

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Certain foreign-policy aims outlined by Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter have worried key allies of the United States, pleased others and dismayed the Arab countries.

But an Associated Press survey after the Democratic convention of two dozen of the 128 embassies in Washington disclosed a consensus on one thing:

The international policy platform adopted by the Democrats seems to almost all hard-eyed diplomats to be bland and broad enough to permit Carter, if elected, to switch course and change emphasis on quite a number of major world issues.

"It's one thing for a challenger for power to spell out his wishes," a veteran European ambassador remarked. "It's another thing for him to fulfill those wishes when he faces the realities in office."

Most embassies sent observers to the New York convention to analyze and report to their home governments on the sort of international posture a Democratic administration might be expected to take.

ONLY a few, however, considered themselves free to provide attributable comments. A majority of the envoys declined to be identified for fear of being accused of meddling in internal U.S. affairs. Spokesmen for the Soviet and other Communist embassies declined to discuss any aspect of Carter's approach to world affairs.

The survey showed:

—Concern among America's partners in the NATO alliance over Carter's skeptical attitude toward existing nuclear strategy. Carter has publicly expressed disbelief in the possibility of limiting nuclear war. This strikes at the idea of "flexible response," which is at the center of NATO planning now. And to anxious West German, British and other allied officials, it revives the long-discarded concept of "massive nuclear retaliation" against an aggressor using even tactical atomic weapons.

—Pleased relief among Japanese and South Korean authorities over Carter's pledge to consult with them on preserving a U.S. military presence in their area. "We have the impression Mr. Carter is keeping his options open and we appreciate that," a senior Asian envoy said.

—Unconcealed dismay among 15 Arab countries over what they see as the Democratic Party's readiness to back up the Israelis to the hilt militarily, politically and economically.

$500 reward offered high school arsonists

At 1:15 a.m. last July 1, fire swept through a one-story classroom building at Millikan High School, 2800 Snowden Ave., causing damage totaling $120,000.

Fire department arson investigators determined that the blaze was set by vandals who spread gasoline around the interior of the building before igniting it. Witnesses told the investigators they saw two juveniles running from the school just before the flames erupted.

Secret Witness will pay $500 for information leading to the arrest and arson conviction of those responsible for the fire.

U.S. 'has lost' drug-abuse battle, says Senate report

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling drug abuse a national tragedy, Senate investigators said Saturday that a reorganization intended to strengthen federal efforts to combat the traffic in illicit drugs has failed.

In the three years since the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) was established, the nation's illicit drug traffic has grown, said a report of the permanent investigations subcommittee, a unit of the Senate Government Operations Committee.

"THE NUMBER of drug addicts continues to increase at a rapid rate, brown heroin from Mexico continues to come into this country in massive amounts and drug abuse continues to spread into rural and suburban areas," it said.

In comments on the report, Peter Bensinger, DEA administrator, said that while the agency welcomes and needs the interest of the committee for more effective law enforcement against drugs, "the findings of this report, simply put, are dated."

"They may represent the committee findings on past DEA operations, but do not portray DEA's mission or strategies in July 1976," he said in a statement.

The subcommittee's report was based on an investigation and hearings conducted last year.

IT SAID that "although DEA has presented statistics to demonstrate considerable numbers of arrests of violators and seizures of illicit drugs, the ability of higher-echelon dealers and financiers to bring illicit drugs into the United States has not been effectively deterred."

The subcommittee said the DEA has concentrated too much on pursuing low-level drug dealers and addicts, and not enough on conspiracy cases targeted against high-level narcotics traffickers.

It also complained of a lack of cooperation in exchanging information between DEA and the Customs Service, responsible for protecting the nation's borders and ports of entry against smugglers.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., acting chairman of the subcommittee, said in a statement accompanying the report that DEA and Customs had "declared war on each other — not on the big-time, international narcotics smugglers and dealers."

The DEA was established in the Justice Department on July 1, 1973, under an executive order of former President Nixon that consolidated the enforcement functions of a number of agencies.

Nunn said that despite the subcommittee's criticisms of DEA operations, he was impressed by the efforts of Atty. Gen. Edward Levi and Bensinger "to correct many of the problems they inherited."

However, he added that "Congress must also take a major role in this effort" and said the subcommittee will hold hearings later this month to search for ways to improve federal narcotics enforcement.

On the type and level of DEA arrests, Bensinger said that DEA's Class I heroin arrests (major trafficker organization) have increased 106 per cent in the past nine months. Class IV arrests (street level) declined for every drug category in the last nine months of fiscal year 1976, with marijuana Class IV arrests down 45 per cent (1,400 cases), he said.

Bensinger also said. "Customs and DEA relations have been strained in the past, but our relations have improved markedly."

Internal security staffing has been increased from 28 inspectors in January to 51 inspectors now, he said and added, "I am impressed by the caliber of the people at DEA."

In addition to faulting DEA for a misplaced emphasis on low-level dealers, the subcommittee questioned reliance on buying narcotics and information by undercover agents, a so-called buy-bust technique, as a principal investigative tool.

"More often than not, street-level pushers could not identify a major trafficker if they wanted to," the report said.

It also said that integrity problems with DEA personnel have resulted from an overemphasis on street-level, buy-bust techniques, with the attendant dangers of corruption, and also from the lack of an independent, fully staffed internal investigative unit.

New-drug tests 'not thorough'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is not properly monitoring new drug tests to protect the general public and human test subjects from severe side effects, a study said Saturday.

The U.S. General Accounting Office, the watchdog agency of Congress, made the accusation in an 85-page report calling for better FDA regulation of new-drug testing.

The Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act and the FDA's regulations require the agency to closely control the human testing of new drugs and to approve a new drug for safety and efficacy before it is placed in the interstate market.

"POORLY conducted clinical investigations unnecessarily expose human subjects to potential hazards and could result in the FDA's approving a drug for marketing on the basis of inaccurate and unreliable data," the GAO said.

It added: "To prevent this, the agency must monitor the performance of clinical investigations. Such reviews, however, have been limited."

To satisfy FDA requirements for safety and efficacy, the sponsor of a new drug must, among other things, clinically test the drug under closely controlled circumstances.

LEADERS IN CRISIS—

Garfield pushes civil service

Associated Press

NINETEENTH OF A SERIES
By SID MOODY

Like honest garbage men, politicians of the Gilded Age heaved mightily to "throw the rascals out." Often as not they heaved a new set of rascals in.

The public trough was never more larded or brazenly looted than during the post-Civil War decades, climaxed by the swinish gorging of the Grant administration. The floor of Congress was all but an auction market as carpetbaggers, land-hungry railroad barons, Wall Street predators and unclassified swindlers swapped stock and favors for jobs and contracts.

"Let us have peace," said U.S. Grant, taking office in 1868. His friends and relatives preferred a piece of the action. There was the Credit Mobilier scandal that feasted on the 45 million acres of public land given to build the Union Pacific. A Whisky Ring in St. Louis guzzled at excise taxes. Post Office contracts for rural "star routes" were handsomely padded. Even Grant's hand-picked minister to London, Robert C. Schenck, was found hiting silver-mine stocks on the job, finally recalled in disgrace when the odor became overwhelming after four years and then renominated for his old post by Grant because a new appointee was rejected by the Senate.

Some of this even touched a scholarly young man from Ohio named James A. Garfield, the last president born in a log cabin and the second one shot. Spoils were not unconnected with his demise.

The spoils system had first taken an eventually pernicious root in the American system in Jefferson's day when he voiced violent exception to some of John Adams' last minute appointment of Federalists to public office. Idealists thought frequent changes of bureaucrats democratically braodened participation in government and assured honesty by brief exposure to temptation. Realists such as Jackson and Van Buren, however, applied the principle retributively to keep the party faithful and as a necessary tool to nourish party longevity.

But by Abraham Lincoln's time, the White House had become such a swarm of office seekers that one wag suggested Honest Abe flesh out his needy Army by drafting them all. After the war, as the country burgeoned not like Topsy but a cocktail party, there were 80,000 civil-service positions, some of them even necessary but most political appointees. In 1877 James Garfield, a congressman for 14 years, wrote that something had to be done about professionalizing job staffing.

Garfield had been born poor, quit a youthful career as a canal-barge deckhand after falling overboard for the 14th time—he couldn't swim—and embarked on getting himself an education. He eventually arrived at Williams College, where education, he said in probably his most memorable statement, consisted of its illustrious president, Mark Hopkins, sitting on one end of a log and the student on the other. He was a youthful (32) major general in the Civil War.

A convention campaign manager for another Ohioan in 1880, Garfield surprisingly was made Republican nominee himself and defeated Democrat Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock.

In his inaugural speech, witnessed by his mother, another first, Garfield again espoused the cause of Civil Service.

Garfield, however, at 49 had not attained the consistency of age. One of his first acts was to replace the capable collector of the New York Customs House, a lucrative job, with a friend of his. Secretary of State James G. Blaine, variously known as "the Plumed Knight" and the "continental liar from the state of Maine." In the ensuing intraparty uproar, New York's two Republican senators—Roscoe Conkling, a grand vizier of spoils, and his altar boy, Tom Platt—resigned, and the cause of reform seemed mothballed. Sen. George H. Pendleton of Ohio had introduced a bill in December 1880 to require a competitive exam for civil jobs as in Great Britain. But democrats feared Republicans would manage to grade their vast body of incumbents too highly, and Republicans were at war over the Customs House.

Meanwhile, far on the fringe of the ins was an almost fanatically religious hopeful named Charles J. Guiteau, who wanted a diplomatic post in Paris and had managed to see both Blaine and Garfield about it. His qualifications were scant. He had lived for awhile in the free-love Oneida Community, married a 16-year-old and moved to New York and an 11-year career of "cheating merchants, publishers, pawnbrokers and boarding-house keepers." His tastes ran to $75 suits and rooms at the best hotels, usually unpaid for, and if his wife objected, he locked her in a closet. He had written a tract modestly entitled "The Truth: A Companion to the Bible" and loitered about GOP headquarters in New York during the campaign in hopes of career improvement.

Put off by Blaine, whom he had encountered in a corridor, he wrote Garfield that he should fire the secretary: "Otherwise you and the Republican Party will come to grief." Garfield, who himself had but two secretaries until he hired another to keep the mob away, may not have even seen the message. But Guiteau purchased himself a .44-caliber British Bulldog revolver with bone grips (he thought they would look better in a museum even though they cost $1 extra) and began target shooting within sight of the White House.

On July 2, 1881, Blaine drove the president down to the Baltimore and Potomac station in Washington, where Garfield was to board a train for Elberon, N.J., where his ailing wife was recovering from malaria, and thence to Williamstown, Mass., for his 25th reunion.

Guiteau stalked Garfield into the station, shot him twice, was quickly apprehended, tried and hanged. Garfield died 10 weeks later of blood poisoning. On his death bed he expressed sorrow at Conkling's resignation and said, "I will offer him any favor he may ask or any appointment he may desire." Habit, too, died hard.

And yet, ironically, the president's death was a bloody reminder of the need for reform. In 1833, Pendleton's bill was finally passed by Congress. It would be wrong to deem Garfield a martyr to Civil Service any more than Charles Guiteau. But they played their parts.

Ford signs new flag code

WASHINGTON — President Ford has signed legislation that for the first time in 34 years revises the rules governing the use of the American flag.

The amendments to the code were introduced in Congress by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., to clear up "some of the misunderstandings over the proper use of the American flag that have arisen over the years" since 1942, when the law was drawn up.

The code still requires men to "remove their headdress with their right hand and hold it at the left shoulder, the hand being over the heart" when saluting the flag, but a line requiring women to "salute by placing the right hand over the heart" was deleted.

The amended code permits around-the-clock display of the flag and the flying of the colors in inclement weather because of advances made in weather-resistant flag materials and outdoor lighting. Before, the law allowed the flag to be flown only on "days when the weather permits." Now, it can be displayed any time as long as an all-weather flag is used.

Finally, the revised code gives life to Old Glory. It now reads, "The flag . . . is itself considered a living thing."

A new game starts each Thursday
All correct entries qualify for the Grand Prize Drawing

★ HOW TO PLAY ★

CASH-O is a weekly game played with numbers. Games begin on Thursday and end on Tuesday. A CASH-O chart will be published each of these days in the Independent Press-Telegram. A CASH-O chart contains 24 number boxes and a CASH-O box in the center. Three or four new numbers will be published each day Thursday through Tuesday. A total of 22 numbers will be published by Tuesday.

Copy the published numbers on your CASH-O entry form (or draw your own entry form) as they appear in the Independent Press-Telegram each day, Thursday through Tuesday. By Tuesday you will find that there are only two numbers missing. When you fill in the two correct numbers you have solved CASH-O.

How you arrive at the correct solution to CASH-O and what the two missing numbers are, is what makes CASH-O a real challenge. Look out! CASH-O may fool you. To solve CASH-O you may have to add, subtract, multiply, divide or you may have to do a combination of those things. You may even have to find another way to solve CASH-O, such as by inverting numbers or by seeing a pattern develop which could lead you to a solution. CASH-O is tricky. It's not only a new game with a new solution each week, but the method of solution may also change each week. Watch it!

★ RULES ★

1. It is not necessary to buy or subscribe to the Independent Press-Telegram or to use a CASH-O entry form. Copies of these newspapers can be checked at public libraries. You may submit an entry by copying on a plain sheet of paper the entry form and the published numbers as they appear in the Independent Press-Telegram together with your solution of the two unpublished numbers. Photo or mechanically reproduced entries will not be accepted.

2. After you have completed your CASH-O entry, mail it to:
CASH-O
Independent Press-Telegram
P.O. Box 429
or bring your entry to the Independent Press-Telegram building at 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach.

3. There is no limit on the number of entries you may submit, but each entry must be in a separate envelope and each must be received no later than 5 p.m. of the Monday following the end of each weekly contest. Prize winners will be determined by random drawings among the correct solutions received on time. If no correct solutions are received or fewer correct solutions are submitted than the number of prizes offered, the prizes, or the remaining prizes, will be awarded by means of random drawings from all entries received by the closing time. The decisions of the Independent Press-Telegram judges are final in all cases.

4. PRIZES: Each week one first prize of $300, one second prize of $200 and five third prizes of $100 each will be awarded. BONUSES: A 10% cash bonus will be awarded to regular CASH-O weekly winners who are verified daily home delivery subscribers to the Independent or Press-Telegram as of the date of the drawing.
GRAND PRIZE: After the last CASH-O game, the Grand Prize 1977 Ford Thunderbird winner will be selected at random from all correct entries received, including past winners.
Winners' names and the answers to the weekly puzzles will be published in the Independent Press-Telegram on the second Wednesday following the close of each game. Cash prizes will be mailed.

5. The contest is open to anyone 18 years of age or older, except employees, circulation representatives and their immediate families of the Independent Press-Telegram, Knight-Ridder Newspapers, Inc., its affiliated companies, and Marden-Kane, Inc.

6. The winners grant the Independent Press-Telegram the right to publish their names and photographs without additional compensation. Local, state and federal taxes, if any, must be borne by the winners.

Moses, Marilyn Monroe did it

By JOHN BARBOUR
Associated Press

"There is a terrible pain involved, an excruciating pain," the man says, choosing his words carefully and trying for fluency. "A stutterer dies when he speaks."

Stuttering ranges all through time, through every race, religion and culture. Seven out of every 1,000 people stutter, experts in the field estimate.

Some studies show that they are perhaps a bit more intelligent than the average population, but there are stutterers among the severely retarded as well as the exceedingly bright.

Moses stuttered, they say. So did Winston Churchill, Marilyn Monroe, Fred Astaire, Jimmy Stewart, Garry Moore, Jack Paar and even Raymond Massey, whose voice never faltered when he played Abe Lincoln, but always did when he played himself.

Although there is more research today than 10 years ago, most experts see little hope for long-lasting cures. There are countless theories on why a person stutters. In the end, most therapies treat the symptom. The cause or causes remain elusive.

IF ANYTHING, there's a problem of having too many approaches to treatment, says Dr. David Burns, a University of Pennsylvania psychiatrist who treats stutterers. But a number of them have promise, he said.

Demosthenes, the silver-tongued Greek orator, "cured" his stuttering by practicing his speech with a mouthful of pebbles.

That technique today would be called distraction, a way of drawing a person's attention away from the act of speaking. Long ago, doctors designed braces for the teeth that served as a distraction for the speaker.

Today there are rhythmical distractions. Stutterers are taught to speak to the beat of a metronome. Some find they can avoid their stuttering by swinging their arms and talking a syllable or two with each swing. Almost all stutterers lose their stammer when they sing.

But, as any stutterer knows, most therapies seem to work at first. The question is how long they will last.

Says Dr. Richard Curlee of the University of Oregon, a leading authority: "There are people in mental hospitals who are diagnosed as psychotic who stutter. There are people who are neurotic who stutter. In short, it appears that personality, as well, varies independently with the stuttering symptom itself."

Most stutterers first encounter difficulties at about the age of 4 when they are trying to achieve fluency.

Researchers have tried to find differences in their nervous systems, in the linkage of nerve and speech mechanisms, even in the biochemistry of their cells. Some contend that one or more of these things combine to bring the stutterer to a threshold, and stress pushes him over.

Some have tried to show that it is the difference in the speed at which people hear their own voices that causes it. For instance, we hear both by air conduction and by sound conveyed through our bones, which is why our voices sound different to us when we hear ourselves over a tape recorder. These researchers contend that the sound of a stutterer's voice reaches his ear several microseconds faster than it does with a non-stutterer. In a sense, he hears in a stutter.

Another theory is that stutterers suffer a vocal-cord lock or spasm.

One of the more popular theories is that of Wendell Johnson, a University of Iowa therapist who blamed parents for holding up standards of speech that were too high. He said stuttering is what people do in an attempt to speak fluently.

As the child begins to struggle with his fluency, it turns into stuttering, and in a sense he learns his stuttering. By adulthood the disability has become a habit.

Stutterers share almost across the board the common feelings of guilt, remorse, embarrassment and shame. The severity differs. Some people try for five or ten minutes to say their name and then give up.

"Many stutterers have a great deal of trouble on the phone," Curlee says.

Lower drinking age, accidents linked

By RONALD KOTULAK
Knight News Service

Traffic accidents among drivers under age 21 have zoomed 33 per cent since Illinois lowered the legal drinking age nearly three years ago, a Chicago Tribune survey has revealed.

The survey, which also showed an increase in teen-age drunken-driving arrests and traffic fatalities, parallels the findings of other studies that link lowered drinking laws to an increase in traffic mishaps.

The Illinois law, which went into effect Oct. 1, 1973, lowered the drinking age for beer and wine from 21 to 19. Other neighboring states, such as Wisconsin and Michigan, lowered the drinking age for all alcoholic beverages to 18 in 1972.

As a result of the survey, Illinois State Rep. Aaron Jaffee, a co-sponsor of the bill to lower the drinking age in Illinois, said he would call for a legislative study to determine if the lowered drinking law caused the increase in traffic accidents.

"I think that 19-year-olds can handle beer and wine and that the new law basically is realistic, but I am disturbed about these figures," Jaffee said.

"We need to take a look at the overall problem of the increase in teen-age drinking with a special emphasis on drinking and driving," he said. Jaffee said he would move to set up the study committee at the next regular session of the Legislature in January.

If the legislative study concludes that the liberalized drinking law contributed to traffic deaths and accidents, then legislators would have to consider raising the drinking age to 20 or 21, Jaffee said.

Last spring Minnesota Gov. Wendell Anderson signed into law a bill raising the drinking age there from 18 to 19. The age had been lowered from 21 to 18 in 1973.

Problems with students drinking in high school and a major concern over increasing traffic accidents among youths spurred the move, said an aide to the governor.

At least 23 states have reduced their drinking ages.

But the trend to reduce the drinking age appears to have stalled, and a number of states are considering raising the drinking ages, primarily because of increasing traffic accidents.

'Fagin' is hunted in 3 states

FORT LAUDEDALE, Fla. (AP) — Police in three states are searching for a man described Saturday as a modern-day Fagin who ordered a ring of 14 youngsters to rob hundreds of homes and to try to murder a police officer.

Robert Varone Sr., 44, has been charged with conspiracy to commit felonies, receiving stolen property and solicitation to commit murder, police said Friday. They said Varone had fled and was believed to be in California or Nebraska. The charges were filed in April but had been kept secret until Friday.

"I call him the big kahuna (boss)," said detective Michael Sullivan of the Broward County sheriff's office. "All the little kids in the neighborhood looked up to him. He supplied them with drugs and money."

OFFICIALS said the youngsters who worked for Varone during the three-year operation ranged in age from 12 to 17. They stole hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of television sets, furs, radios and jewelry from 200 homes, police said.

They said he recruited youngsters through his son, Robert Varone Jr., 16, and from a youth center near his home.

"He went there 10, maybe 15 times a day," police said. "He paid in grass, pills, Quaaludes (a depressant drug) and coke (cocaine) at times."

Officers said the younger Varone pleaded guilty to a burglary charge earlier this month and is awaiting sentencing. At least eight teen-agers received immunity from prosecution in return for their testimony, police said.

POLICE said the elder Varone often pinpointed the homes he wanted burglarized and rarely held the merchandise for longer than a few hours. He often had the youngsters deliver the goods directly to buyers, officers said.

Varone also offered two youths $2,000 each to murder Detective B. Edward Madge of the surburban Lauderhill police force, officers said. But the scheme was not carried out because on the night of the planned killing another officer replaced Madge on a stakeout.

Asst. State Atty. John King said Varone regularly cheated his corps of youthful burglars.

"He would take a tube from a color television and tell the kids it wouldn't work," King said. "He would then give them $10 for it."

Lifetime annuity plan proposed

Equity plus occupancy for elderly?

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — A Wharton School professor has devised a financial plan that would enable elderly homeowners to obtain a regular income from the equity in their homes while being guaranteed lifelong ecupancy.

If implemented, the plan has the potential for greatly relieving the financial problems of elderly persons while simulateneously assuring them of independence and security in familiar surroundings.

Jack Guttentag, who holds the chair in banking at Wharton, the business and finance school of the University of Pennsylvania, has put his plan in the public domain, for possible promotion by insurers, government and savings institutions.

So far, he said, one large bank has seriously considered the plan, and many individuals have expressed interest, but it is not yet being marketed, even though he believes it can be offered with actuarial assurance equal to life insurance policies.

Guttentag's ideas, contained in "The Bulletin" of the New York University Graduate School of Business Administration, include two new financial instruments, a split-equity plan and a nonrepayable loan plan.

In the-split equity concept, the equity of a property is divided in two components, a lifetime interest or right of occupancy, and the residual equity, which is the right to dispose of the property after the occupant's death.

To implement, the elderly occupant sells the residual equity, but instead of obtaining a lump sum payment from the buyer, he or she receives a lifetime annuity or guaranteed income.

Upon the death of the occupant, the buyer ceases further payments and takes possession, sometimes obtaining a more substantial property for the money than would have been possible in a conventional transaction.

The possibility exists, of course, that the elderly owner or owners will enjoy a life span greater than those listed in the actuarial tables, in which the buyer would have to pay a larger sum.

Large institutions, however, can benefit from the laws of large numbers, which generally dictate that extremes average out.

The nonrepayable loan, the other instrument in the professor's concpt, is simply a loan secured by a mortgage repayable only upon the death of the borrower or on the prior sale of the property.

Guttentag believes the time is ripe for the development of these instruments in the United States.

"With the proportion of elderly in the population steadily rising and concern for wealth bestowals through estates declining, the potential market is increasing rapidly," he said.

There is also a strong social interest in the development of the instruments, he believes, because the aged comprise a large part of the poverty problem. The median income for households over 65 is less than half that for all households.

Despite the income problems of many elderly, home ownership is higher than for the population in general. Even for elderly couples with incomes of less than $1,000 a year, home ownership has been measured at 69 per cent.

This home ownership sometimes is achieved at great sacrifice and hardship, however. While property taxes, for example, amount to only 3.4 per cent of total money income for the average homeowner, it comes to nearly 16 per cent for those with incomes of less than $2,000.

Guttentag seeks to relieve this burden while raising income, by utilizing the equity in the house, which generally can otherwise be made available only by mortgaging or selling the property.

I estimate the households 65 years of age and older today have a net equity in homes of at least $80 billion, which defines the outer limit of the benefit they would derive from new financial instruments," he wrote.

Equity of that amount, it is estimated, could generate annual annuities in excess of $5 billion.

The reason that most of the elderly today retain an equity in their homes, Guttentag believes, is that they wish to remain living there — not because they wish to leave a home to their heirs.

Therefore he concludes, let them live better.

601 LIDO PARK HIGH-RISER AT NEWPORT WATER'S EDGE

Lido Park condominiums exceed $5 million in sales

The 601 Lido Park Drive, new 54-unit waterfront condominium residence in Newport Beach, has passed the $5 million mark in sales. Five of the sales, totaling more than $750,000, occurred in the first two weeks in May, bringing total sales in the building to 34.

The project sales manager noted there has been a marked increase in interest in 601 recently, which he attributes to location of the building at the water's edge and may represent the last building of its kind that will ever be built in Newport Beach.

Rising 10 stories near the foot of the Lido Island bridge, 601 Lido offers unobstructed views of both Newport Harbor and the Pacific Ocean. Residents have found that no matter how bright and sunny a day may be, the draperies may be left open to enjoy the views as all of the windows are of anti-glare solar glass.

In discussing some of the important reasons that people have purchased at 601 it was noted, "Many of our residents have moved from large homes after raising families and they now want the freedom to travel, to spend more time at their clubs or to pursue special interests and 601 offers this ability while providing excellent security precautions that give them peace of mind."

Included in the security features at 601 Lido are 24-hour closed circuit television surveillance of all entrances, hallways and other common areas.

All the two-bedroom homes offer step-down living rooms with wet bar and private balcony, individually controlled heating and air conditioning and each master suite has a private dressing room with mirrored sliding glass wardrobe doors and a built-in sauna.

Prices at 601 Lido Park Drive are from $120,000 to $195,000 with furnished models by Walter Nutting and Associates open for viewing daily from 10:00 a.m. until dusk. The building may be reached by taking Newport Boulevard to Via Lido, left on Via Lido to Lafayette Avenue, then left to Lido Park Drive.

Second phase of sold-out condominiums to be built

Within six months of the record-setting close-out of Village Square, mid-priced condominiums in Torrance, Barclay Hollander Corp. has announced plans for a similar South Bay development in Harbor City, at Western Avenue and 242nd Street, between Pacific Coast Highway and Sepulveda.

Village Square established a sales record last year for Barclay Hollander, the firm which built the first statuory condominiums in California in 1963. In the first 30 days following its April opening 74 out of 149 units were sold, and the pace continued at the rate of one home per day for the first 100 days. Prices of the two to three-bedroom homes ranged from $31,950 to $41,450.

Barclay Hollander, senior vice president Ron Hagerthy, said the new edition in Harbor City will have even more buyer appeal, based on its innovative design concept. Sales will begin in August.

Village Court, the new 105-unit development, will be a totally private, park-centered community, with a card-operated entrance gate and a private patio at the entrance to each home. Patio gates will have electronic gate locks and there will be an intercom system to allow residents to identify guests before admitting them.

One-, two- and three-bedroom plans with enclosed two-car garages will be offered, ranging up to 1,365 square feet. Final prices have not been established, but are expected to be in the $40,000-$50,000 range.

Village Court is located adjacent to Narbonne High School and is three blocks from President Avenue Elementary School. The Harbor Freeway is two miles away.

Comments asked on impact studies

By JACK O. BALDWIN

Long Beach port officials have called for public input in the preparation of Environmental Impact Reports (EIRs) for several projects.

Dr. Donald B. Bright, the port's director of environmental affairs, issued the call in the first edition of the publication "Harbor Highlights."

Being prepared are EIRs covering:

—The harbor department's general plan for development and modernization of the port through the year 2000.

—A proposed three-berth tanker terminal and a six-tank storage farm on Pier J to be used by Standard Oil of Ohio (SOHIO).

—A proposed 110-acre landfill to add to the container facilities on Pier J.

—An analysis of wave and current actions in the harbor plus those associated with proposed future developments and port expansion.

The largest proposed project is the SOHIO deepwater oil terminal planned for south Pier J. The facility will allow three 165,000-deadweigh- ton tankers (the type that will bring Alaskan North Slope oil) to unload at the same time. The terminal and the tank farm are being designed to receive up to 700,000 barrels of crude oil per day.

Because the project calls for the use of some existing pipelines and the construction of additional pipelines to carry the oil across state lines from Long Beach to Midland, Tex., the project is of national sigificance. The Department of the Interior's Bureau of Land Management is busy preparing the federally required Environmental Impact Statement (EIS). The California Public Utilities Commission is working with the port to prepare the state-required EIR.

Citizens for or against any of the proposed projects are encouraged to call the harbor department or write to Bright at Box 570, Long Beach, 90801.

Security urged

The tragic incident last Monday at Fullerton State University, when a beserk gunman shot and killed seven persons and wounded two others, has prompted Roy Verkich, vice president of the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners, to suggest that an armed and uniformed security officer again be assigned to attend commission meetings.

At one time such a guard was present at the weekly commission meetings in San Pedro, but the practice was discontinued in 1974.

Verkich said an armed guard would be a deterrent to anyone who might be tempted to cause trouble during a board meeting. He added that armed officers attend city council meetings and there is an armed baliff in courtrooms.

At present, most potentially powerful weapon available during commission meetings is the hardwood gavel wielded by the presiding officer.

Jack the Ripper—The final solution?

By JAMES O. JACKSON
Knight News Service

LONDON—Jack the Ripper, that midnight slasher of 19th Century prostitutes, long has been the world's most captivating killer.

He has become the very epitome of the homicidal maniac, the untraceable murderer who killed for his own demented kind of fun, terrorizing the population and gleefully taunting the police with his successes.

He has been made the subject of song, movies, prose, poetry and even children's rhymes. He was never caught, and despite hundreds of attempts he never has been convicingly identified.

But now there is a new theory of Jack the Ripper, one that advances him from the penny-paper sensationalism of the 19th Century to the conspiracy theories of the 20th.

AUTHOR Stephen Knight, in a book just published in London called "Jack the Ripper — The Final Solution," claims that Jack was more than a mere killer. He was more, in fact, than one man. Knight advances evidence that Jack the Ripper was a conspiracy at a very high level, a sort of Victorian Watergate in which the cover-up succeeded.

Knight, a newsman, claims to have gained access to secret Scotland Yard files on the Ripper murders, which took place during a 10-week reign of terror in the fall of 1888. The files were kept secret, says Knight, because of a massive cover-up of a scandal that might have brought down the British throne.

At the heart of the scandal, according to Knight, was Queen Victoria's handsome but unintelligent grandson, Edward, the Duke of Clarence.

It seems that Edward fathered a daughter by a shopgirl named Annie Crook, whom he met through his art teacher, a well-known painter named Walter Sickert. Such peccadilloes were common enough among the aristocracy of the time, but Clarence carried his secret liaison beyond the bounds of Victorian decency; he married the girl.

WORSE, he married her in a secret Roman Catholic ceremony at a time when anti-Catholic sentiment was running strong in Britain. If the story had become public knowledge it could have meant the destruction of the monarchy.

Queen Victoria learned of the marriage, Knight says, and, horrified, she ordered that the affair be ended.

Accordingly, royal agents broke in on the duke's hideaway, hauling him back to his grandmother's palace and incarcerating his wife in an insane asylum, where she eventually died.

The matter may have ended there, but for a young woman named Mary Kelly. Miss Kelly had served as nurse to the couple's little daughter, and she escaped when the marriage was broken up. Apparently sensing a chance for profit, she hatched a blackmail plot with the aid of three prostitutes who lived in London's squalid East End.

Together, Knight says, they drafted an extortion letter, sent it off and awaited results. Results came, but not the kind they expected. Within a few months, all were dead, and all London was in turmoil over what then was called the "Whitechapel murders."

The unknown Jack the Ripper was blamed for the killings, and in the ensuing years writers and policemen have put forth various theories of who he was. One theory suggested that the young duke himself was the Ripper, and another writer has said the duke's close friend, James Stephen, the brother of Virginia Woolf, was the killer. Some say it was not a man, but a woman ("Jill the Ripper") and several sleuths have cited evidence that a doctor was involved.

DUKE OF CLARENCE

According to Knight, a docotr was indeed involved— Sir William Gull, the royal physician.

Knight says that Gull, who had certified Miss Crook insane and was already deeply involved in the cover-up of the marriage, undertook to silence the blackmailing Mary Kelly and her friends. With the help of his coachman, John Netley, Gull hunted the women down in a series of macabre murders between August and November of 1888.

In each slaying, the women were horribly disfigured by what police speculated to be a surgeon's scalpel. In one case, parts of one of the victim's kidneys were mailed to the police along with a demented note saying that the rest of it had been fried and eaten.

Miss Kelly, who had herself taken up prostitution and was three months pregnant, was the last to die, on Nov. 9, 1888, when she was found butchered in her bed.

Gull fell ill shortly after the murders and died a year later. His coachman, Netley, died violently five years later when he was run over by his own coach in a London park.

Hollywood Notes

Cross-country comedy film race ends in L.B.

By HARRY TESSEL
Motion Picture Editor

Zoom down Park Avenue at 140 miles an hour and zip through Times Square at 150 to start a wild, wacky, funny sports-car race that ends at the Queen Mary.

Producer Chuck Bail did that with his outrageous new comedy "The Gumball Rally," made with 25 stunt men racing and crashing cars across the country.

"The Gumball Rally," a Warner Bros. release starring Michael Sarrazin, screens in the Long Beach area next month.

"The whole movie isn't for real," says Bail, a 6-foot-4 former stunt man himself. "That's why the action is so outrageous.

"We even have an Italian race driver who snaps off his rear-view mirror and says, 'What's behind me is not interesting.'

"We shut down Park Avenue, Times Square and the Lincoln Tunnel, and had traffic rerouted on Saturday and Sunday mornings. We went through the tunnel at 130 and across the bridge at 140."

The racers are eccentrics competing only for a gigantic gum-ball machine. There are more than 30 major stunts in the cross-country from Manhattan to Long Beach.

The vehicles are a Porsche Targa, Ferrari Daytona, Cobra, Corvette, 600-horsepower Camaro, Mercedes 300SL roadster, Rolls-Royce and Dodge, along with a souped-up Kawasaki motorcycle and a Chevy van loaded with a 200-gallon tank of gasoline.

"For one stunt," Bail says, "we had a Corvette cut in half, then put it back together and held by 'spring-loading' so that it was driveable."

Actor-stunt driver Whitey Hughes takes up the narrative:

"The risk factor was rather high. We went through a barricade at about 55 miles an hour, down a street excavation and up a dirt ramp.

"My passenger, a stuntman, pulled a lever that activated electric brakes on the rear wheels. The back of the car flipped up and landed upside down near us."

In another stunt, the van containing the huge tank of gasoline crashes into a fireworks factory. "The van drivers thought they would win by not having to make any stops," Bail says, "but they ran over a muffler that had fallen from a car and their tank was punctured.

"Gasoline starts leaking out and is ignited when a man throws a lighted cigar from his car window. The flames start chasing the van; the drivers panic and argue about getting off the road.

"They go against traffic, and to miss a car they smash into the fireworks factory. Everything explodes.

"For one second I want the audience to think the men were in the van when everything blew up, but then I have a quick cutaway of the guys diving—you don't know from where—onto the ground."

Bail tells how an unused section of the Glendale Freeway is used for another stunt:

"We had two actors arguing in a car on the home stretch to the Queen Mary, and one says, 'Let me show you what I can do.'

"He cuts against traffic, but a crew is repairing the center divider and the car goes up some lumber. It swings onto two wheels and cuts in and out of traffic for a mile and a half at 50 miles an hour.

"The car then rolls onto its top. Neither man inside is hurt. Safety belts and shoulder harnesses kept them safe. Nothing on the car was beefed up—there was no roll bar."

In another crash, a motorcyclist smashes into a billboard.

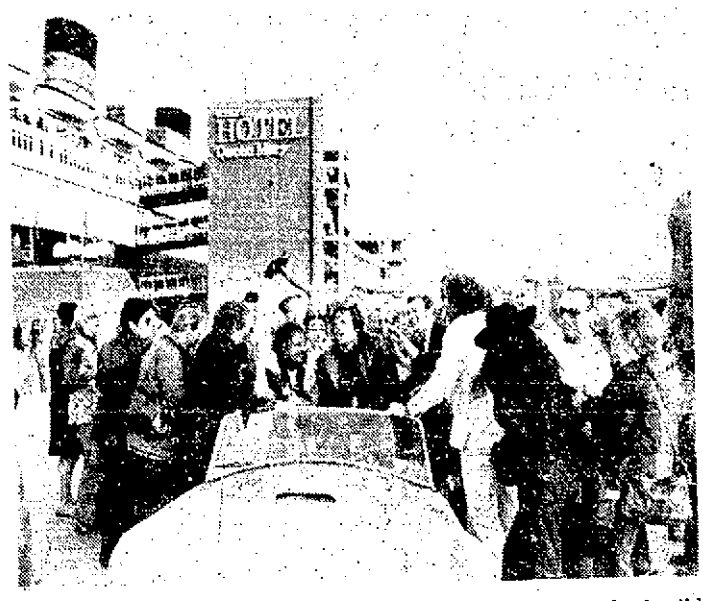

"It took a half day's shooting to set up the action," Bail says. "He was going about 45 miles an hour when he runs into a swarm of butterflies, loses his vision, then goes up and into the billboard.

"An unseen 200-foot-long cable snatches him off the bike, though he really seems to have been knocked off by the crash."

And in a scene at the Queen Mary, where the film crew built an outdoor restaurant beside the ship, there is another motorcycle stunt:

"This was a night shot," Bail says, "and we have the motorcycle sailing 160 feet through the air and landing in the water beside the Queen Mary."

Bail adds: "These stunts aren't made to be taken seriously."

BEDLAM AT QUEEN MARY finish line sets in at end of wild cross-country race that began in New York in "The Gumball Rally," new comedy-stunt film starring Michael Sarrazin.

SHIRLEY MacLAINE will return to the screen after a four-year absence to co-star with Anne Bancroft in 20th Century-Fox's "The Turning Point," about rivalry between long-time friends.

ALAN ARKIN will direct "Fire Sale," a Fox comedy to begin lensing at the studio and Southland locations Sept. 21.

A MUHAMMAD ALI look-alike teen-ager will be sought for Columbia Pictures' "The Greatest," based on the life of the boxing champion as scripted by Ring Lardner Jr.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Out of this year's experience you'll formulate basic principles differing from those you've set up thus far, as you now take new conditions into account, update standards for judging what to do and why. It's a very active year for change in relationships, perhaps relocation. Today's natives are original thinkers, don't disturb others with their private goals. Many are expert at managing cash.

Aries (March 21-April 19): You're ready for a quarrel with anybody. A sharp turn of circumstances provokes a flood of words, then requires cash to back you up. Neither borrow nor lend.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): This isn't the day to finalize transactions. Personal concerns build up, distract you from regular work. It's temporary: try to return to normal quickly.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Visualize an idealized version of current events, enjoy what's happening. Stay at home and clear up leftover details. Avoid excesses of any kind.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Unexpected expenses pop up. Don't incur debt needlessly. Once you pinpoint what you want to do about the situation, the going's much easier.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Determine to overcome faulty cooperation, jammed communications. Ponder what you say before lashing out at annoyance, especially when loved ones are the cause.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do no more than you must to meet business needs of the moment. Do it well. Play the role of observer for the time being, let others perform.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's enough just to get through today's incidents. Don't make any major decisions on what you know now. Listen, learn some clues to old mysteries.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Easy does it! Take care of your own people first and keep the peace in doing so. Take nothing for granted, neither facts nor intentions.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): To you, others seem slow; to others, you appear impatient. Find a sensible balance for a united front. Nothing is gained forcing legal issues.

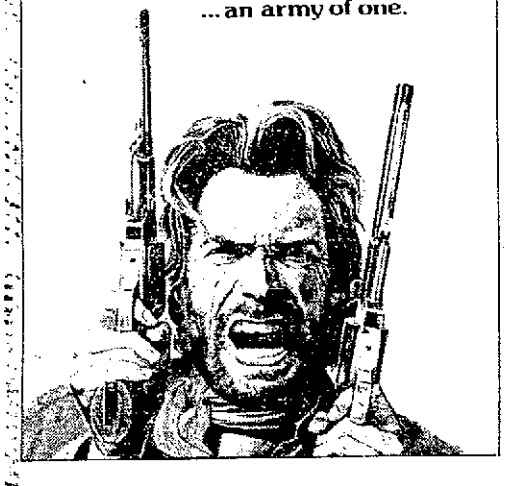

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stick with established plans. Stay away from friends' schemes that you can't understand. Those you care about aren't free to express themselves: wait.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Begin with assurance you can work out solutions eventually, then do what is within your reach. Today's most disturbing problems aren't terribly significant.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Concentrate on previous commitments. If you switch plans, notify people early. A few episodes precipitate painstaking rethinking of your whole program.

Patti Smith busy with new album

By LISA ROBINSON

In New York, Patti Smith has been busy rehearsing material for her second album. She took time out to perform one concert at the Central Park Schaefer Music Festival, then went into the Record Plant with producer Jack Douglas.

"I'm really excited about him," Patti told me. "Jack's associated with all this hard rock (Aerosmith, among others), and he's technically brilliant, but there's another side to him that no one knows about — he's really into jazz and poetry.

"Our last album had the heart and soul, but the technical side wasn't together. Jack wants us to have the same artistic freedom we had with John (Cale, Patti's first producer), but he'll help us get a better sound.

"He wants to show his different levels too. So we're going to put a little art on the notches of his gun."

New songs on Patti's album will include "Radio Ethiopia" (the title cut) — "I'll play lead noise on guitar on that one," she laughed — "Ain't It Strange," "Chiclets" and "Poppies."

As for performing, don't expect to see Patti Smith in huge places when she begins her fall tour attack. "I don't want our show to get bigger," she said. "I can't stand losing contact with an audience. I'd rather not perform." As an example of what she plans, part of Patti's fall tour will include a week's worth of shows (around Thanksgiving) at N.Y.'s 500-seat Bottom Line club.

"COULD YOU just see Keith Richard doing this?" Elton John mumbled to me after receiving a plaque from Philadelphia Mayor Frank Rizzo last week. In addition to the "key-to-the-city" bit, the mayor gave E.J. a miniature replica of the Liberty Bell, and E.J. gave the mayor a gold disc for "Philadelphia Freedom."

Following the ceremonies in the mayor's office, Elton went on to perform at the Spectrum to an audience that included his good friend Elizabeth Taylor. Elton ran into Liz in the elevator of the Sherry-Netherland Hotel earlier in the week and invited her to the show.

Liz arrived backstage at the Spectrum wearing a casual white T-shirt and trousers, perfect for a rock concert. And (no one was safe that day) she, too, quickly had an "I'm Nearly Famous" button pinned to her chest. After the show, Liz flew with Elton's entourage back to New York aboard the private Starship jet.

Three of the Jackson Five (Michael, Marlon and Randy) also saw that Spectrum show. "We're recording in Philly," Michael told me "with Gamble and Huff." It's their first album for Epic Records, and their first without brother Jermaine — who alone has remained on the Motown label.

Michael admitted to me that they missed Jermaine, said he didn't know if they would perform or record with him again, and quickly changed the subject.

An enthusiastic observer of Elton's show, Michael asked: "Why doesn't he do 'Honky Cat' or 'Daniel' anymore?" "How does he sell so many records?" and "Is he always onstage for 2½ hours?"

Woman is saved from waterfall

EAST GLACIER, Mont. (AP) — A summer hotel employe in Glacier National Park fell into a swiftly flowing creek and was rescued unconscious just above a 40-foot waterfall.

"When I hit that cold water, I just went into shock," Pamela Goering, 21, of Clarkston, Mich., said Saturday of the incident Wednesday. Henry Rubio, 21, of Los Angeles, pulled Miss Goering to safety, then carried her two miles for aid.

Julie Newmar's clothes keep coming off

NEW YORK—"You have a great proclivity for your skirt coming off," a friend remarked to tall, beautiful, shapely Julie Newmar.

Julie, one of our leading public figures, admitted the accuracy of the accusation. While here recreating the Gwen Verdon role of Lola in "Damn Yankees" at the North Stage Theater at Glen Cove, she was wearing a very delicate, see-through, flowered, cotton outfit, which had already attracted considerable attention because it exposed what somebody called "the most beautiful legs this side of Heaven."

"I was getting out of a cab," said Julie, reliving the moment the other afternoon at the Americana French Quarter, "When these little buttons came undone. I put my hand up to get the buttons, and my skirt came off."

She also had an accident on stage the other night that was mysterious, so she says.

"I was doing the mambo and my top came off," she recounted. "I don't know why. The top just came off, and I was exposed. Not totally.

JULIE NEWMAR
"I Was Exposed"

Everything, indeed, seems to happen to Julie Newmar. She chose on a recent day to make a phone call from the New York Athletic Club, which is notoriously masculine.

"I used to make calls from the back of the club, where they had the regular booths and you could sit down.

"I decided to go in the front of the club from Central Park South. I was totally clothed. As I entered, three guards in blue suits looking like Doberman pinschers with very serious, somber expressions came at me and said, 'You CAN'T come in here in that!'

"They looked me over completely, both up and down, and said, 'No!' With one fell swoop, they swept me out through the door.

Miss Newmar has had other adventurous moments like when she was doing "The Marriage-Go-Round" in Fort Lauderdale and suddenly asked, "Do you think it would be all right if I took all my clothes off in the bath-towel scene?" Everybody seemed to think it would be refreshing, and she went nude for four weeks. Nobody got indignant and she received raves.

Julie's in a new TV series, "Monster Squad," on NBC for children, somewhat reminiscent of the Cat Woman on Batman. She plays the worst witch in the West, Ultra Witch.

THE WEEKEND WINDUP ... Sophia Loren and Carlo Ponti invested in a big shopping center near Hartford, Conn. ... Phil Foster will be featured more next season on the "Laverne and Shirley" TV series. Phil says, "Some day they'll be calling me 'the middle-aged Fonzie.'

Rotund Peter Ustinov says he has no intention of dieting: "I had an ancestor in the 1700's who weighed much more than I, and he lived to be 108!"...Virginia Graham will do summer stock in a comedy, "Let's Hear It For Miss America!"...Alan Alda will star in the film "The Senator"; he helped write it.

TODAY'S BEST Laugh: A reader writes that she's glad some radio stations have quit playing rock music: "Now when I get static I know it's the radio, not the music."

WISH I'D said that: Kin Hubbard said it: "Honesty pays, but it don't seem to pay enough to suit some people."

REMEMBERED quote: "Worrying about whether you'll be remembered doesn't leave time to do anything memorable."

EARL'S PEARLS: It's a shame that Dean Martin missed all the Bicentennial excitement. But he didn't want to break up his New Year's Eve Party.

The Post Office is reporting a deficit—and can you imagine how much bigger it would be if they went to the expense of putting glue on the stamps? That's Earl, brother.

Gold medalist eyes Olympics

Water babies: her wave of future

By JANICE NELSON
Staff Writer

Olympic gold medalist Greta Andersen speaks of the games as one might of an old friend.

Relaxing by the pool as four instructors busily teach infants and toddlers to swim, she speaks frankly about America's chances of remaining successful without government sponsorship of athletes.

"I don't think we're going to be No. 1 any more," said Greta, who pioneered teaching babies to swim in 1954. "Now the Russians are taking children when they're 2 and 3 years old and putting them in schools where they can specialize in their particular sport while getting an education.

"CAN YOU imagine what it will be like in 7 to 10 years when these 2-year-olds can compete?"

So, on a private basis — and for minimal cost — Greta has begun in the same manner to groom the gold medalists of the future. The Tadpoles, whose pint-sized members can swim the length of the 20-yard pool using the breaststroke, are generally about 2 years old.

Greta is adamant about the good that comes of physical training at an early age: "Children who swim at an early age develop better hearts, lungs, coordination — and, the fact is, infants who swim, walk earlier."

Right now, she has eight 2-year-olds who can compete. "They can race and swim 25 yards — I don't say perfect, but they're learning the fundamentals of stroke techniques and racing strokes," she said.

"I really feel American parents are 100 per cent behind their children — they'll go through anything to get the best for their kids."

For that reason, instructors at her Los Alamitos swim school and health spa are extraordinarily well-qualified for the job of coaching the tiny team.

Stuart Carter, a New Zealander currently attending Long Beach State University, has taught swimming in three countries, coached the Australian Olympic swim team from 1968 to 1975 and is currently cooing and coaxing infants and tots into becoming their own best friends in the water.

With Carter is equally well qualified John Bainbridge, an Australian who similarly coached the down-under Olympic swimmers and holds two physical-education degrees from two countries.

Bainbridge, Carter and New Zealander Paul Anderson, who competed for Australia in the butterfly-stroke category, are currently pursuing their master's degrees at LBSU.

For those too young to remember Greta's greatness, don't think for a moment that her staff is more qualified than she. In the 1948 Olympics, she won both a gold and a silver medal. As an amateur, she won six European, eight Scandinavian and 34 Danish championships.

Groundwork is started on unusual undersea park

By DICK HOWLAND
Staff Writer

The groundwork for an undersea park — complete with nature trails, plaques identifying marine life and guided tours for divers and waders — has begun at Whites Point on the Palos Verdes Peninsula.

A volunteer organization of divers and marine scientists called Coastal Monitoring Systems is cooperating with the Los Angeles County Department of Parks and Recreation to launch this new concept in park development.

"The urchins and kelp beds offshore at Whites Point are so thick that divers often are separated from their partners in the growth, making it a perfect site for such a park," says Terry Lackey, director of education for Coastal Monitoring.

His organization has already installed underwater concrete blocks with markers describing the wildlife, and volunteer tour guide-divers are being recruited.

Lectures and wading tours of the tidal pools at Whites Point are offered to the public by the group on weekends.

Lackey said Coastal Monitoring Systems began seven years ago with backing from the Department of Fish and Game and the county Department of Parks and Recreation.

The group's first project was to direct volunteers who smashed thousands of sea urchins to help save diminishing kelp beds along the local coast that were being devoured by the urchins.

The beds were almost wiped out when urban sewage upset the ecological balance by providing nutrients for the natural enemies of kelp to increase in population, and the enemies nearly wiped out the kelp.

Dr. Wheeler North, Caltech professor of environmental sciences and a member of the oceanographic committee of Coastal Monitoring, began farming kelp beds to restore them to their former abundance.

His efforts and projects sponsored by the Department of Fish and Game to transplant kelp from Catalina Island have restored the beds along the Palos Verdes Peninsula from near extinction.

North is now studying the feasibility of a network of offshore kelp "plantations" to supply methane gas for fuel and livestock feed.

A 10,000-square-foot test reef is being readied at the Navy pier in Long Beach.

It will be towed to a point near San Clemente Island, where it is expected that kelp, one of nature's fastest growing plants, will produce fuel energy and feed for cattle and sheep that could support a city of 500,000 to 800,000 people.

Coastal Monitoring Systems is directing a research project that will collect data on how to protect the kelp along the Palos Verdes Peninsula from further ecological imbalances.

Tryouts for volunteer divers begin Saturday at the Ford Park pool in Bell Gardens at 5 p.m. Lackey said about 70 volunteers were needed.

They will be trained on how to place identification tags on urchins, how to use compasses and other skills needed for the project, which begins Aug. 21.

Certificates from the Professional Association of Diving Instructors will be awarded to graduates of the training course.

"We hope many of the volunteers will become interested in working as tour guides, data gatherers and trailblazers for the development of the underwater natural park," Lackey said.

SALES HIKE SEEN AS RESULT OF LAKEWOOD REMODELING

By AL MURRELL
Staff Writer

Plans are progressing rapidly on a multimillion-dollar project to enclose and remodel the mall at Lakewood Center — a move expected to increase sales at the Southland's oldest shopping center by at least 25 per cent.

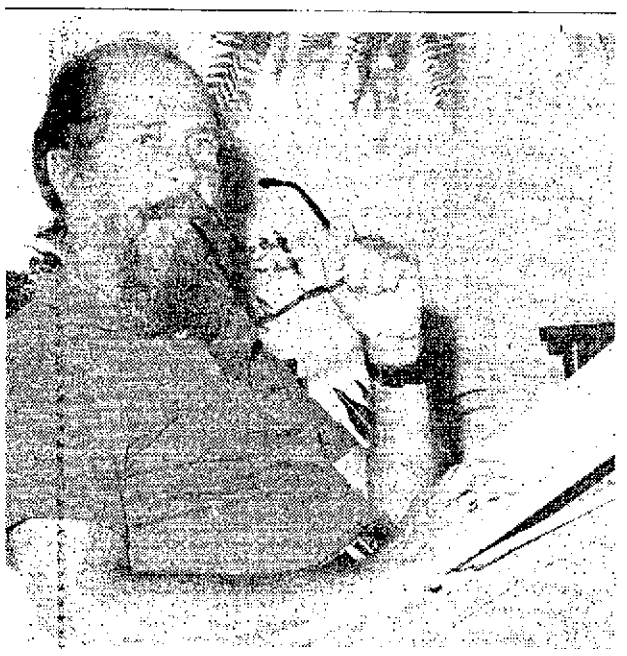

Claude "Skip" Keyzers, who manages the 2.2 million-square-foot center for Macerich Real Estate Co. of New York, says the firm expects to have construction plans ready to submit to the city Planning Department in October.

Barring unforeseen complications, the roof construction, expected to take about 10 months, will begin in January, Keyzers said.

He said the Macerich firm, which owns seven other malls and is about to close a deal on an eighth, conducted a survey of 42 other malls in the country which have been enclosed.

"Of those we studied, the average minimum increase in sales between the last year they were open and the first year they were closed was 25 per cent," Keyzers said.

L.B. church goes to market

Nonprofit organizations learn to sell to their consumers

By BRAD ALTMAN
Staff Writer

Members of the East Side Christian Church of Long Beach are no longer called the congregation — they're "consumers," and the Sunday morning sermons are "the product."

Those are the terms used by the church's professional marketing consultant.

A marketing consultant for a church?

If McDonald's can apply marketing principles to sell hamburgers, perhaps it follows that nonprofit organizations, such as churches, can use them to increase church attendance.

Rev. Alan Rose, East Side's youth adviser, said the specific problem was that "our 300-member congregation has not grown in years. We'll die without new members."

So the church brought in Donna Russell, a marketing major at Long Beach State University, one of the new breed of consultants who are applying marketing principles to nonprofit organizations.

Last spring she was a student in LBSU Prof. Bob Frye's course "Marketing for Nonprofit Organizations."

"My goal is to encourage young families to join," explained Mrs. Russell, a member of the church at 668 Obispo Ave. "I'm going after a new market by introducing a new product line—in this instance, Sunday evening sermons as an alternative to morning worship."

The church board of directors agreed with her that properly applied marketing principles could increase the size of the congregation. Subsequently, they approved a hike in the annual advertising budget from $250 to $2,000.

"I'm gratified by Donna's success," said Frye, 46, a marketing professor in the LBSU School of Business since 1967. "Applying marketing principles to nonprofit problems is a very young field, mainly recognized by academicians."

Frye contends that nonprofit organizations—such as churches, schools and government agencies, including police departments—will find an increasing need to market their services to the consumer public in the next decade.

"Contrary to what many people think, you can't give things away," Frye said. "Whether it's providing police protection or sweeping the streets, the nonprofit service has an attached price."

The tag isn't always in dollars.

"If you accept free medical aid, you may have to sit in a cold, cheerless place and suffer through the condescending attitudes of doctors and nurses.

"If you're on welfare, the price is going to the social-services department every week to pick up your check—the constant reminder that you're eating out of the public trough."

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

SOME MONTHS AGO, the readers of "People Talk" were introduced to Carl Pat Cassady, the renowned Cloverdale, Ind., artist and boyhood pal of the legendary World War II correspondent Ernie Pyle, the best friend G.I. Joe ever had.

Well, Carl Pat's back with us today, this time with a report on the July 3 ceremonies in Dana, Ind., in which Ernie's birthplace home became a state memorial.

"The event you and I have waited for for 30 years has taken place, and it was a day I'll never forget," said Carl Pat, whose portrait of Ernie is a prominent part of the memorial.

Dana is a small farm and rail community of 850 persons. It was busting at the seams July 3, with an estimated 7,000 persons lining Maple Street to watch the parade which culminated in the dedication.

The Bloomfield Post 196 American Legion color guard led the march, which included legionnaires from Dana and neighboring communities and antique cars. Roast beef and ham sandwiches sold for $1 each, corn on the cob 35 cents each and homemade peanut butter for $1 a cannister. If the citizens had a mind to, they could buy draft beer at an outdoors stand for 50 cents a cup.

Ed Heinke, a friend and former newspaper colleague of mine, was on hand to reminisce about Ernie. Ed, former city and assistant managing editor of the Indianapolis Times (which quit publishing in 1965), talked about Ernie dropping by the Times between journeys to cut up old touches and ask him out to Dana for some of his Aunt Mary's famous fried chicken. "It was damn good chicken, too," Heinke said.

I am, as was Ernie, an alumnus of the Indianapolis Times. I learned my trade under Ed Heinke and can recall the Pyle stories he used to tell — after the paper was put to bed, that is, for Heinke didn't wax nostalgic on company time. When you worked for Scripps-Howard you lifted that barge and toted that bale — and loved every minute of it. It was a survival school, and your continued employment testified that you were a survivor.

I knew the happy side of the Pyle legend, but I was unacquainted with the darker tones until I read the Indianapolis Star story Carl Pat Cassady sent along with his letter.

Richard E. (Dick) Hollander, now an editorial writer for Scripps-Howard in Washington, met Ernie when Pyle was 17 and a copy boy on the Washington Daily News. Hollander told reporters at the dedication ceremonies that Ernie might have had a "subconscious desire to be killed in battle."

Why? "Because he didn't want to outlive the war. He didn't feel there would be any life for him afterward."

It seems that Ernie's marriage was beyond redemption. He and the former Jerry Siebolds had previously been divorced only to be remarried in 1943 (by proxy while Pyle was in North Africa).

Whatever Ernie Pyle wanted from fate, the issue was settled on April 18, 1945, in the battle of Ie Shima, an island near Okinawa. A sniper's bullet wrote "30" to his life but not to his legend, which just keeps on growing with the years.

All the townspeople were at the July 3 parade in Dana, elbow-contesting with several thousand visitors for good viewing space along the line of march. But I don't think Ernie Pyle's spirit was marching along that day. In all likelihood, his spirit was sitting on the front steps of the house where he was born, writing notes on the parade and wondering about the marchers' bunions.

That's the way an infantryman would think about parades, and Ernie Pyle belonged to infantry heart and soul and aching feet.

Ernie wrote:

"Anybody who has been in war and wants to go back is a plain fool in my books. I'm going simply because there is a war on and I'm part of it."

Ernie was a modest man, ever in awe of the dirty, foot-slogging G.I. who carries the weight of battle and the bulk of its pain. He would have been proud of the memorialization of his old home and shared it with his buddies — squads, platoons, companies, battalions, regiments and divisions.

His house is theirs. And the house stands in Dana, a state's gift to the spirit of an uncommon man with the common touch.

"WELL, IT'S NOT EXACTLY PIE IN THE SKY..."

Editorial

But will it play?

The Grits-and-Fritz show, or "Something for Everyone," has ended its New York run and soon will take to the road to dazzle the masses.

The vehicle—featuring Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter and his running mate, Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota—is carefully engineered and runs on ball bearings greased with peanut oil. But whether it can be a bandwagon carrying the Democrats to the White House in November is another matter.

THE VOTERS are the ultimate critics of the Democrats' new road show, and they figure to be a tougher, more demanding audience than the party delegates who packed Madison Square Garden with togetherness and cheered every line in the carefully-crafted script. The voters, unlike the delegates, won't be bedazzled by form; they'll look for substance.

They won't find much.

Carter successfully campaigned for the presidential nomination with a mixture of bromides, platitudes and vague promises to get America moving again. It was so much meringue, the kind of meringue that adorns pie-in-the-sky.

Carter's anointment in New York was as predictable as the acceptance speech he gave. The speech was the set piece of most presidential candidates. It threw up its share of bogeymen. It proposed its share of glittering goals: freedom from crime, better education, a bountiful economy, fairer taxes, more employment, open government, responsive leadership, vigor and vision. Everybody's for those goals.

But, as in the campaign, Carter offered few details of what he would do to implement such goals. He was long on rhetoric, short on specifics. In the most general terms he promised:

—To be a strong protector of the consumer.

—To reorganize the administrative branch.

—To give the country a national health program.

—To push for universal voter registration.

In short, he's going to provide less government with bigger government. And he's going to deliver in four years—"You can depend on that."

To further confuse the issue, Carter tapped as his running mate a liberal senator, a proponent of big government, a man who advocates a broadening of the establishment Carter professes to deplore.

Just what tax reform is proposed? Carter doesn't say.

Just what national health program is proposed? Carter doesn't say.

How far can the government go in consumer protection without intruding on everybody's business? Carter doesn't say.

Nor does he say how universal voter registration can be achieved without opening the process to giant fraud.

Governmental reorganization and its cost? How many more employes needed? Carter just doesn't say.

The voters will want answers to these questions. And they'll be as demanding of the Republican ticket when it's chosen next month.

THERE CAN BE, as President Ford has said, a clear-cut choice offered the people in November. But only if both parties define their stands with clarity. The Democrats in New York didn't.

Jimmy Carter's vision of the presidency, as presently enunciated, is nothing more than a glimpse of confusion caught in a fun-house mirror. He's got four months to put things in sharp focus.

Thus far the Carter presidential campaign has been built on hocus-pocus and sleight-of-hand. His philosophy is an illusion—now you see it, now you don't. He'd best get his act together before he takes it on the road after Labor Day. The voters will expect reality, not generality, from him. Reality is where they live.

What does Minnesota have?

NEW YORK—Here we go with Minnesota again. Sen. Walter F. "Fritz" Mondale of the Gopher State was chosen by Gov. Jimmy Carter to be his vice-presidential running-mate in the 1976 national political campaign.

Mondale thus takes a high place in the extraordinary number of national political leaders who have been spawned by the land of ten thousand lakes.

In terms of population, economic impact and over-all political muscle, Minnesota is no particular great shakes. Beauty it has and sturdy inhabitants and a neat balance between agricultural and industrial interests.

Minnesota is a nice place to visit and a good place in which to live. I say that because some years ago, I was a resident of the state and a Minnesota taxpayer and if my work took me elsewhere, I still consider myself at least an honorary gradute of the state of Minnesota.

DURING MY LIFETIME, both in and out of Minnesota, there has never been a time when some Minnesotan was not a dominant figure on the national political stage. One of my earliest foreign policy recollections is of Frank Kellogg of Minnesota, the Nobel Peace Prize laureate.

At the same time, Pierce Butler of Minnesota was a loud voice on the Supreme Court.

Almost in faster order than one could keep up with them came Floyd Olson, a flamboyant Minnesota governor whose populist convictions made him a national figure and had death not struck him down, who knows how far he might have gone?

From the shadow of Olson's death came the young Republican, Harold Stassen, to take over the governorship and to become a spearhead and spokesman for the national young and liberal Republicans. If his career dwindled into something pathetic, it must still be remembered that at one time he cut a large and important swath in the politics of this nation.

Walter T. Ridder

Washington Editor
For Ridder Publications

When Stassen started to fade, along came Hubert H. Humphrey who ultimately was vice president of the United States, missed the presidency by an eyelash and remains today a formidable force in the affairs of the country.

Now it's the turn of Mondale. No matter what happens in this November's election he has been pitchforked into a position of top leadership within the Democratic party. He is young enough to wonder where next he might go.

Forgotten by most people this year is that another Minnesotan is running for president. He is former Sen. Eugene McCarthy who has always brought a fresh, if sometimes inexplicable, approach to American politics. It was McCarthy who sparked the dissenters to the Vietnam war in 1968 and it was he who led the movement which ultimately forced President Lyndon B. Johnson to abandon the search for another presidential term. In light of subsequent events, McCarthy's name will forever be in the histories of our times.

MINNESOTA HAS TWO men on the Supreme Court of the United States, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Associate Justice Harry A. Blackmun, an unusual circumstance to say the least.

Nor does Minnesota's seemingly endless stream of actual or potential national political leaders end there. An up and coming star might well be its present Democratic governor, Wendell Anderson, who made a favorable and telling impression at this convention for his performance as chairman of the platform committee. Democratic leaders and politicians are already eyeing him with interest.

Just why all this is so, I do not know. I only know that Minnesota produces volatile and able political leaders in numbers far beyond its population or importance in the national scheme of things.

Now, if I had only stayed in Minnesota...

Carter's abortion gamble

NEW YORK—Jimmy Carter responded to a rare flash of criticism at his carefully controlled Democratic national convention with an astounding—and dangerous—concession: a flat promise to attempt limiting all federal funds for abortions.

Thus, Carter's campaign for the Democratic nomination ended in triumph as it began in obscurity: shading his position on the emotion-charged abortion question in ways that anger both sides and trouble his own supporters. The significance is not so much what it portends for the abortion controversy as what it reveals about the new Democratic nominee.

AFTER GIVING pro-life (anti-abortion) forces in Iowa the impression early this year that he might favor some form of constitutional amendment against abortions, Carter later retreated to this position: anti-abortion but also anti-constitutional amendment. When the Democratic platform also declared opposition to the constitutional amendment (with the reluctant acquiescence of Carter agents), pressure on Carter from pro-life forces—especially the Roman Catholic hierarchy—resumed.

The pressure was most intense here in the Missouri delegation, where Catholics and other pro-lifers urged Carter to disavow the platform plank or risk losing the state. Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton of Missouri, himself a Catholic, unsuccessfully sought Carter's personal appearance before his delegation but had to settle for a telephone conversation with the nominee.

As relayed to his fellow Missourians by Eagleton, Carter said he opposes abortion but stands by the platform. Nothing new there. What was new was a promise by Carter to push federal legislation that would "restrict, insofar as possible," the use of federal facilities or funds for the purposes of abortion. That would seriously threaten spending of 45 to 55 million dollars in federal Medicaid matching funds each year for 250,000 to 300,000 abortions—appeasing pro-life forces but outraging feminists.

Inside Report

Robert Novak

Rowland Evans

THERE IS NO RECORD of Carter ever having taken this stand before. In answering a Women Today questionnaire March 15, Carter declared: "I do not like the idea of government money being spent on abortions." But he promised no legislative efforts and acknowledged that the courts require abortion spending by Medicaid.

Thus, Carter has churned up more muddy waters on abortion, raising these inevitable questions: Did he take the easy way out to meet a momentary challenge? or will he truly risk feminist wrath to fulfill his new promise? The answers carry implications transcending abortions.

An unexpected appeal here by Jimmy Carter to nine governors for "all the help I can get" in the campaign was a dramatic turnabout from his boast three weeks earlier to House Democratic leaders that he planned to win all 50 states.

Carter's appeal to the governors, led by Florida's Gov. Reubin Askew (formerly a sharp critic of Carter), came Wednsday when he summoned them for talks on the vice-presidential selection and the fall campaign.

"JIMMY FINALLY did what he should have done before," one highly influential governor told us. "He asked for our help and he told us we were essential to his campaign." Carter also warned the governors—who needed no warning—that beating President Ford (or Ronald Reagan) is looking tougher every day, no matter what the polls show.

That was a welcome contrast to Carter's private meeting in Washington with House Democratic leaders. He astonished them with what one called "a show of arrogance" in predicting a major sweep and indicating that the Democratic congressmen seeking reelection needed his help more than he needed theirs.

Carter's Wednesday session with the governors, however late, cleared an atmosphere being poisoned with recrimination from his former colleagues. They had regarded him as a loner as governor of Georgia and were beginning to feel beneath his notice at the convention in New York.

Humphrey knew when to quit

NEW YORK—Changing of the guard in politics is accomplished in many ways.

It can be abrupt or unpleasant, with the old order banished to the sidelines in disgrace or despair or defeat.

It can happen in full view on the field of battle or stealthily in smoke-filled rooms.

It can leave a bitter residue or it can be an inspiring turning point leading to renewal and a new era.

For the Democratic party, it took place last week in Madison Square Garden before millions of television viewers and thousands of delegates to the party's national convention.

IT WAS ALL WRAPPED up in the words and gestures of two speeches delivered by a man who has been at the vortex of eight Democratic conventions since 1948, Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota.

On Tuesday, Humphrey received a thunderous and emotional ovation as he gave what just as easily could have served as an acceptance speech for the winning candidate for the presidential nomination. After four unsuccessful tries for the presidency, it was Humphrey's farewell address. He and the crowd knew it and that awareness heightened the moment and the poignancy for both.

On Thursday, Humphrey was back at the podium again, this time to nominate for the vice-presidency his long-time friend and protege, Sen. Walter Mondale.

It was the changing of the guard, a moment brought on by forces neither man could control but forces that were shaped as much by Humphrey as by anyone.

"This has been a banner year for me, the greatest gift of my life," Humphrey said the following morning in an interview in his hotel suite. "I am at the top of the public opinion polls. I've got what a man like me needs—friendship, respect, affection.

"I'M GOING BACK to Minnesota as happy as can be, knowing we've got a great ticket and knowing that my close friend Fritz Mondale will be the next vice-president. I have truly enjoyed what happened here and have no remorse."

No regrets, no sense of loss knowing there will be no more opportunities to become President Humphrey?

"I don't need it," said Humphrey. "I want to live. I've never been happier in the Senate than the past two years. never felt more the sense of accomplishment."

The speculation that his efforts brought about Mondale's selection by Jimmy Carter obviously pleased Humphrey but he rejects it. He says he was certain that given time and enough exposure to Mondale, Carter would eventually come to realize that Mondale was the best selection.

William Broom

National Bureau Chief

But Humphrey was available for repeated consultation with Mondale and with Carter and Charles Kirbo, his aide in charge of researching the vice presidential candidates.

Humphrey conceded that early in June "certain forces were set in motion," activist, liberal, labor, black and Jewish elements in the party who were not enthusiastic about Carter's candidacy. Humphrey believes those groups are now wholeheartedly committed to the ticket.

'What's the good word?'

During the process, Carter and his aides seemed most interested in whether the men they were considering were team players, compatible with Carter, able to advocate and execute effectively policies they might not totally approve. And whether he could be a good president.

"I told them anybody who can live with me, like Fritz Mondale has, and still be cooperative and still be his own man was somebody extraordinary, somebody hard to find," said Humphrey.

The Minnesota delegation was urged to talk up Mondale to other delegates at the convention, and Humphrey believes that also contributed to Carter's selection of him.

"The real reason Fritz got it was that he fits in with Carter," said Humphrey. "He, like Carter, is rather new on the national scene, and because they are new, they have good vibes."

It could have been a different convention, different but for the chemistry and character of Hubert Humphrey.

After the Pennsylvania primary went to Carter, the party's traditional activist groups stepped up pressure on him to run. Joseph Crangle, the New York state political leader, said he had 500 delegates committed to Humphrey. But Humphrey declined.

"IF I HAD COME in here with 400 or 500 delegates, there would have been a knockdown, pitched battle, very divisive, and I knew it," said Humphrey. "It would have been of no help to me in the election, and I knew that.

"The press and the media would have called me an old man and a spoiler."

And so for Humphrey, the final arena will be the Senate and not the White House. He heads the Joint Economic Committee and in reality if not in title, runs the Foreign Relations Committee. He has epochal legislation heading toward passage, and he prides himself that the past two years have been the most fruitful in two tours of duty in the Senate.

The Senate and Mondale in the vice presidency are his consolation.

"It was time for some younger people, some new people," Humphrey said.

Letters to the editor

Rights denied

The highest court in the land just ruled that I, a father, have no rights in protecting the life of my unborn child. They ruled that the unborn child can be killed against my wishes.

That same court also ruled that any minor female child of ours can have an abortion performed with arrangements made between her and the state and neither of them are required to inform or involve us, her parents, in that decision.

I am outraged by the flagrant intrusion into my rights as a husband and as a father — rights now taken away from me by King Supreme Court.

I urge all parents who object to such state interference into parental rights and marriage agreements join in the fight against the erosion of our natural rights.

Ripped off again

As a resident of the Wrigley district for the past 30 years, I was most happy when they founded the Wrigley District Association. It has many pluses to be proud of and one is the beautification of Pacific Avenue. Or is it?

As I walk down the sidewalk of Pacific Avenue, I cannot believe what I see. Such sloppy workmanship. I realize it's supposed to have rough texture as they spread rock salt on it for this purpose. But after that it is suposed to be finished smooth but it is not. The brickwork is terrible. There are cracks in it and some of it is missing where the new cement adjoins the old as it wasn't properly finished off. In some places there are missing bricks for someone to trip over. There are saw marks where the workmen forgot to recess the concrete.

We are paying for a new job, not a patch job.

To verify this all one needs to do is take a stroll.

Let's thank police

It's about time the citizens of California began to appreciate the law enforcement officers that work to protect us night and day, seven days a week.

Let us not criticize and put down police officers. Remember, these men put their lives on the line day in and day out to protect the law-abiding citizen. For us to constantly complain about these fine, dedicated men is downright rude, inconsiderate and uncalled for.

City police, sheriff's officers and the Highway Patrol do a very good job of keeping California's cities, towns, freeways and highways safe for people.

Is it not time that we begin thanking these men and give them the respect they have earned but don't get?

An error compounded

Our city officials are real experts. First, they demoralize the whole city by purchasing an outside attraction, the Queen Mary, and spending millions of dollars to improve it while ignoring our own natural beaches.

Now they are doing it again. An outside attraction is going to be our police chief. Why has the city again looked away from local talent? Is it because our own force cannot produce an honest, efficient leader?

I believe this is the opinion of many here in Long Beach. This, in effect, is what they (city officials) have told us.

Friends again

The Bicentennial is now behind us. Memories of events and highlights will linger on. The most spectacular was a visit from Queen Elizabeth of England, presenting us with a new Liberty Bell, and the gala at the White House.

Being born in England and having left there 63 years ago, it's nice to know Britain and the United States are on such friendly terms. I trust all English-speaking countries will hold together in any emergency or crisis.

Don't ignore show

I find it hard to believe that the marvelous local Bicentennial production of "Patriots and Petticoats" has been ignored by the Independent, Press-Telegram staff.

Surely, since you so beautifully covered the writing of this show by two Long Beach residents, you'd want to let your readers know that they can now attend the show. It is being performed this weekend at Marshall Junior High School.

Shame on you for not promoting and supporting our talented Long Beach writers.

Ask the voters

If the members of the City Council are planning on asking for any kind of a tax increase to finish paying for an art museum, they never asked us (the voters) if we wanted it in the first place. They can save time and taxpayers' money — my answer is no, no, no.

No to that and any other of their luxury projects. Clean up your city government before you have the nerve to ask any of us for a dime more in tax money.

I'm staying within my budget and not asking for any help and I'd like the council to do the same.

Dancing lives

As a long-time participant (32 years) in recreational International Folk dancing, I am delighted that your reporter found it alive and well in Long Beach.

Folk dancing has been alive in Long Beach since 1945 with at present four clubs engaged in this form of exercise and socializing. This is probably the largest number of clubs per capita of any city in the U.S.

As with any good thing, there is always room for one more. I welcome the new dance center and will look in some time and, perhaps, kick up my heels a little.

Oiling up America's voters

PARIS—The Democratic party seemed to evade the main point when its platform surveyed energy. Not that platforms are important guides to future policy or even important in mustering votes; but they supposedly serve at least as guidelines of future intent.

Jimmy Carter is pledged simply to "continue control of crude oil and natural gas prices; seek alternative sources of power; minimize dependence on nuclear fuel," and so forth. Not a word about restricting high consumption of petroleum products, which has forced the United States into greater dependence on imports from foreign oil exporters, above all the powerful Arab cartel.

THE PLATFORM is mealy-mouthed when it calls simultaneously for reducing the Pentagon's budget by $15 billion to $17 billion while maintaining "a strong military and nuclear deterrence." A similar cake-having while cake-eating attitude is less clearly spelled out on oil; but it is there.

Right now the American economy is staging an impressive comeback from its first postwar depression while the Soviet economy is having a fit of the staggers. But we tend to forget that the USSR has become the world's leading producer of both oil and coal.

Saudi Arabia possesses the largest proven petroleum reserves (estimated in 1974 at 132 billion barrels) but even then the Soviet Union came second with 75 billion barrels. The United States was fifth on that list with 35 billion barrels, less than half of what is available to our principal rival.

International oil prices, while unsatisfactory to several of the OPEC exporters, are considered somewhat above the sensible level — that level where it is cheaper to produce substitute energy from coal, nuclear or solar power.

But to "minimize" dependence on nuclear fuel — the reverse of what France seeks — appears illogical and economically confusing. For some time the United States has been trying to get into a position of maximizing the use of nuclear energy; seemingly, the idea would be discarded in the likely event of a Carter victory.

C. L. Sulzberger

New York Times News Service

IT WOULD BE comforting to think that the vast Alaskan petroleum pool will soon be piped to the rest of the United States. Nevertheless, it requires a "floor price" policy to insure that all potential American oil resources are developed. Henry Kissinger saw this crucial point.

Three years ago—before the Yom Kippur war and zooming Arab oil prices — Ambassador James E. Akins, then U.S envoy to Saudi Arabia, wrote: "To look simply at the world's oil reserves and conclude they are sufficient to meet the world's needs can no longer be acceptable. We could allow ourselves such fatuities as long as we had large spare oil production capacity, and while our overseas imports are small. We can do so no longer."

But all signs now indicate the industrial democracies will not scale down their reliance on imported petroleum over the next decade. The United States is becoming more—not less—dependent on oil imports, especially from the Arabs.

According to OECD statistics, in 1958 the United States imported 57.3 million tons, representing 5.6 per cent of its energy supply, whereas in 1974 the figures had respectively risen to 300 million tons and 17.5 per cent. Simply stated, our dependence on imported petroleum had more than tripled; the upward rate has since accelerated.

If Jimmy Carter leads the next U.S. administration, he would be wise to take decisive action on energy matters to guarantee that both the American economy and the American defensive posture can be sustained. Neither should be subjected to the conceivable threat of sudden boycott, encouraged by our political adversaries.

WHY CANNOT PETROLEUM consumption be limited while nuclear energy and other power sources are souped up? Is it not desirable to encourage automobile manufacturers to search more intensely for an internal combustion engine that provides more thrust and less wastage per gallon of gas than the present ridiculously low proportion?

And should not Congress be sternly reminded that there are too many cars on the road? Since no one will voluntarily sacrifice his own vehicle, it is high time to levy stiff taxes on second, third and fourth autos in each family (unless it can be proven these are not pleasure vehicles but essential).

This is a quintessentially important problem even if, for the moment, the economy again is climbing the ladder of success. The time to ask a nation to help itself is when things get better, not when it is at the bottom of a slough.

Just throw the money and hope

NEW YORK—Not long ago, vital people who run things discovered a new wisdom: "You can't sovle problems by throwing money at them."

Tell a government man you are desperate because you don't know where your next meal is coming from and he replies, "You can't solve problems by throwing money at them."

Show a political thinker a million people with no place to live and he replies, "You can't solve problems by throwing money at them."

FORD'S PEOPLE in Washington will tell you at the drop of a "Buddy, can you spare a dime?" that you can't solve problems by throwing money at them, and Reagan is in full agreement. I'm not sure about Carter, but he talks suspiciously like a closet believer in the futility of money-throwing every time city bankruptcies come under discussion.

In any case, all three of them have been throwing money in million-dollar wads at the White House job problem this summer, which suggests that vital people are not so sold on the uselessness of throwing money as they would have us believe.

In my experience, the vital people of the world never hesitate to throw money at the tiniest hint of a problem, provided it is their problem that is getting the money thrown at it. It is when somebody else's problem is on the receiving end of the thrown money that the futility of the exercise become manifest to them.

AS A CLASS these vital opponents of money-throwing often become churlish if someone takes them seriously and balks at throwing money. A friend told me recently of being warned by Ford's government that he was going to have very severe problems indeed unless he threw a large sum of money at its tax agents forthwith.

Russell Baker

New York Times News Service

My friend declined to come across. Citing the wisdom of the President's own men, he pointed out that it would be useless to throw money at his tax problem. "You can't solve problems by throwing money at them," he reminded the government.

Two weeks later he was handed a subpoena and threatened with indictment on charges of acting on government pieties.

Not long ago I was discussing broken-down subways with a utility-company philosopher. He ridiculed my suggestion that federal money for subway repair might help get the labor force to work on time and thereby increase production.

"You can't solve problems by throwing money at them," he pointed out. I was glad to hear it. His own company had a problem in the rising cost of oil needed to make electricity. It had been trying to solve this problem by constantly increasing my electricity bill to pay its rising oil costs.

I told him I would immediately stop paying the increase now that I realized you can't solve problems by throwing money at them. He said anybody who didn't throw the money would very quickly have his electricity cut off.

"You misunderstood me," he explained in language much more opaque than his doctored quotation suggests. "You can't solve your problems by throwing our money at them, but you can solve our problems by throwing your money at them." This probably sums up the real wisdom tucked away inside the new wisdom like an olive buried in a baloney.

I have relationships with many vital people, all of whom have problems. Very few, if any, would put up long with my refusal to throw money at these problems.

DEPARTMENT-STORE executives whose wives are nagging them for Venetian vacations deliver monthly computerized demands for money to be thrown at the problem. Children and landlords seem to have nothing in life but problems, and no way of solving them except by throwing my money at them.

Some months in some families all the money has been thrown at other peoples' problems before it has ever been earned, which means you have to skulk around looking for somebody to throw some at your own problems, which is why there are so many people in the stick-up trade and so many governments in the tax business.

Of course you can solve problems by throwing money at them. And the vital people who say you can't, do it all the time with problems ranging from securing peace from a wife's lawyer to securing the nation's borders from enemy attack. Throwing money doesn't always eliminate the problem, to be sure, but in most cases it at least keeps it from becoming insufferable.

Deep thoughts while shaving

ST. PAUL, Minn.—I will be forever in the debt of the Gillette Company. Its "Blue Blade," I felt, was the start of manhood. That was a good blade. It took that fuzz I had been staring at down to a smooth surface that, flory be, became abrasive the next day. That is, one could feel the stubble of rubbing the tongue across the upper lip. It is old stuff now, of course, and insecurity vanished ages ago.

My best razor was a Gillette, one selling for about $10 or $12. It had heft. There was confidence. And then the improvements began. The good razor was lost, somewhere. It became a matter of frustration; which one of many models of Gillette, or Schick, for that matter, was a person to use? And which blade?

THERE ARE GILLETTE "Super Stainless" blades, "Thin Blades," "Trac II," "Platinum Plus" and "Super Blue Blades."

None of them does what the old "Blue Blade" use to do: that is, shave you without fuss or worry. What else does a person want? A comfortable, clean shave, accomplished without any anxiety caused by the thought there may be a superior blade about, or a superior razor.

All right. We still have Blue Blades, and we have Techmatics, Trac II Adjustable, the Twinjector. And now something known as "Good News!", a disposable razor. It has the same shape as the Trac II. But we now have something else to throw away.

WE ASK AGAIN what does a person want in a razor?

Certainly, not a guessing game.

You want something first of all that will not pull, cut or scratch and something that has the lasting qualities of the Wilkinson blade before Gillette bought out this old English company.

The Trac II is just fair. I am not good with my hands, and flunked model airplane building. It is simply too much in the morning, when my reading glasses are on the bedstand, and I am in the bathroom, to change the blades. I know. I know. I confess to idiocy. Many of you have already noticed this, anyway, so I am rather shameless on this point.

There seem to be any numbers of safety razors, my preference, on the market, and none is worth a damn. The Wall Street Journal published a story a couple of months ago detailing the testing that goes on at Gillette, so you have to wonder if it is some disability on your part or, possibly, in the testing process.

Many of you don't read The Wall Street Journal. This article of concern detailed Gillette's razor testing programs. Gillette employes are encouraged to participate. Gillette executives participate, I gather, or else. The tests involve the use of every shaving product the company puts out and the use of razors until they begin to rip and tear. At times, the brave are given razors used by others. To test what? I don't know.

William G. Sumner

Ridder News Service

INTERESTINGLY, the best razor to come along this decade was a heavy, German-made diagonal razor, Pomco available in many men's clothing stores. The best blade found is the Schick Plus Platinum.

You see what splendid services are offered here. Not one word about the political convention. Just human stuff. And I'll bear that this may be sexist, and I answer in this manner: if you are a militant feminist, go ahead and shave. It is a splendid way to start the day, given, as noted, the right equipment. And then smack into a crisis.

No Yardley's after shave, anyplace.

What is happening? Has all sanity and decency departed? Our sense of civil behavior? A friend who also uses Yardley's went from store to store the other day in an unsuccessful quest. He was asked, incredibly, one should think, if he wouldn't care to try a "musk" aftershave. As I understand the story, he had to slap cold water from a drinking fountain on his face, such was the shock of being asked to try "musk".

Musk. And disposable blades. Wonderful in a society that has discarded wool and cotton for knits made of petroleum.

She holds 13 world records and was said to be the first woman to successfully compete against men, which resulted in her winning prize money in both men's and women's divisions.

Already, Greta says, she has several promising tots. Most unusual is 14-month-old Scottie McClaskey. In a few months he will probably be ready to join the Tadpole program. He is said to be the youngest persons to ever complete the requirements for a Red Cross beginning swimmer card.

To earn the card, he had to fulfill these requirements in sequence: jumping into the deep water, leveling off, swimming 15 yards, turning and swimming back to a starting point, swimming halfway back, turning over on his back, resting in a floating position for 30 seconds, turning from back to front and continuing to swim back to the starting point.

"He swims, he dives, he breathes — he does everything," bragged Greta.

Two-year-old Kati Arnett has been taking lessons since she was 3 months old, and she can swim five lengths of the pool "like nothing!"

Brandon Jessie, 2, son of Los Angeles Rams wide receiver Ron Jessie, is another talented youngster. He can swim 20 yards with an overarm stroke. "This is very unusual for a 2-year-old. Most children can't do it before 4 years," Greta said.

A little red-haired fireball named Eric Vaughn, also 2, dives off the board into 12 feet of water, swims to the bottom "and sits there . . . He's a natural," Greta boasts.

Married for 10 years, the Danish swimming star has no children, although she confesses that she loves them: "I've devoted my life to everyone else's children."

Greta dislikes the "winning ethic in this country" when it involves children.

"This is not the Little League," interjected Carter, who was standing nearby. "We place the emphasis on enjoyment — not pressuring for advancement."

Most nonprofit organizations are production-oriented, manufacturing goods they figure the public needs but unconcerned with ways to present their services, Frye said.

Examples, he said, are two "lemons" dropped on a disapproving public: the Santa Monica Freeway's Diamond Lanes and the supersonic transport (SST). If marketed correctly, both could have been successful, he believes.

"Caltrans (California Department of Transportation) butchered the Diamond Lane project. I happen to know they have marketing consultants who didn't even know the Diamond Lane project existed until two weeks before the proposal was released to the public."

Frye said Caltrans officials failed to "survey consumer attitudes extensively" and instead "sat back in their armchairs and guessed people's reactions.

"In public transit, marketing is recognized as the No. 1 problem. We've got to get people out of automobiles, but so far the public perceives the alternatives as lousy."

He said it never occurred to the government that people "don't want sonic booms over Kansas—until it was too late. If the marketer had known from the beginning that people would react angrily to sonic booms, he would have known how to market the SST."

Marketing in the nonprofit sector is at the stage where commercial marketing was before World War II, Frye says:

"They still need to develop ways to sell what they produce. Fortunately, the American mood is changing. We're not going to continue sustaining a throwaway economy."

REMODELING OF MALL

He said the stores in the newly enclosed malls increased their sales from 25 per cent to 47 per cent "just in the first year and we expect to do at least that well here."

Keyzers said the project probably would cost about $8 million, which is substantially more than it cost to build the Butler Brothers store that gave birth to the 164-acre center in November 1951.

He said the prime reason for enclosing Lakewood Center was to increase business during the evening hours. "We just aren't getting our share of the night-time business," he said.

Keyzers said Westminster Mall did nearly one-third of its business between 5 and 9:30 p.m., and "I think it's probably the same at Cerritos," which he said was the No. 1 competition for Lakewood Center.

He said that sales at Lakewood Center in 1975 totaled approximately $118 million and that this year's sales were slightly ahead of last year's pace.

The city of Lakewood received about $1.2 million for its share of state sales taxes from the center, and a 25 per cent increase in sales would create a like increase in tax revenue to the city.

In addition, the increase in market value of the shopping center, which now is approximately $1 billion, would generate an increase in both city and county property-tax revenues.

Keyzers said the Macerich firm, which is moving its corporate headquarters from New York to Santa Monica next month, was not planning to seek any governmental redevelopment funds for the project.

"We're going to do it with private capital because it's not worth the price of going through the red tape to get the redevelopment money," he said.

In addition to building a roof over the mall, the project plans also call for resurfacing the mall floor and the center parking lot, adding modern sculptures, replacing all of the planter boxes and construction of 50,000 to 60,000 square feet of new shops east of the May Co.

Services Monday for teacher Elsie Oakden

Services for Elsie Parret Oakden, 62, a teacher in the Long Beach Unified School District for 30 years, will be Monday at 11 a.m. at Dilday Family Chapel, 1250 Pacific Ave., Long Beach.

Mrs. Oakden, of 519 Cedar Ave., Long Beach, died Friday at Long Beach Memorial Hospital of cancer.

She was born in Fresno, received her A.B. degree from Peru Teachers College in Nebraska and did graduate work at USC, UCLA and Long Beach State University.

She taught at Longfellow and Grant elementary schools in Long Beach until her retirement in 1974

Donald Ashley, assistant superintendent of the district, said her co-workers considered her "an extremely professional teacher whose enthusiasm never wavered."

She is survived by her husband, John; brothers, Edwin, Glenn and Harold Parret, all of Fresno; and sisters, Alta Barse of Orange, Mary Harmon of Eugene, Ore., and Mildred Schroeder of Northridge.

Lackey, 30, of 3712 Orange Ave., Long Beach, is a civilian marine electrician who installs equipment ranging from toasters to computers on ships at the Long Beach Naval Shipyard. He is working on his bachelors degree in biology at Long Beach State University and plans on a career in marine biology.

He took up diving six years ago. He and his wife, Linda, recently lived in Guam for five months, where he earned a living by diving at night for six to eight hours for fish to sell at the market.

Coastal Monitoring was launched by Paul Meister, a Los Angeles timepiece electrician, with help from Dennis Plaunt, a worker for the county Department of Parks and Recreation.

Sometimes membership in the organization has dipped to two or three persons, but now fluctuates from between 40 and 100 persons, according to Lackey.

POLICE BEAT

Boy hurt in fall from cliff

A Rolling Hills Estates boy fell 65 feet from a cliff at Marineland Saturday and was rescued by a Coast Guard helicopter, Lomita sheriff's deputies reported.

Bill Masters, 14, of 4844 Elmdale Drive, was climbing on the cliff by himself about 1 p.m. when he slipped and landed at the base of the cliff. He was rushed to Torrance Memorial Hospital, where he was in guarded condition with severe cuts.

L.B. man robbed of wallet

A Long Beach man was robbed of his wallet containing $80 Saturday after a young woman hit him on the head with a bottle while a man held him from behind, Long Beach police said.

Edward C. Morton, 42, of 4901 Clair Del Ave., told officers he was robbed shortly before 3 a.m. as he walked toward a service station rest room near Pacific Coast Highway and Cherry Avenue.

The assailant, a woman in her early 20s, approached him from behind and demanded his wallet, Morton said. When he ingnored the demand and continued walking, the woman kicked him in the groin. Then her accomplice grabbed Morton and the woman struck him repeatedly on the head with the bottle, officers said.

The victim was taken to St. Mary Medical Center, where he was treated for cuts on the forehead and cheek.

Officers Gerald Fullerton and Vernon Whybrew found Morton's wallet lying on the front lawn of a home near the service station.

Bandit robs hotel of $200

A robber armed with an automatic pistol took more than $200 from a Long Beach hotel Saturday, police said.

A clerk at the Holiday Inn, 2640 Lakewood Blvd., told officers a man about 45 approached the desk, pointed the gun in his face and demanded cash. The robber fled after ordering clerk Lancing Brandon to lie face down on the floor.

Purse with $13 stolen at home

Addy Maye Dial reported that burglars entered her home at 1404 E. 56th St. through the unlocked front door and took her purse containing $13, Long Beach police said.

The British Columbia nobody knows

By BOB SANDERS
Staff Writer

If you want to see the British Columbia nobody knows, take a turn across Canada's Yellowhead Route 16 from Prince Rupert, located on Kaien Island at the start of the inner waterway to Alaska, to Prince George, some 454 miles, or 726 Canadaian kilometers, to the east.

Of course one of the major problems with such a tour is getting to Prince Rupert in the first place, since it is some 946 miles, or 1,514 kilometers (Canada is in the process of converting to the metric system and by September, 1977, all road distances and speed limits will be in kilometers) north of Vancouver, which is some two and a half jet hours north of Long Beach.

But, if you can make it, it is certainly worth it.

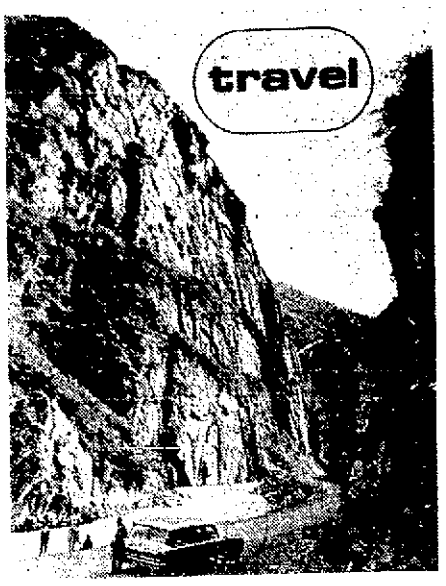

On a recent one-week tour, the problem was neatly solved when we flew CP Air to Vancouver, and then by smaller plane on to the tiny town of Sansprit on the beautifully wooded Queen Charlotte Islands.

After a 40-minute "flight—see" over the islands, during which none of us could see anything because the double-paned windows on the DeHavilland Otter were all fogged up, we landed at Prince Rupert to start our trip by motorcoach.

ROUTE 16 begins by winding along the scenic Skeena River through some of the most beautiful countryside imaginable to the pretty little (16,000 population) town of Terrace.

If you visit Terrace be sure to take at least one meal at the picturesque Bavarian Inn and catch at least one of the routines of "Deenee," the exotic dancer at the pub in the Lakelse Motor Hotel. Deenee also sings in the hotel's cabaret later in the evening.

If you're interested in lava beds there's an hour and a half (one-way) side trip on a logging road north of the town, which our guide insisted was very interesting. If you're not interested in lava beds, skip it.

FROM HAZELTON the route follows the Bulkley River through such exotically named towns as Smithers and Vanderhoof. Another 41-mile side trip took us to Stuart Lake, where old Fort St. James is being restored.

Working from pictures taken of the fort in the 1890s and the remains of several of the actual buildings, the governments of Canada and British Columbia are cooperating in restoring the Hudson's Bay Company's early outpost to its 1890 heyday.

How they are going about it is the main attraction at this time.

After spending one night in the town of Prince George our bus turned south off Highway 16 (which continues on eastward through Jasper National Park and out of British Columbia) to visit Quesnel (pronounced Kwenel with the accent on the second syllable) and the restored goldrush city of Barkerville.

BARKERVILLE was named for Billy Barker, the man who struck gold there in August, 1862, and started the great Cariboo gold rush.

The city has been restored in authentic fashion, even to the signs in the windows of several residences reading, "Private Residence". A good lunch but no booze can be had at the uniquely named Wake Up Jake Saloon in the heart of town.

Highlight of the year in Barkerville is the annual Billy Barker Days festival in mid-July, when the town attempts to turn back the clock to the gold rush days with a staggering schedule of parades, rodeos, baseball and golf tournaments, gold pan throwing and beard growing contests, raft races and other such amusements.

All in all, British Columbia's Route 16 has a great deal to offer — if you have time to savor and enjoy it. Plan on at least two weeks to do the portion from Prince Rupert to Prince George.

Baja air service from L.B.

With AeroMexico no longer serving passengers from Los Angeles and Tijuana to Mulege and Loreto in Baja California, Baja Airlines, a Long Beach firm, becomes the only scheduled carrier flying to the two popular resorts on Mexico's Sea of Cortez.

Departing from Long Beach Airport, the flights also pick up vacation-bound tourists at San Diego's Lindbergh Field, flying five times weekly to many off-beat destinations in Baja California and Northern Sonora.

Known as the nation's only international commuter airline, Baja has headquarters at the Long Beach Airport terminal, 4100 Donald Douglas Drive, which features public auto parking at minimal daily rates.

Discover America by plane, train and bus

By BILL MacKAY
Ridder News Service

If the nation's far-flung travel industry has its way, this will be the summer you and your family "discover America" — or at least a portion of it.

Discover America is the Bicentennial year theme by which airlines, bus companies, Amtrak, travel agencies, resort areas, state tourist bureaus — seemingly everyone involved in transporting, housing, feeding and entertaining tourists — are trying to woo what they hope will be a record number of vacationers into getting up and going somewhere.

Package tours abound. A person can walk out of almost any travel agency bearing an armload of free folders, brochures and booklets picturing in full color vacation attractions in every corner of the land — from San Francisco's Chinatown, Yellowstone's Old Faithful and the ruins of the Alamo, to the colorful gardens of Mobile, Civil War battlefields in Pennsylvania and a solitary lighthouse on the rugged coast of Maine.

Amtrak and major bus lines are making it possible to tour the country by rail or highway for one flat payment. Until Sept. 16, Amtrak is selling 14-day ($250), 21-day ($325) and 30-day ($400) tickets, good for unlimited travel.

Continental Trailways, Greyhound and other bus companies are promoting one-month ($250) and two-month ($350) unlimited travel tickets that can be used interchangibly on the participating lines.

AIR TRAVELERS can take advantage of Bicentennial fares, discounted 30 per cent. To get the reduced rate, however, travelers must make their round-trip reservations at least 14 days in advance, pay for and pick up their tickets at least 10 days in advance and make their return flight not less than seven or more than 30 days from the date of departure.

Airlines are saving a certain number of Bicentennial fare seats on each flight, so it is important to make reservations well in advance, the earlier the better.

Getting information about where to go and what it can cost can be a king-size undertaking. Travel agencies can be a big help. Their business is travel — where to go, how to get there and what it costs. Travel representatives know about the many package deals, group tours and other special vacation plans that can save you money.

A travel representative's services cost the traveler nothing. The agency receives its money from commissions paid by airlines, bus lines, Amtrak, hotels, resorts, rent-a-car agencies and others.

TRY ONE of the off-the-beaten-path national parks. The U.S. National Park Service would like to see vacationers using hundreds of little-known parks whose names do not have the notoriety of Yosemite, Yellowstone, Grand Canyon and Glacier.

A booklet issued by the park service, "Visit a Lesser-Used Park," lists 132 parks. It can be had for 70 cents by writing Consumer Information Center, Dept. 96, Pueblo, Colo. 81099.

And you can get information about the big, famous parks by writing the superintendent of each: Glacier, West Glacier, Mont. 59936; Yellowstone, Wyo. 82190; Grand Teton, Moose, Wyo. 83012; Grand Canyon, Ariz. 86023; and Carlsbad Caverns, 3225 National Parks Highway, Carlsbad, N.M. 88220.

Almost all states have tourist information bureaus where one can write for free information. The public library has a complete list.

TROPICAL BEACHES HAVE HAZARDS

Little known national park

By PHIL GRUIS
Ridder News Service

It's a land of pink and green, deep canyons and soaring monoliths, darting lizards, gnarled pinon and juniper trees and extravagant cactus blossoms.

It's a land where bobcats prowl the rocky draws and a handful of bison browse. A land where little water flows and relatively few tourists seem to venture.

Colorado National Monument, located just west of Grand Junction in west central Colorado, was first the home of dinosaurs, then prehistoric basketmakers, and later the Ute Indians before it became the domain of tourists.

Today, most visitors motor along the 22-mile Rim Rock Drive, looking at the weather-hewn rock against the checkered background of fertile Grand Valley and the Book Cliffs to the north.

Tumultuous geological history is on display, and park naturalists will tell you about it in nightly talks near the campground and information center.

They'll tell you that as the billion-year-old (Precambrain) crystalline rocks gradually weathered away, the area was covered with stream and lake deposits and shifting sand dunes.

They'll tell you of the upthrust of the Rocky Mountains, of the cutting away of soft sandstone by the elements, and of the towering monoliths topped with harder stone which linger still in the deep canyons.

And they'll tell that the weathering process is still at work, fashioning a new and changing face for the monument.

But the best way to experience the area is on foot. A few carefully maintained trails drop sharply from Rim Rock Drive down into the canyons where the rush of traffic can't be heard.

San Francisco

Summer in the sun: "We are going to be at Dorado Beach in Puerto Rico. Late August. What about weather? How to dress?"

That was a VERY dressy layout when I was there. I mean Laurance Rockefeller's Dorado Beach Hotel.

You aren't ALLOWED on the tennis courts unless you wear WHITE tennis clothes. Jacket AND tie in the dining room. Expensive. Grand food.

The weather: Sorry to say you are in the middle of the Caribbean rainy season. But the rain comes in bunches. Like somebody emptying buckets for a half hour — usually afternoons.

Then it stops. You get plenty of sun.

It's also the season for mosquitoes and the tiny biting no-see-ums. Carry a spray can of repellent. Mornings and evenings are their biting times. They prefer the ankles.

Your room will have a spray can for murdering them. Before bedtime, spray around the edges of the ceiling. Particularly in the upper folds of the window drapes.

"There's a jellyfish that stings you in Hawaii?"

It's transpaprent with a purple tint. I've seen one — only once. I've only known ONE person who got stung. That was at another Rockefeller place — the Mauna Kea Beach Hotel on the Big Island.

Divers rub on a paste of meat tenderizer. They say the same thing that's in papaya draws the stinging substance out.

Hawaiians rub on mashed raw papaya itself. There's always papaya some place nearby in the islands.

Some mosquitos in Hawaii near the beaches but not many. Repellent keeps them off. The Chinese papa-mama stores sell coils of punk that burn slowly. The smoke or smell seems to keep them away.

In French Canada, my boy who was 8 began to raise fearful bites. I sprayed the poor child for three days while he got more and more welts. Then I found out he had chickenpox.

"Being divorced with two small children, I'd like to take them on a warm summer vacation that would still give me some social life."

The beach at Waikiki is the best place in my opinion. It's wall-to-wall high-rise, true. But that puts more traffic on the beach. It's a big singles beach.

And there's something casual about beach meetings. They don't signify anything more than conversation and you can walk away from it if you like.

Or you can work it up to a lunch. A noon drink at the outdoor beach bar at the Royal Hawaiian gives you a full circle view of the loners.

"We charged some glass in Italy to a credit card (Diners). The glass has never arrived. We write and the shop doesn't answer. Now what do we do?"

If you haven't paid Diners Club yet, don't. I'm sure they can recover even if they've paid the shop. If you HAVE paid Diners, write "Customer Service." See if they'll get you some action.

Center offers aid, hope

A COLORFUL TILE sculptured mural covers a full wall in the student lounge area at Braille Institute in Los Angeles. Student Agnes Aslanian "reads" one part of story the mural tells. Its story is one of hope.

Think of the things you do every day without even thinking. Dialing a telephone, for example. Or counting money. Or pouring yourself a glass of milk.

Now try doing these same things blindfolded.

Pretty difficult, isn't it?

As a sighted person, of course, you always have the option of taking the blindfold off.

Others aren't so lucky. Their sight loss is real and permanent and their choice is to learn to function despite their handicap or remain forever dependent.

"Our role is helping people overcome dependence," said Braille Institute spokeswoman Dorothy Coleman. "From the moment a person first comes here we encourage him or her to become self-sufficient.

"The first steps towards independence are never easy," Mrs. Coleman emphasized. "But with help our students find they can do things they never thought they could do. They find it's possible to be independent."

A 57-year-old community service organization, Braille Institute has over the years developed programs designed to ease the trauma of the first steps towards independence.

BLIND STUDENTS learn to make beds and fix meals again, learn to walk unassisted with the use of a white cane, learn to communicate via Braille and touch typing.

Over the years Braille Institute has also attempted to create a physical environment to encourage the visually handicapped in their journey to independence. That effort is paying off as Braille Institute's new Los Angeles center becomes a reality.

"The architects who worked on our Los Angeles quarters lived under blindfolds for several days in order to experience first-hand the stimuli which affect those with sight loss," Mrs. Coleman said. "They knew, for example, how important sound is to the visually handicapped and how a person with sight loss might orient himself by what he feels under his feet.

"Their knowledge was put to use in the design of the new facility. As a result, I think we've got a center here that is not only pleasing to the sighted world but that is a tremendous boost to those who suffer sight loss."

The new buildings, located along the 700 block of North Vermont Avenue, are part of a five-phase construction program which began in 1968. Phase three of the program, the Sight Center, was completed in May. Other construction, completed in 1970 and 1974 respectively, house the Braille Institute Press and library and the Institute's education program. Phases four and five will convert an outdated auditorium into additional classroom space and will permit the creation of a garden for visually handicapped students to enjoy between classes and activities.

"Our old quarters were pretty dismal," said Mrs. Coleman, referring to the series of remodeled 50-year-old storefronts which have been torn down make room for the new center. "The passageways connecting the buildings were narrow and dark and it was difficult for many of our people to get around.

"The design of our new quarters takes into account the fact that visually handicapped people often need more room to move in. And there's plenty of light, natural light whenever possible."

TO THE UNITIATED, an unusual and seemingly extraneous feature of the new Braille center is the architects' use of color in decorating the interior. Why bother with color when most of those who use the center can't appreciate it?

According to Mrs. Coleman, this attitude is one of the many misconceptions the sighted world has about blindness.

"Almost 90 per cent of the legally blind have some perception of light and dark and can pick up some color, especially orange. The use of light and dark colors on the walls and floors can aid a blind person in determining where he is.

"The fountain is another thing that helps the visually handicapped orient themselves to their location," said Mrs. Coleman during a tour of the student lounge area. "To us, a fountain is just a pleasant touch, something nice to listen to. To someone who has lost his sight,

INSTRUCTION IN a variety of musical instruments is offered at the Braille Institute. The Institute also loans instruments to students and has soundproofed music rooms where they can practice between lessons.

At this point in time, cliches gain immortality

By JIM GALLAGHER
Knight News Service

In this day and age, when honor is being paid to the 1,001 forces that have shaped American life and made this nation great, Lawrence Paros is beating the drum for an unsung hero, the Great American Cliche.

"Without cliches," Paros declared, "Americans never could have blazed a trail across a rugged continent. There never would have been a House Divided, a Union Dissolved.

"Cliches stood with us in our darkest hours, during the deepest throes of the Depression. If it weren't for cliches, how could we have had a chicken in every pot?

"Cliches established us as the bastion of democracy, the hope of the Free World. They took us to the far-flung corners of the globe, but they always brought our boys home. Without cliches, we never would have been able to purge the nation's sores and bind the nation's wounds. And, of course, cliches always have provided the fresh, new, dynamic leadership that has enabled America to get on the move and make this nation work again."

In our personal lives, Paros continued, "cliches see us through thick and thin. They're always there in the crunch. They're a person's best friend — they used to be just a man's best friend. And they tide you through the trials of adolescence. They'll bring you joy and solace in the twilight of your years. The Great American Cliche — an idea whose time has come."

Paros, 42, is the author of the new book entitled — what else? — "The Great American Cliche" (Workman Publishing Co., $3.95). It's a compendium of all the trite little sayings that have become a part and parcel of American life.

ARRANGED INTO such categories as "America Comes of Age" and "America Comes Clean and Stays Healthy," the cliches are cleverly illustrated by the most familiar pictures you've ever seen. Paros even has included a photo of Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) ("the ultimate cliche of an American politician," he explained) sitting next to and thoroughly dwarfed by a giant, stuffed Snoopy.

"Ordinarily you can't judge a book by its cover," Paros said, "but this one is different."

On it are an American flag, a little woman and mom's apple pie a la mode. Paros even has supplied his own reviews, which include "A book with a message," "The definitive study," and, "If you can read only one book, read this one."

A former college teacher — "I've labored in the vineyards of education to these many years" — Paros said the idea for the book "just came to me one day like a bolt out of the blue." If it sells like hot cakes, he added, grinning from ear to ear, he stands to "clean up and make a bundle."

According to Paros, there are several types of cliches:

— Old maxims like "A stitch in time saves nine," which "capture a very difficult idea and convey it precisely in an imaginative and creative way." As time goes by, however, they become so commonplace that people no longer pay attention to the thought behind them.

— Tired metaphors, like "Getting down to brass tacks." Many started out as moving phrases in literature ("Parting is such sweet sorrow"), but they've long since become corny and lost their impact.

— Snipets from commercials that have slipped into the language, like "Good to the last drop" and "the real thing."

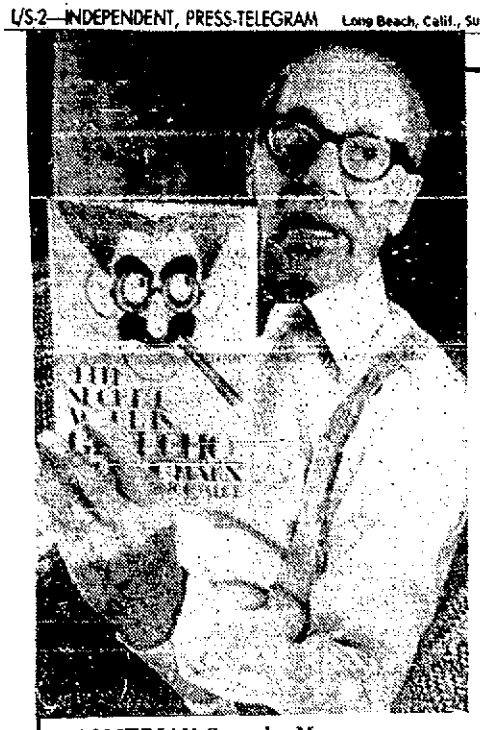

— Phrases and expressions from specialized fields, like "the letter of the law" and "a whole new ball game."

— Everyday sayings like "I gave at the office" or "Keep the faith, baby."

— "Weasel words," meant not to convey information but to conceal it, to confuse and mislead people. The Vietnam War supplied lots of these, Paros said: "Winding down the war," "the light at the end of the tunnel," "We had to destroy the village to save it," and the Green Beret phrase, "termination with extreme prejudice," which means to kill someone.

Glad you asked that!

COMEDIAN Groucho Marx — one question was a stumper.

THE LATE Winston Churchill — not a happy teen-ager.

VETERAN actor Van Johnson — pendulum returning to family films in his opinion.

"Kojak ain't no hero," Telly Savalas says, reverting to the slang of his youth on the teeming streets of New York's East Side. "He don't like to run up the stairs and chase the bad guy. He's going to approach violence and he's going to use his intelligence. He's going to use his cunning in order to avoid an ugly, violent situation. As a last resort, he's going to use his fists or a weapon. I like that. That kind of responsibility I understand.

"I don't like 'heroes' even when they represent the good side. Kojak is a guy, 'Hey, man, you know, let's try to avoid it.' He'll walk away twice. Maybe not three times. But Telly, will too. I don't like heroes. I don't like guys who are quick — and I don't like portrayals that kids are quick to emulate.

"When I got into the series," Telly continues, "I didn't think that television needed another super cop. I thought they needed a guy, though, who knew the name of the little people, who would kick a hooker in the fanny and send her home instead of lock her up. Just tell the truth. That documentary approach, I think, is what made Kojak a success. His acceptance with law enforcement officers all over the world leads me to believe that he is a true representative of law enforcement everywhere.

"I kiss my brother. I kiss anybody. I say: 'Here, I love you. Okay? We've had tragic experiences together. Here, we've reached a mature stage in our life. Let's kiss and reestablish with a physical gesture, at least, that we love each other.' Can't do it with a handshake. Some people can — I can't . . .

"I have an uncle who's been a psychiatrist for 50 years. Once he was head of the psychiatric division of Bellevue. He told me the only defense he ever had against the logic of madness was love! I'm going to write, direct and star in a movie about a psychiatrist, specifically my uncle the psychiatrist," he told Jeanne Wolf. "Without the use of vulgarity, without any shock appeal, I'm going to make a movie like 'The Exorcist' look like 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.'"

With all his success and fame, is Telly an insecure man? No. He's not insecure, just realistic. "Don't depend on anything," is his credo. "Don't secure the future, just play with the present. Because life has a way of changing everything all around. And be prepared for that!"

Q: Was "Professor" Irwin Corey kidding about the 600-pound woman who lost more than 500 pounds on a diet? — Marilyn Friedman, Miami Beach, Fla.

A: Yes. What the kooky comic said, straightfaced, was: "I know a woman who dropped from 600 down to 80 pounds. Including the coffin they carried her off in!"

Q: What kind of teen-ager was Winston Churchill? — M.L.W., Milwaukee.

A: "In retrospect," he once said, "those years formed not only the least agreeable, but the only barren and unhappy period of my life ... A time of discomfort, restrictions, worries and purposeless monotony."

Q: What does the former "boy next door," Van Johnson, think about Hollywood's return to the filming of love stories? — Antoinette S., Springfield, Mass.

A: Veteran Van's view makes sense: "The pendulum had to swing back sooner or later to the good old-fashioned love story, the good old musical," he says. "I think people are getting awfully tired of those bare behinds and those four-letter words."

Q: Didn't actress Susan George write and record a song based on her broken romance with singer Jack Jones? — Ms. Cathy Bowlen, Pittsburgh.

A: Yes, "Save Me for a Rainy Day." "I thought about Jack and me as I wrote it," Susan recalls. "It was such a happy time, I wanted to be with him always." But, though the flame has flickered, it hasn't burned out. "Perhaps," she told a reporter, "we will go back together. There hasn't been anyone since we parted." When asked why she hadn't made any films lately, Miss George explained: "I'm waiting for a role that will put me in pretty clothes. In the last 10 films I've made, I've either been nude, pregnant or raped. I was beginning to develop such a complex I was afraid to go out of the house alone."

Q: Has Groucho Marx ever revealed which question on his long-running quiz show ("You Bet Your Life") he repeated most frequently? — Bob Strong, Brooklyn.

A: Yes. The question he must have asked a hundred times was: "Who's buried in Grant's Tomb?" The correct answer is nobody's buried in Grant's Tomb. People are not buried in tombs — at least not in the sense of being planted six feet under. They are entombed above ground!

ACTOR Telly Savalas — waxes eloquent about Kojak series and his role in it.

ZANY COMIC Irwin Corey — setting record straight on "fat" joke.

Scant praise for summer rash of new movies

rex reed

Vacation time is near, the kids are home from school, folks are heading for the resorts, the Bicentennial is in progress, crowds are occupied with other leisure pursuits and less in need of a break from dull routine. It's the worst time imaginable for a flood of new movies.

But Hollywood is releasing them anyway, in a desperate attempt to fumble for the nation's attention in the summer heat. This is going to be a terrible summer for movies, but if you're trapped in the urban traffic or watching the sewage pile up on the American beaches, you might be interested in some of the new movies fighting for attention:

"Buffalo Bill and the Indians" is the latest product from the factory of Robert Altman, a director who turns out movies faster than gerbils procreate. I haven't been much of an Altman fan, but I found a great deal to admire in this rowdy, Wild West show that re-creates beautifully, with sober attention and detail, a time and a place that formed a national conscience.

Altman has more on his mind than a remake of "Annie Get Your Gun," although this movie about the same characters is often just as entertaining, even without the Irving Berlin songs and Betty Hutton. He uses the show business conceit of the Wild West show to illustrate the ways in which the American public has always been fed a pack of lies instead of badly needed truths about the events that shaped our history.

"America's National Family" is what Buffalo Bill's show called itself. Altman then proceeds to show us what that family was like.

Just as we've fallen for the conditioned lies of our politicians (sugar placebos that led to Vietnam, Watergate and the current chaos that causes many to feel repulsed by the Bicentennial and laugh cynically at the formalities of the forthcoming Presidential election), we've also fallen like a load of bricks for the lies handed down by show business.

BUFFALO BILL Cody is revealed as a drunken old imbecile who spouted meaningless homilies like, "The last thing a man wants to do is what he does." The movie is filled with such riddles, passing as philosophy from the cracker barrel, and they sound alarmingly like the stuff we've been hearing for the past 20 years from our politicians.

Also, Cody is a phony, a total fraud, a womanizer and a lecher, and a profane, foul-mouthed bigot — but as everyone knows, he's the total opposite of Cody. He's a family man, a kind and decent citizen, the pillar of his community, a beloved husband and father, a carrier of torches for liberal causes, a champion of the underprivileged, a man who votes liberal and even wrote campaign speeches for Eugene McCarthy.

filled with preening vanity in public, afraid of birds in private. He was the product of press agents and the dime-novel biographer who invented him and then turned him into a national hero.

I am reasonably sure Cody was the bogus hypocrite Altman and his co-screenwriter Alan Rudolph have made him seem in this movie, but then along comes Paul Newman in a white wig to play the role.

Newman is something of a national hero as well,

Newman wants to broaden his horizons by playing anti-heroes the way Hollywood's newcomers are winning new fans playing maniacs. He's a fine actor, but we are always aware he's acting. It almost wrecks the picture.

The Wild West show was the forgery that massaged the ego of a lot of money-grubbing phonies and perpetuated the spreading of lies about how the West was won. Along comes Sitting Bull, who rarely speaks but tells the history of courage and truth with the lines in his face.

Annie Oakley's conscience is a rare show of humanity at a time when rudeness and stupidity were interpreted as manly perception, but Sitting Bull is mainly used in the show as a further attempt to promote racism and fabricate cheap show business lies about the supremacy of the white man in the Indian campaigns.

Sitting Bull won't lie down and play dead. It almost drives Cody to a nervous breakdown. In the end, there's a fantasy meeting between the dead Indian and the still-victorious star Cody in which Newman tells the truth about what happened for the benefit of the movie audience.

The scene comes too late and deadens the movie while simultaneously assuming the pretentious reach of Shaw's final confrontation between the Dauphin and the ghost of Joan of Arc.

Altman doesn't seem to know how to end the movie, so it just fades off into more shooting and stampeding displays of cowboys and Indians. But the message is clear and so is the warning. Something of the truth has been stripped away from the myths that sabotaged it through the years.

"Buffalo Bill and the Indians" is a very untidy film — the sky is yellow, the people are yellow, the ground is yellow, the actors all look like they're suffering from malaria, the whole thing is too long — yet it has an impact. Burt Lancaster, Geraldine Chaplin, Joel Grey, Kevin McCarthy, Harvey Keitel are all fine as the people who either created the monster or helped shaped his legend for the falsified history books.

Altman has made a different kind of movie and handed us a new, complicated way of looking at movies in general. His films don't always work, but when they do, they last longer than the lies they expose and the consciences they haunt.

PAUL NEWMAN is Buffalo Bill Cody in Robert Altman's new movie about the Wild West, which is one of the summer films reviewed by Rex Reed.

"LOGAN'S RUN" takes place in the 23rd century, where the world is hermetically sealed in a plastic pleasure dome where computers tell time, birth babies, control the weather and keep the peace. There's only one catch. Everyone dies at the age of 30.

Michael York plays a policeman who wants to live beyond 30, so he tries to escape. Chased by X-ray guns through underground pipelines, tunnels, aquariums and frozen cold storage grottoes, he finally emerges to find himself in Washington, D. C., where the Lincoln Memorial is covered with vines and the only man left in the world is Peter Ustinov, an ancient hermit who talks like Mr. Magoo and roams the ruins of the U.S. Senate with a population of howling cats.

"Logan's Run" is long on special effects and short on logic, and it isn't helped by wooden performances. But there are enough futuristic space suits, robots and laser beams to keep even the most demanding science fiction fans happy.

It isn't clear at the end, when the citizens of the future meet the remnants of the past, if history will repeat itself, but I did spot one extra in the crowd who looked alarmingly like Richard Nixon.

"THE BIG BUS" is the latest in Hollywood's suicidal attempt to parody its own movies. "Murder By Death" was a parody, or spoof, of detective haunted house movies. "Blazing Saddles" was a sendup of westerns. "The Big Bus" is a parody of disaster flicks like "The Hindenburg," "The Poseidon Adventure" and "Airport."

It's not a very good parody, either. Movie stars in all the seats is no longer enough.

At that moment

Done...

Who thought of it first is beyond knowing. It had been the dream of so many so long: a railroad stretching across the land from sea to sea; a continent at last united; a nation's destiny made truly manifest with a bond of steel. With the Civil War ended, the dream could become a promise.

Starting from Sacramento, Calif., the Central Pacific, with a labor force of 6,000 Chinese immigrants, pushed eastward through the white-crowned Sierras, the parched desert. Starting from Omaha, Neb., the Union Pacific with its force of adventurous, brawling Irishmen, pushed westward across the boundless prairies, the torturous Rockies. After five years of great striving, of sweating and cursing and dying, the tracks met...

Monday, May 10, 1869, is bright and chilly at a place in the high wilderness north of Great Salt Lake designated Promontory Point, Utah. A skim of ice covers puddles and a stiff wind tears at a small American flag atop a telegraph pole near a gap in the tracks where the last two rails will be placed. Nearby, 14 tent saloons advertise potables with names as lusty as their kick — Red Cloud, Blue Run, Red Jacket. Business is brisk. A few settlers straggle in on horseback. Three companies of U.S. Infantry, en route to San Francisco, show up with a band. All is ready.

Just before noon, shrill whistles, one from the east, one from the west, announce that the trains are approaching: on the western track, the Central Pacific's locomotive, the Jupiter, with its funnel stack; on the eastern track, the Union Pacific's locomotive No. 119. They stop. A polished laurel tie is put in place with holes pre-drilled to receive two spikes, one of California gold, the other of Nevada silver. The silver spike is fixed so that when it is tapped in place it will close a telegraph circuit and a single word will flash across wires from coast to coast: "Done."

A team of Irish railhands swings one rail across the waiting ties; a team of Chinese, in clean blue jackets, swings the other. They slam iron spikes in place to hold the rails to the ties — all except one, the laurel tie. From the western train, Central Pacific director Leland Stanford strides forward with a silver-plated sledge hammer; from the eastern train steps Union Pacific vice president Thomas C. Durant. Both make brief speeches. A minister offers a prayer. Stanford and Durant stand over the laurel tie, smile, take up their sledges and drive home the silver and the gold spikes. Done.

After the spike driving ceremony, a photographer, Andrew J. Russell, asked the two engineers of the railroads to step out front and shake hands. Samuel S. Montague of the Central Pacific and Grenville M. Dodge of the Union Pacific posed, hands clasped, and a moment in history was frozen on Russell's fragile glass negative. After the photo, champagne flowed, along with the Red Jacket and Blue Run, and inevitably, souvenir hunters carved up no fewer than six railroad ties for keepsake slivers. The laurel tie, along with the ceremonial spikes, had been safely removed.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Bicentennial year goes on. And on. And on.

SAW PAUL CHASTAIN the other day. Paul has several titles on several Bicentennial Committees, locally and in Los Angeles. I asked him if he was glad it (the Bicentennial) was all over. He informed me in no uncertain terms that the celebration has just begun. In fact, it will probably go on until 1988 (or was it '89?)

He must have been right because the Assistance League chose a Bicentennial theme for its annual Medallion Tea honoring the debutantes of 1976.

The girls, daughters and granddaughters of League members, were presented with engraved gold

carolyn mcdowell

medallions by their mothers in a setting addorned with white stock, blue bachelor buttons and red carnations.

Nancy Lough, Mother-Deb chairlady, introduced the girls and their mothers to guests at League House.

Mothers and their daughters were Barbara Bettison and Cynthia Ann, Gayle Harris and Lynn Brandom, Kathy Cleveland and Bobette, Dorothy Kayajanian and Linda, Melva Miller and Melissa, Lou Palmer and Sandra and Gay Steuber and Tonya Jo.

Betty Wulfsberg was in charge of tea arrangements. Her helpers were Claire Ludlum, Pat Lynch, Jane McFadden, Pat Wilkinson, Mary Alice Braly, Pat Brenner and Marie DeNoyelles.

Also Betty Fraser, Beverly Gardner, Carol Hagen, Marilyn Kimble, Lillian McDowell, Marge Miller, Mary Lou Nicolai, Judy Romeyn, Laverne Sanderson, Evelyn Sullivan and Penny Thorup.

Pre-ball parties (the presentation ball is July 24) have kept the debs busy all summer.

Kick off party for the season was a salad luncheon at the home of Dutch and Syl Miller hosted by 1975 debs in honor of 1976 debs.

Next on the list was a beach party in Huntington Beach for debs and stags.

Gay Steuber's home was the setting for the traditional waltz night. Flo Brooks was on hand to teach dads and debs the waltz which will begin the dancing at the ball.

Then the gals and stags jumped into blue jeans and straw hats for an old fashioned hay ride.

It was bathing suit time back at the Steubers for a pool party.

The debs will get down to serious business this week with rehearsal in the Grand Salon aboard Her Majesty followed by dinner at International City Club. Corky Jenkins is in charge of arrangements for the evening.

Escorts to various events and at the ball are Scott Nason, Larry Oleson, Joseph Molina, Alex Mente, Michael Peters, Bradley Wardman and Patrick Davis.

POLY HIGH SCHOOL Class of 1966 needs help in a hurry.

They have planned a reunion for the Monte Carlo Room of the Newporter Inn Aug. 21.

BUT they are missing 700 grads.

If you are among the missing, hurry and get your name to Jerry Swanson, 3918 Country Club Drive, 90807. Deadline is Aug. 7.

Other committee members are Jan Heggeness Swanson, Linda Randall Sheline, Rich DeCoudres, Jon Severson, Jennifer Lee, Judy Shutts DeCoudres, Jill Davis Landis, Chuck Moore, Dora Jalomo Rivera, Kathy Hausman Browning, Sue Linscott Westberg and Patty Oehlman Coleman.

A HAIL AND FAREWELL President's Party was enjoyed by members and wives of Long Beach Rotary. The Hail was for incoming President Bill George, there with his wife, Mary Eva. The Farewell was to Jack Dalton retiring president and his wife, Helen.

Pre-party-party took place at the home of Don and Shirley Coscarelli where 170 guests adjusted attitudes before moving on to the Golden Sails Inn for dinner, dancing and a novel skit.

At center stage were the old and about-to-be-presidents. The script called for Jack to give Bill all kinds of do's and don'ts for the upcoming term.

Then the two exchanged pins. Instead of presenting a gavel, Rotarians of Our Town pass along a diamond president's pin.

Custom was started several years ago by then-president, Harry Aggers.

In charge of arrangements for the party were Dr. George Gehring and wife, Joan, and Phil Lockwood and Jean.

THINGS YOU MIGHT never know if you didn't read Socially Speaking...or haven't been to Tokyo recently.

Mary Gray went there with Don and Helen Hodges of Newport Beach.

They were not only mystified but horrified when the customs people subjected them to — you should pardon the expression — body searches.

The travelers got the impression that officials were looking for guns being smuggled in to the country. Can't you just picture gals smuggling guns in bras or girdles?

The rest of their journey was trouble free. They took in Taiwan, Singapore and a cruise to Indonesia among other exotic places in the mysterious East.

KEITH AND BETH Utterback spent their European vacation concentrating on Switzerland, Germany, romantic Vienna and the Alps.

Only mishap of their trip was a missed connection in New York which caused a panic because Paul and Jean Williamson were to greet them at LAX. The plane got in here just before dawn.

VERNE AND CORKEY Jenkins and Howard and Maxine Riggins flew to Canada for the maiden voyage of the Cunard Line's Adventurer.

DR. ART AND RUTH Evelev dined on filet mignon at 8:30 a.m. Gourmet meal was served on a jet flight to Canada where they took the Inland Passage cruise.

The Evelevs crossed paths (gangplanks?) with other Long Beachers Dr. Don and Mary Cruse and Dr. Bob and Martha Schumacher.

Women are asking

'My shoulders slump, blades are sharp as wings, collarbones jut out leaving cup-like hollows. Help!'

By REBA & BONNIE CHURCHILL

Shoulder and collarbone figure faults are exposed in today's fashions. Just check the new evening wear for fall and you'll discover more strapless designs than ever before.

Fortunately, the physical conditioner we interviewed admitted, "Help is only an exercise away. For more shoulder symmetry, wrap a bath towel under the shoulder blades, cross it at the chest, and grasp the ends of the terry. Take a deep breath, simultaneously squaring shoulders and pushing hands against body. Repeat four times.

"This routine warms the circulation to more vigorous action. Next, sit with back and hips against a wall. Extend arms in a 'hold up' position. Let elbows remain close to the waist, and back of hands level with shoulders.

"Gradually extend arms up the wall until they are in a full stretch. Return to original pose. Raise and lower hands 10 times.

"Bony collarbones seem to 'fill out' when an exercise pattern is practiced. However, always get your doctor's okay before beginning any workouts."

As the conditioner explained, "One of my favorite exercises begins by standing tall (facing a wall). Body should be an arm's width away, palms positioned flat against surface. Hands are at shoulder level with fingers pointing toward each other. Lean forward, as if trying to touch shoulders to hands. Rehearse 10 times. Remember to keep back straight and chin elevated. Your mirror should show the improvement."

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

Tax U.N. pension

DEAR MR. SMITH: Is my pension from the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund subject to taxation? I have been paying income tax on this pension since I retired from the service of the

jacob smith

United Nations because I have been told that it is considered just like any private pension plan, except for the portion contributed by me during the time I was working for the organization. — C.S.R.

There is a federal income tax exemption for compensation from the United Nations, but only if the employee is not a U.S. citizen, and has not waived this immunity. In 1956, IRS issued a formal ruling stating that this exemption does not extend to former employees who receive retirement pensions.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I was a retired widower, but remarried in 1974. We live in a community property state. My wife is employed and earns about $16,000 per year. Prior to my marriage, I was entitled to the Retirement Income Credit; after my marriage, according to IRS Publication 524, one-half my wife's salary is considered my earned income and therefore I am no longer entitled to Retirement Income Credit. Is this based on IRS regulation, ruling, or a court decision?

If one-half of my wife's earnings are considered my earned income, should not the Social Security taxes paid on it be credited to my Social Security account? If not, how do they justify different treatment by departments of the same government? — S.S.

The 50/50 splitting of community salaries, and Social Security benefits for figuring the retirement income credit, is based chiefly on a formal Treasury Department regulation, although there are also many court decisions and rulings on the fine points. In some situations this splitting can be helpful.

The rule is based on the concept that one-half of your wife's salary belongs to you. Now, if in your particular state, and with your facts, you are not legally entitled to any part of your wife's salary, then you should make no entry for "earned income received." Of course, if you are 72 or over, you likewise make no entry.

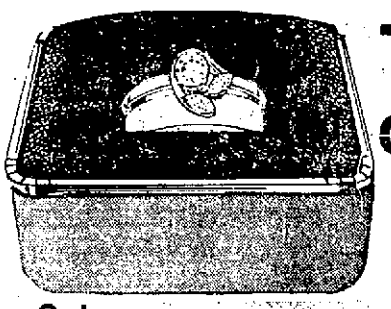

DEAR MR. SMITH: In 1964 I purchased a small commercial property for rental purposes. Before I was permitted to rent the building, the City required me to deed the front 20 feet of the lot to the City, and to construct "frontage improvements" (i.e. paved roadway, sidewalks, curbs and gutters). These I did. In the 10 years that the property has been rented I have fully depreciated, for income tax purposes, the value of the frontage improvements. I have never, however, claimed as a deduction, the value of the 20 feet of lot area which I deeded to the city. May I do so now? — W.M.

The severance of your property 10 years ago, as you describe it, did not entitle you to a deduction at that time, and certainly not now. The tax basis of your property still includes the 20 feet deeded to the city, and you will obtain the benefit of the total tax basis when you sell the property.

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice To The Taxlorn," P.O. Box 49081, Tucson, Ar. 85717, with a self-addressed stamped envelope, for information that may help you. Your identity will not be disclosed.

AT WIT'S END

It's a question of answers

Do you know what the trouble is with families today? No one answers anyone. Every time someone asks a question, the person responds with another question.

A reader in Chenoa, Ill., noticed it too. He said the other day his 16-year-old daughter yelled from upstairs, "Has anyone seen my new sweater?"

erma bombeck

He yelled back, "You mean the one that cost $20?"

Sister replied, "You mean the one you won't let me wear?"

Brother responded, "You mean the stupid one that makes you look fat?"

Grandma responded, "You mean the one with the low neck?"

Mom grumbled, "You mean the one that has to be washed by hand in cold water?"

Everyone was talking about the same sweater, but no one ever really answered the question.

IF ANYONE gave me a straight answer, I'd drop dead!

Talking to my son is like a quiz show.

"How late did you come in?"

"How late do you think it was?"

"Was it later than midnight?"

"Did I say that?"

"Aren't you going to answer me?"

"With food in my mouth?"

"Is your mouth any other way?"

"Why do you always yell at me?"

"You don't need it?"

"Why can't we just talk?"

"We're not talking? What are we doing? Hatching eggs, maybe?"

"ARE YOU going to use your car today?"

"Do I need permission from you to use my own car?"

"Will you be back by three?"

"Why?"

"You should have to ask?"

"Am I expected to remember everything? So where are you taking the car?"

"If you must know, I was going to the barber shop and surprise you."

"What kind of a question is that? You want me to drop dead, right?"

"You're asking?"

I smiled. "That's better."

Ebell brunch

The continuing series of summer brunches sponsored by Ebell Club of Long Beach will take place Wednesday at 11:30 a.m. in the clubhouse, 290 Cerritos Ave., followed by an afternoon of cards.

Music upstages sentimental date

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Bruce and Rhonda Polay will celebrate their second wedding anniversary Monday night with music — rehearsing with the Lakewood Philharmonia for the second Starlight Serenade in Recreation Park.

When the free concert opens Tuesday at 8 p.m., Bruce will be on the conductor's podium. Rhonda, a soprano, will be soloist.

And to make the Serenade even more of a family affair, Rhonda's father, Rolland W. Sandberg, will direct the Wilson High School Brass Ensemble in the finale, Tchaikovsky's lively, stirring "1812 Overture."

Sandberg is instrumental director at Wilson High. Bruce holds an equivalent position at Polytechnic High.

Bruce will conduct the Philharmonia, now in its sixth season, in Aaron Copland's "An Outdoor Overture," a most suitable choice for the opener of the program, one in the summer series sponsored by Long Beach Symphony Association. Next, the orchestra will play the 1919 version of Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite."

Rhonda will sing Faure's "Pavanne" and "Dover Beach" by American composer Samuel Barber.

THE COLLABORATION between Bruce and Rhonda actually began some years ago when both were in Hoover Junior High. Bruce, now 27, is two years older than Rhonda and even then was a leader. He was experimenting with commercial shows and improvisation and already knew that he wanted a career in music.

"Rhonda had a crush on me," he says candidly, "but I didn't know who she was."

His piano teacher, Mrs. Darlene Hughes of Lynwood, saw in the youngster a "real gift to improvise." A few years later, her prodigy had a difficult decision to make: go on to a promising career in musical comedy or choose classical training. He chose the latter but his love of contemporary music is very much alive.

There's a family note here, too. Mrs. Hughes taught Bruce's mother in Cozad, Neb., and today it is Mrs. Hughes's grand piano that Bruce owns and plays.

It was in Ong, Neb., that Rhonda's father was born; she is a native of Hastings, Neb. Eventually, both the Polay and Sandberg families came to Long Beach where Bruce and Rhonda met at Hoover Junior High.

By the time Rhonda entered Lakewood High in 1967, Bruce was a senior and even more involved in campus and musical activities. He soon became aware of the pretty sophomore but, "I didn't know her father from the man in the moon."

BEFORE LONG, he was dropping in after school at the Sandbergs' home. "My mother-in-law is a saint. She always had cookies and milk out and made all of us welcome."

Mrs. Sandberg is Hawaiian and Rhonda has a rich heritage — she is Swedish, Hawaiian, Chinese, Spanish and Portuguese.

Soon the sophomore and the senior were a twosome, drawn together, among other things, by their love of music. They went together for seven years before their marriage, years when Bruce earned his degree at USC and Rhonda graduated from Long Beach State University.

"Her father really was cautious," Bruce remembers. "He's a very strong Swede and I really had to convince him to let me take Rhonda to a fraternity dance at USC."

He speaks of his father-in-law with personal and professional admiration. "He has 200 band members, the brass ensemble, a jazz combo and other groups at Wilson. That high school is noted throughout Southern California for its strong musical program."

At Polytechnic High, Bruce works with his 100-member band, a 65-piece orchestra and smaller groups. His love of his students and joy in his job are boundless.

"THE STRONGEST thing about Poly is the students themselves. The ethnic diversity of the student body is one of the most beautiful things I've ever seen. Many are islanders. The kids and their talents are incredibly diverse."

When Bruce went to Poly, the school was looking for creative teachers. It was the kind of situation the young man wanted. "Educationally, it works best for me to see the kids as peers. Sometimes we'll be lounging out on the lawn talking things over when a staff member will come by and say, 'All right now, it's time to get back to class.'

He's justly proud of the fact that Poly's orchestra was the only Southern California high school orchestra invited to play for the California Music Educators Association at its recent convention in Los Angeles.

"At Millikan and Wilson, about 95 per cent of the kids in the orchestras take private lessons. At Poly, fewer than 10 per cent do. In music, I have a lot of gifted kids. The big question is, 'How can we help them?'

"When a family is illiterate, it's really something to have a kid graduate from high school with a diploma. I keep in touch with my students as much as I can; they go, of course, where there are jobs."

Poly ranks high in academic achievement, Bruce says. "This year, Poly students won $1.4 million in scholarships for academic excellence; almost half of the students had B grade averages. They won 89 state scholarships, based strictly on academic rating. There were National Merit Scholarships, others from TWA, some in marine biology. So many kids go into so many areas!"

MEANTIME, Rhonda's separate career is flourishing. Organist at First United Methodist Church of Lakewood for the past seven years, she also is accompanist at Long Beach State University. She has had two works published by Walton, Inc., an arrangement of "Silent Night" and an original composition, "Cut From the Same Cloth," for mixed chorus. Both she and her husband will have their work performed this month at the American Choral Directors Association Bicentennial Convention in Interlochen, Mich.

And both are involved with the Lakewood Philharmonia which will play the Starlight Serenade Tuesday.

This orchestra, an outgrowth and expansion of the smaller Lakewood Chamber Orchestra, is regarded by musicians as an exciting group, competent in classical music and also interested in innovative, original ideas.

Bruce makes a point of combining groups to see how various components work together. For instance, he involves the Lakewood Artist Guild with the Philharmonia.

"If we're serious, we must support all the arts. And we must get school officials to realize that its society's obligation to give young people a chance to explore the arts. In general, officials are untouchable in their attitude about the arts in relationship to schools. The thrust is academic, although we support athletics, too. We must give more emphasis to the arts in general.

"This is something I believe in. I'm in the fight for the arts!"

BRUCE POLAY, his wife Rhonda, and her father Rolland W. Sandberg study score to be played Tuesday night by the Lakewood Philharmonia at Starlight Serenade in Recreation Park. Bruce will conduct, Rhonda will be soprano soloist, Sandberg will direct finale.

LBSU gallery seeks art by Anna A. Hills

arts

The art galleries at Long Beach State University need your help.

In celebration of International Women's Year, the gallery staff is mounting a retrospective exhibition of work by pioneer California Impressionist Anna A. Hills, co-founder of the Laguna Beach Art Association.

Some of the artist's work is available, but the staff is convinced that much more is in private collections. If you have such paintings, please send information about them to The Art Galleries, Long Beach State University, 1250 Bellflower Blvd., Long Beach 90840. The staff would like to know about them for documentation purposes.

AT THE THIRD annual Seal Beach Art Show next Sunday, there will be paintings, graphics, crafts, photography, sculpture and children's art. More than 50 artists will exhibit their work from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Eisenhower Park, Ocean Avenue and Main Street. Julia Poirier, Phyllis Aaron and Don Hadley will judge the show, giving each winner a trophy. At 11 a.m., Mayor Tom Blackman and Councilman Frank Laszlo will announce awards.

TWO LONG BEACH artists have been juried into the San Diego Watercolor Society's Golden State Exhibition. They are Sandra Beebe and Betty Anne Kirkpatrick, who signs her work BASK. Jurors for the show, which will be on view through July 25, are Rex Brandt, Millard Sheets and Lenard Kester. Beebe also had a woven painting accepted in the 22nd annual All California Exhibition at Laguna Beach Museum. And BASK has had a painting accepted by the Rocky Mountain National Watercolor Exhibition in Golden, Colo. This show, open to all artists in the United States, was juried by Chen Chi of New York and Tom Hill of Tucson, Ariz. It will hang Aug. 15 through Sept. 19.

THE CALL is out for artists to participate in the 18th annual Catalina Festival of Art in Avalon Sept. 17, 18 and 19. More than $2,000 in cash awards will be made to amateur and professional artists in painting, craft and photographic categories. The major prize will be $500 given by the city of Avalon for Best of Show in painting.

A festival dinner-dance in conjunction with a special exhibit of paintings by noted artists will be held Sept. 17 at the Casino Ballroom. It will be open to the public by prior reservation.

For more information, write to Catalina Festival of Art, P.O. Box 161, Avalon 90704.

Russian maestro will conduct

Two items of interest from Hollywood Bowl: Russian maestro Gennady Rozhdestvensky will conduct the Los Angeles Philharmonic Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, and bus fare to the Bowl has been boosted again.

First, the concerts. This will be Rozhdestvensky's Bowl debut, following his appearances with the Philharmonic at the Music Center last February.

The Tuesday program will be all-Prokofieff, beginning with the cantata "Alexander Nevsky" with mezzo Florence Quivar and the Los Angeles Master Chorale. Viktoria Postnikova (Mrs. Rozhdestvensky) will be soloist for the "Piano Concerto No. 1" and "Scythian Suite."

Thursday, Romanian violinist Silvia Marcovici, who performed at the Bowl in 1972, will play Bruch's "Concerto No. 1" and the orchestra will perform Beethoven's Overture, "Leonore No. 3" and "Symphony No. 3" by Saint-Saens — the "Organ" Symphony.

Saturday's program will be devoted to Russian favorites with one of America's favorite pianists, Van Cliburn, playing one of the world's favorite piano concertos, Rachmaninoff's Second. Rozhdestvensky will conduct "Scheherazade" by Rimsky-Korsakoff and Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla" by Glinka.

All three concerts will begin at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are on sale at the box office and agencies. Seating for Saturday's program is limited; only bench seating is available.

ABOUT THE BUS fare: Originally, fares were increased on RTD Hollywood Bowl Park and Ride service at the beginning of July, raising the cost each way from 25 cents to 35 cents.

Then at a later meeting July 6, the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors decided that the fare should be raised to 50 cents. This increase is now in effect. The service is in operation every Bowl performance night.

THE PHILHARMONIC, on the other hand, is offering the public a free series of chamber concerts, the Philharmonic Serenades. These were introduced last summer and the response was so enthusiastic that the programs will be given again this year beginning Monday at 8:30 p.m.

They will take place in the former Pilgrimage Theater in Hollywood, renamed the John Anson Ford Theater.

Under the direction of Sidney Harth, the Los Angeles Philharmonic's principal concert master and associate conductor, the programs will feature varied ensembles drawn from the orchestra, and two guest pianists.

After Monday's initial concert, serenades are scheduled Aug. 2, 16 and 30.

The opening bill will include "Ricercare" by Andrea Gabrieli; "Canzona" by Giovanni Gabrieli; "Organ Fugue in D-minor" by Bach; "Trio for Brass Instruments" by Bassett; "Sonata for Violin and Cello" by Ravel; and "Trio in C-major for Violin, Piano and Cello, Op. 87" by Brahms. Sidney Harth, violinist, Ronald Leonard, cellist, and Zita Carno, pianist, will perform this work.

ACS warns against sun

By RONALD KOTULAK
Knight News Service

Some widely held myths about sunbathing are helping to increase the dangers of skin cancer and prematurely aging skin, warns the American Cancer Society.

Pointing out that "we have become a nation of sunworshippers," the ACS said that most sunbathers

are not aware that overexposure causes permanent damage.

"While we seek a tan to make us look young and vibrant, the sun is hard at work making us look old — giving us wrinkles and a tough, leathery look," said the society.

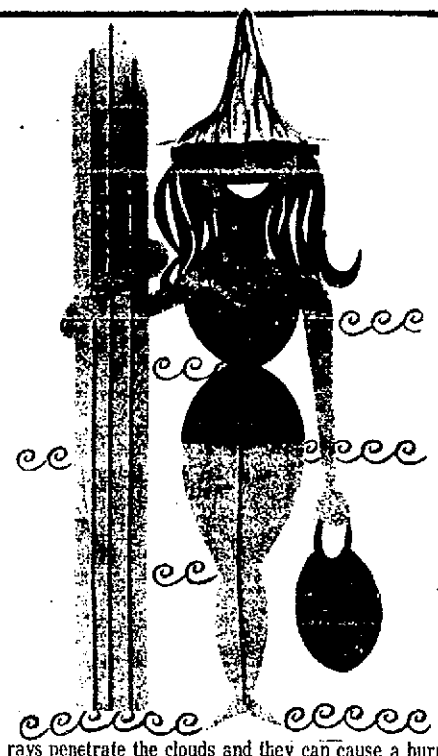

But the biggest risk of too much sun is skin cancer. Nearly all of the 300,000 new cases of skin cancer each year are caused by overexposure to the sun's ultra violet rays, said the ACS.

Fortunately, skin cancer is highly curable. But premature aging of the skin cannot be reversed. Some sunbathers pay a heavy price when they reach their 40s and have skin that looks like it belongs to someone in their 50s or 60s.

ATTEMPTING to clear up some of the most prevalent myths about sunbathing, the ACS advises that:

— There basically are very few health benefits from sunning.

— A cloudy day or staying under water will not protect you. Seventy to 80 per cent of the ultra-violet rays penetrate the clouds and they can cause a burn up to three feet deep in water.

— The shade of a beach umbrella does not offer full protection. The sun's rays can be reflected at you from sand, water, or any hard surface.

— A T-shirt does not offer protection. Once it gets wet it lets in about 50 per cent of the ultra-violet rays.

To avoid serious sun damage, stay out of the sun during the worst period between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., said the ACS. If that seems too restrictive, sunbathe for only 15 minutes during the danger hours.

Sunscreens are effective in reducing the amount of sun your skin absorbs. The most effective sunscreens on the market now contain the chemical called PABA (para-amino-benzoic acid). Sunblocks, such as zinc oxide, allow no tanning.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Hormones aid in shock

Large doses of cortisone-like hormones protect patients against massive bacterial infection and resulting septic shock, a form of circulatory collapse.

Dr. William Schumer, chairman of the department of surgery at Chicago Medical School, tells of a study conducted at the Veterans Administration Hospital at Downey, Ill.

The study involved 171 patients admitted to the hospital with septic shock over a period of several years. The death rate among those who received a cortisone-like drug was only 10 per cent. It was almost four times as high (38 per cent) among those not treated with these drugs.

And a study of the medical records of an additional 328 patients treated at another VA hospital for septic shock shows that among those not treated with cortisone-like drugs, nearly three times as many died as among treated patients.

ben zinser

Although antibiotics have proven to be a valuable weapon against bacterial infections, they alone do not protect this type of patient as well as the combination of antibiotics and a cortisone-like drug.

Dr. Schumer says that during severe infection, body fluids leak into the tissues. As a result, the blood volume decreases to a dangerous low level, and circulation is impaired. The result is shock which often kills even as an antibiotic is fighting the infection.

During shock, the body protects its vital organs by pooling what blood remains in the brain, lungs, heart and kidneys. This is true whether the loss in blood volume is due to massive hemorrhage, as in a wound, or by massive poisoning caused by infection.

But the other organs and body tissues, without a blood supply, lack energy, oxygen and nutrients. Also, they cannot dispose of their accumulating wastes. The slow starvation and suffocation of these body tissues finally causes death.

The primary source of energy for the body's cells is sugar, produced by the liver. During septic shock, sugar production is halted. This is how the cortisone-like hormone can help: Given in a single, huge dose, it helps the liver resume its sugar production to restore the energy supply.

Dr. Schumer used two cortisone-like drugs: dexamethasone and methylprednisolone.

"We're seeing more cases of septic shock now than before," the doctor says. "And the victims are usually children under 10 or adults over 50."

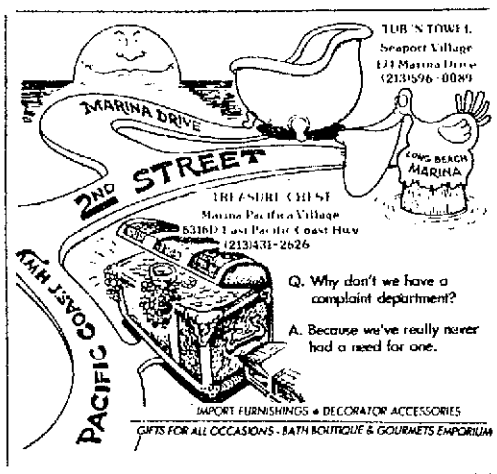

Restore vision

Specially built plastic eyeglasses are partially compensating for visual field losses in 35 victims of brain injury, including stroke.

The glasses contain a small plastic mirror attached to the bridge. The glasses have helped restore side images lost as a result of a condition known as "half blindness." The mirror reflects images from the missing visual fields as an overlay in the side part of the wearer's remaining vision.

The glasses were designed by Dr. Thomas W. Nooney Jr., associate professor of ophthalmology at Medical College of Virginia.

The report is in Modern Medicine, a periodical for physicians.

Success more than talent

dr. walt menninger

What makes Johnny run? How do you motivate people to excel and live up to their potential? These questions face people in roles of supervision and direction; they also face parents. Recently I heard two people talk about the subject who have been remarkably successful at it: Bobby Knight and Barry Switzer.

They are both successful coaches — Knight's Indiana University basketball team went undefeated and won the 1976 national championship of the NCAA, having lost only one game the year before; Switzer's Oklahoma University football team was named the mythical national champion by wire service polls last winter and has a three-year record of 31 wins, 1 loss, 1 tie and two national championships.

They are outspoken individuals who are keenly sensitive to the challenge of taking youngsters with talent and molding them into a smooth-working and effective team. They shared some thoughts about how they do it with the National Press Photographers Association meeting in Atlanta.

WHAT CAN ONE learn from them? First, it is obvious that successful accomplishment is not just a function of talent in players. As in many other endeavors, the leader plays a critical role. In their case, it's clear that the coaching makes a difference.

What makes a good coach? He has a sensitivity to the concerns of the people he supervises. A youthful perspective, noted Switzer.

Good coaches try to understand the needs of their players. Yet, they also have a clear idea of the job to be done, and they don't try to pass the buck or escape responsibility for making decisions.

Switzer tries to help his youngsters set goals and purposes in life, to build a foundation which will carry on beyond his playing days. But he decries the common expectation that you can get something for nothing and go a long way just on talent. Success takes hard work!

Knight believes his task, in a similar way, is to help his players understand what they have to do to succeed. But he doesn't define success as winning; rather he emphasizes success as living up to your potential, being as good as you can be, regardless of the opponent or the rewards.

One might characterize Knight's approach as a variation of so-called management-by-objective. He defines a number of objectives for his players in each game, but he does not list the final score or the outcome of the game as an objective. Rather he refers to various elements of a player's performance during the game.

SINCE TALENT is fairly equally spread these days in athletics, Knight feels that upsets come about basically because of a difference in the mental and psychological preparation for a contest. The last thing he wants to talk about is winning; rather he feels if you play to your potential in every game, you don't have to worry — you are not likely to be upset by a lesser team. And you can be satisfied if you've done your best, even if you lose.

Knight agreed with Switzer that success requires work and commitment. He recounted the parable of the successful salesman who "taketh with him two angels, Inspiration and Perspiration; and he worketh to beat hell!"

While both these men have now become part of winning traditions — Switzer inherited one, Knight has developed one where it didn't previously exist — they each know what they want; and they have a definite plan for approaching their tasks.

They are both experts in what they are doing and exude their competence and confidence. Even if one is not particularly interested in athletics, there is much to learn from these men who are unusually successful at their calling.

however, the fountain has a definite and useful purpose."

The architects also took into account the fact that the visually handicapped exert a great deal of energy just getting from one place to another, and the frequent rest stops were an integral part of the planning, Mrs. Coleman said.

A curved driveway offset from Vermont Avenue allows for safe off-loading of passengers. Wide sliding glass doors make entry easy. A reception area, manned by sighted volunteers and a visually handicapped switchboard operator, is located just a few steps inside the main entrance.

BESIDES CREATING an environment which minimizes the anxieties of the blind, the new construction has made it possible for Braille Institute to increase its free-of-charge services to the estimated 20,000 visually handicapped men, women and children in the Los Angeles area.

According to Mrs. Coleman, more space has made possible the expansion of the Braille Library and the addition of sound-proofed music rooms make it possible for students who don't own their own instruments to practice between classes.

There are also enlarged handicraft and sewing rooms, a completely equipped woodshop and an up-to-date apartment where blind men and relearn home management skills.

An industrial-size kitchen, which was part of phase four of the building program, will make it possible to serve students hot noon meals as soon as the final phase of the construction is completed.

Also part of the new Sight Center is a volunteer services center which provides space for reading and tape recording rooms and houses the Institutes 1,400 volunteers. There are 10 volunteers for every sighted staff member, Mrs. Coleman said. "I don't think we could survive without them."

Use care washing lusterware

Q. "What is the best way to clean antique lusterware? I am really afraid to wash my old luster pieces. They look so fragile." — Cynthia, Levittown, Pa.

A. True, better to be a bit cautious than a bit sadder. More than one homemaker has had the unfortunate experience of washing the glaze right off antique luster by rubbing it too strenuously. Luster is best washed in lukewarm water, with a mild soap or detergent. A minimum of rubbing will not endanger that lovely old decoration. Your grandchildren will appreciate your cautious attitude when they have your lovely luster collection to treasure and enjoy.

Q. "Did you ever hear of alligator's teeth jewelry? I discovered a necklace from this reptile and am quite astonished. Tell me, please, when were fashionable ladies wearing such outlandish accessories?" — B. P., Atlantic City, N.J.

A. A fad of the 1870s and 1880s. This rather awesome jewelry was made from, would you believe, alligator's teeth. Such teeth adorned necklaces, buttons, brooches, eardrops and other exotic treasures. Where did they ever find all those alligator teeth? The next time you're visiting the zoo, wait around for an alligator to yawn — those missing teeth are probably just another item in Aunt Tillie's trinket box.

Q. "I found some Theodore Haviland china marked "Made in America." Although I'm a novice about antiques, I realize that Haviland was made in France. How can you explain this boo-boo? — Mrs. M. V., Philadelphia, Pa.

A. The Haviland family have been actively producing fine wares since the 1840s. The bulk of their wares were imported from the factories in the Limoges district of France. However, during the 1940s, under the guidance of William David Haviland, a business was started in America. This is the ware marked Theodore Haviland, made in America. You have uncovered such a piece.

Q. "I am determined to find a Centennial Exhibition Hall Bottle. My collection of antique bottles will not be considered complete without one of these specimens. Do you know their history?" — R. G., Trenton, N. J.

A. Sound the happy hunting horn, you're off in search of a fascinating bottle. Robert P. Smith of Philadelphia patented the design on April 11, 1876. The clear glass bottle with a greenish hue was made by Whitall, Tatum & Company of New Jersey. The Centennial Exhibition Hall is represented on this sought-after rarity. Remember, sir, if you encounter an example, hesitate. In the antique biz, bargaining is beautiful!

The workshop

Once upon a time, a French furniture designer hit upon the bright idea of making a chair seat long enough so that your legs stretched out off the floor. From that simple invention, thousands of comfortable "chaise lounges" (literally, "long chairs") have been designed to help weary souls laze away the day.

The one we've come up with is sturdy, handsome, and best of all, a snap to build. With the full-size patterns, all you do is trace, cut out and assemble, and you're on your way to years of laziness. Sturdy wheels make it mobile, and an adjustable back lets you choose your own level of comfort. A full list of materials lets you know just what you'll need. An added feature is that no special tools are required.

To obtain the Outdoor Chaise, Pattern No. 81, send $1.50 (includes first class postage and handling). To obtain our special Lawn and Garden packet (9 patterns including window boxes, awnings and many more lawn projects) send $4 by check, cash or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent Press Telegram, Pattern Dept., P.O. THE FORMULA

Remove ink stains from hands

The ballpoint pen has largely replaced the fountain pen as a writing tool. While fluid ink is still produced in vast quantities its use is now primarily in the printing industry.

Along with the decline of fluid writing ink, the blotter has also largely disappeared. So when a pen point picks up lint from the paper, another source for removing it needs to be found. In many cases this turns out to be our fingers. If you encounter this as I do, here's an easy inexpensive way to remove the stains from hands.

Into three tablespoons of ISOPROPYL ALCOHOL, mix one tablespoon GLYCERIN. To use, dip cloth in solution and rub away the spot. Store in glass or plastic container. NOTE: Isopropyl alcohol is mildly toxic and flammable.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Life devoted to children's health

Good Housekeeping magazine in its issue of May, 1974, cited him as "One of nine top physicians in the country."

Today's chef of the week, Harry W. Orme, M.D. has served since 1967 as medical director of the Earl and Loraine Miller Children's Hospital Medical Center.

The university-affiliated private medical center operates on an annual budget in excess of $6 million, and incorporates regional, public and private child health care agencies. Offering one of the world's largest and most modern neonatal centers, it has brought together a medical staff of more than 500 private primary physicians and specialists and a house staff of pediatric interns, residents and fellows.

Orme also is clinical professor of pediatrics at University of California, Irvine. He was formerly clinical assistant professor of Pediatric Cardiology at UCLA and an assistant professor of pediatrics at University of Minnesota.

Born in Wheat Ridge, Colo., he was graduated from high school there, and then enrolled at Syracuse University, Syracuse, N.Y. He continued his education at University of Illinois, Champaign, Ill., before going to the University of Minnesota, from which he earned his B.S. degree, and M.D. degree from its School of Medicine.

Orme interned at U of Minnesota Hospital, and served two years as captain, Medical Corps, U.S. Air Force Medical Department, Adak, Alaska. He then returned to Minnesota for a clinical fellowship in pediatrics.

ORME'S NEXT MOVE was to Long Beach in 1952, where he served two years as staff pediatrician at Harriman Jones Clinic. Minnesota then called again, and he returned, serving as assistant professor of pediatrics at U of Minnesota and as director of pediatrics, Ancka Hospital, St. Paul, Minn.

Long Beach was lucky again in 1957. Orme returned and entered private pediatric cardiology practice. In 1965, he and his wife, Bonnie, a registered nurse, traveled to Lahore, West Pakistan, where, as consultant in pediatric cardiology and hospital administration to United Christian Hospital, he developed that country's first heart surgery program.

His memberships in scientific and scholarly societies include the Long Beach Pediatric Society and

mildred flanary

the Certified American Board of Pediatric Cardiology. A member of both the California and Long Beach Heart Associations, Orme is a fellow — American Academy of Pediatrics and of the American College of Cardiology.

Recently elected to the executive committee of the American Academy of Pediatrics, Southern California Chapter, Orme is president, Long Beach Heart Association; board of trustees, Women's Hospital Medical Center of Long Beach. He also is a member of the board of directors, Memorial Hospital Medical Center of Long Beach-University of California, Irvine, Center for Health Education, and board of trustees, Earl and Loraine Miller Children's Hospital Medical Center.

Orme has also been a consultant in pediatric cardiology to California Crippled Children's Services since 1960, and a consultant, pediatric cardiology, Naval Regional Medical Center, Long Beach, since 1967.

HE HAS AUTHORED numerous articles on congenital heart diseases in children, and presented a large number of scientific papers and exhibits at national and international medical meetings. Orme's current objectives are oriented to improving delivery of health care to children and medical education in the United States and foreign countries.

Bonnie Orme is active in the Assistance League. They have a son, Steven, who recently graduated from UC, Davis, as director of veterinary medicine, and will intern at West Los Angeles Animal Hospital this coming year. He and his wife, Denise, have been married three years. The Ormes' daughter, Sarah, has completed two years at USC School of Music as a flute major.

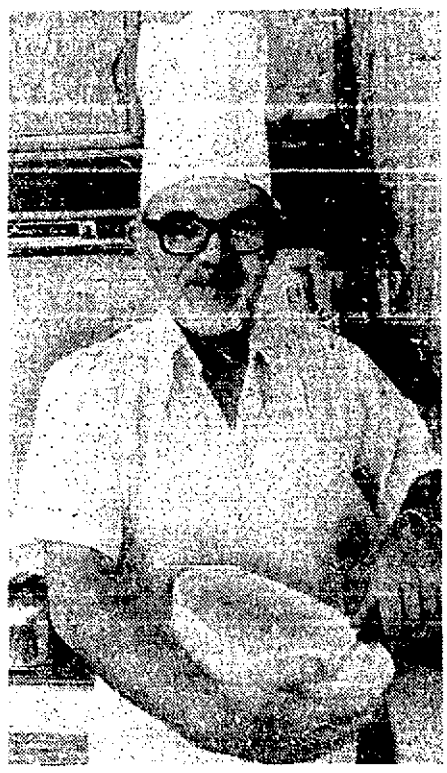

Orme says, "The past four years we have spent as much time as possible in Palm Springs at our condominium. We've traveled extensively with two round the world trips, stopping both times at Pakistan."

Bonnie says, "One of Harry's favorite pastimes is napping under a special tree in Palm Springs. In fact, the neighbors got together and had a sign put on it — 'Orme's Tree' ".

He also enjoys cooking, and has never been known to measure an ingredient. As for his recipe today, it is one of his favorite desserts which came from their first trip to Pakistan. It's called Malil Rhamatullah Khan's Pear Pudding. You really don't need to be able to pronounce it to enjoy it!

MALIK RHAMATULLAH KHAN'S PEAR PUDDING

1 large can pears	2 eggs
1½ cups flour	¾ cup pear juice
1½ cups sugar	½ teaspoon vanilla
1½ teaspoons soda	¾ cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon salt	3 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon ginger	½ cup nuts, chopped
¼ teaspoon cloves

HARRY W. ORME, M.D.

Make a batter of the flour, sugar, soda, salt, ginger, cloves, eggs, pear juice and vanilla. Slice pears into this batter. Place in 9x12 inch pan. Mix together brown sugar, butter and nuts; sprinkle over top.

Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, about 50 minutes. Serve with whipped cream when it is warm or cool.

Americans have cliches for all seasons

ALTHOUGH PRESIDENTIAL campaigns frequently generate many new cliches, 1976 has "not been a vintage year," Paros admitted. "About the best we've got is Jimmy Carter's 'I would not knowingly lie to you,' which has the earmarks of a classic, and 'ethnic purity,' which probably will join Daniel Moynihan's 'benign neglect' as a phrase near and dear to the hearts and minds of black people.

"When the chips are down, though, we really have to turn to the media for political cliches," he added. "Look at how the media handles a primary. It starts out with an 'attractive candidate,' who is not very different from 'the very good-looking young ballplayer.' He 'throws his hat into the ring,' into what is 'an already crowded field.'

"At some point, somebody 'mentions him prominently,' and then there are a 'series of major tests' which are 'anybody's contest,' 'too close to call,' 'real horse races,' and 'down to the wire,' until our friend emerges as 'the front runner' and 'gains the psychological advantage.' He's got 'momentum' or 'the edge,' and he's deemed 'a viable candidate,' which I guess is akin to being barmitzvahed. He's got the Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval.

"After that, 'everybody gets on the bandwagon,' and he finally 'gains the nod' regardless of the 'lengthening shadows in the wings,' 'the smoke-filled rooms,' and 'the dark horses left at the starting gates.'"

CLICHES ARE THE bread-and-butter of the Fourth Estate, Paros said, but this year the press has had trouble expressing itself in terms of sex.

"What with Elizabeth Ray and Rep. Wilbur Hayes' (D., Ohio) hanky-panky, the best the press had is: 'They were having personal relationships with one another,' or 'She granted him sexual favors.' The press is having trouble when it comes to talking about you-know-what."

Paros, who lives in Rhode Island, is married and has two daughters. By studying cliches, he believes, we can get a better insight into the kind of people we really are.

"We are what we say," he explained.

The commonplaces of American speech, he said, underscore our willingness to accept authority, our respect for hard work, and our faith in education and the American dream. In a darker vein, we also are exposed as a nation that romanticizes war and is fascinated by violence.

Cliches originate as a reflection of what we think, he said, but eventually can become deterrents to new and critical thought.

"Cliches can make you lazy, make you not want to stretch your imagination. Instead of reaching down inside ourselves for the clearest way to say something, too many times we take the easy way out. Communication is impaired."

OK, America, let's get over this hump and tell it like it really is. A little hard work never hurt anyone, and progress is, after all, our most important product.

Solution to puzzle is on L/S-8

Summer's hot; films are not

The plot involves a nuclear-powered bus making its first nonstop run from New York to Denver. Sort of a Concorde on wheels. It is launched like a rocket, a bomb goes off, the gadgets don't work, and a gang of enemy agents tries to wreck both the bus and the crew.

Joe Bologna is a bus driver accused of eating 110 passengers during a former disaster when rations ran out in the desert. Mr. Bologna defensively insists he only ate one foot.

Stockard Channing is a daffy stewardess (on buses, I guess you'd call her a bustess). She is a very capable comedienne and might just someday be a star if Hollywood ever discovers what to do with her.

Ruth Gordon is an ancient housewife who is running away from home. Sally Kellerman is a bubble-brained divorcee who is celebrating her new divorce by taking a trip with her ex-husband. Lynn Redgrave, Jose Ferrer, Bob Dishy and Larry Hagman are other lovable lunatics along for the ride. All of them create comic personalities from blank paper.

As a result, the movie limps along on false energy, the situations never rise above the status of a TV sitcom pilot that didn't sell, and "The Big Bus" dies of engine trouble.

"THE TENANT" is a murky pudding starring, written and directed by Roman Polanski, in a style uncomfortably borrowed from Hitchcock with dull and baffling results. The point of the film seems to be a pouty warning to France, where Polish-born Polanski has recently taken up residence, that this iconoclastic director intends to preserve his sense of alienation at all costs.

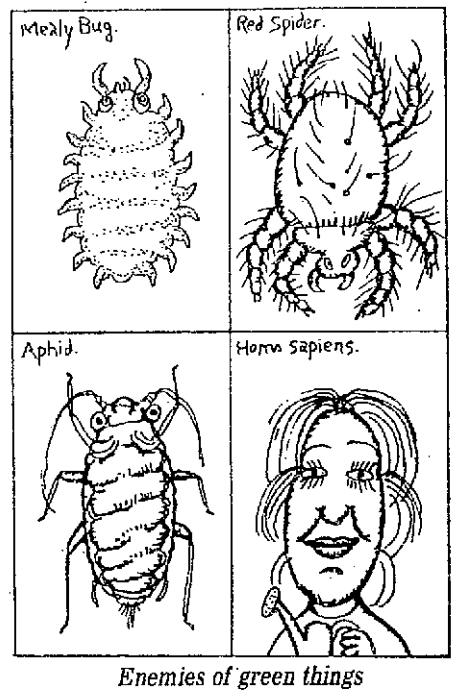

That is why he cast himself as the victimized, awkward immigrant who rents a depressing little flat in Paris only to discover the former tenant committed suicide by jumping through the window. Paranoia builds as the landlord (Melvyn Douglas) threatens him, the nasty concierge (Shelley Winters) ignores even his simplest request, and he is harassed by a host of predatory neighbors.

There's witty observation in the direction, as the petty irritants faced by the foreigners in the Parisian milieu of dark, lonely hotels and cafes are revealed. But then the film rather rudely turns to Grand Guignol as the paranoia turns to insanity, and a lot of talent gets wasted in the process.

The Americans playing French villains are fine, but it's a one-man show. Or maybe I should say a one-woman show.

Polanski starts wearing the previous tenant's lipstick, fingernail polish, silk stockings, false eyelashes, high heels and wigs, heading predictably for the same window. The first fall only breaks his bones, so he drags himself up the stairs and jumps again. The screen fills with blood and the theater fills with laughter, because by this time nobody cares.

The audience has been yelling "Jump!" since the film began. "The Tenant" is one Roman Polanski thriller that outlasts its own thrills.

Mother Earth:

By LYNN & JOEL RAPP

DEAR MOTHER EARTH: Having just read one of your "success" stories, I was inspired to tell you about ours. We had a beautiful spider plant in our living room which was doing very nicely until it was accidentally knocked off the table.

The fall was so bad that the plant was completely crushed, except for one tiny little hunk. We decided to plant it in our patio to see what would happen. About two weeks later it was still alive, so we transferred it into a pot, and, would you believe, that, too, was knocked off the table! This time we thought it had no hope of surviving, but just in case, we planted it again in the patio earth.

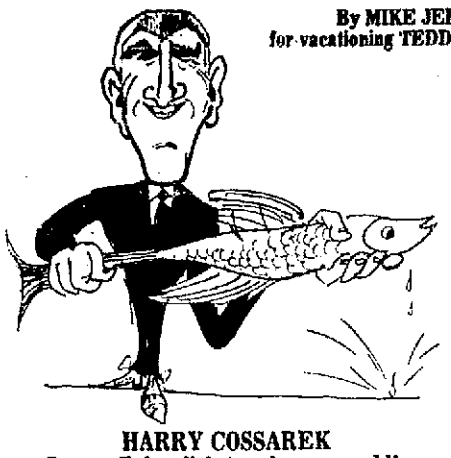

Well, it grew again, and now, having learned our lesson, our Spider hangs proudly from a tree-limb, about four times its original size, with baby shoots galore. That plant has really shown us a lesson in the will to live! — D. & J. C.

HARRY COSSAREK
Serves flying fish to a hungry public

FISH TRAVEL in schools, as everyone learns early in life.

A fact most children don't learn in school, however, is that some fish travel in flying schools.

Unfortunately for the fish, they're out cold when they fly. They aren't able to enjoy the scenery as they're sped by airplane from the North Atlantic and the Sea of Cortez to the Prince of Whales Restaurant, 6790 Long Beach Blvd.

(Actually, of course, they're only flown as far as the airport, and driven the rest of the way to the restaurant. We see no reason to be pedantic, though.)

Owner Harry Cossarek sees to it that Atlantic haddock is flown in fresh regularly, as are Canadian halibut and Maryland oysters.

With seafood as the restaurant's reason for being in business, it's perhaps not surprising that Mr. Cossarek takes such pains to secure first-rate denizens of the deep.

The practice seems to reflect sound business sense, in light of the fact the restaurant is one of very few in Southern California that has been in business since 1929.

Though closed Monday, the restaurant offers lunch and dinner menus the rest of the week from 11:30 a.m. to 8:45 p.m. on weekdays and from 11:30 a.m. to 8:15 p.m. weekends.

The restaurant features a Scottish decor, reflecting the Caledonian origins of the owners.

Touches from tartan place mats to a highland dance mural on the wall reflect the Celtic influence, as does the selection of fine foreign beers.

One can scarcely look any place in the Prince of Whales without finding something Scottish looking back at him, from a red Lion rampant to a bit of tartan on the back of the menu.

In addition to standard American brands, the Prince of Whales offers Mackeson stout from Britain, Foster's Lager from Austalia, and Zealander Half and Half from New Zealand.

The Mackeson is a fine stout. It's sweeter and a bit less pungent that Guinness (what brew isn't?), and its head foams up with a tan uniformity that's a positive pleasure to watch.

Zealander Half and Half is a more subtly flavored half and half than will suit many tastes. (For those unaccustomed to this type of concoction, however, it might at first appear to be stronger in flavor than is quite right.)

The price is naturally quite a bit higher than for American beers, but any aficionado of the brewer's art will find the experiences well worth the price.

Cocktails and non-alcoholic beverages also are available.

Less liquid means of sustenance include the Atlantic haddock at $2.75, which we found quite tasty and filling.

Other menu items include the Canadian halibut at $3.25, shrimp cocktail at $2.50, a lobster lunch plate at $4.95, Maryland oysters at $2.95 and clam chowder at $1.35 for a 12-ounce tureen or 70 cents per cup.

Staff member Betty Dasher says the restaurant does a family business, and most of her customers are regulars, who talk freely with her about the day-to-day events that affect their lives.

Betty, who manages the restaurant two days a week, says she wouldn't work anyplace else.

A veteran of six years at the Prince of Whales, she says she would never go back to her job in a department store.

"That's all housewives shopping," she said. They're tired, irritated, and the surroundings are quite drab.

At the restaurant, she says, she hasn't taken a vacation since she's been there, though she's entitled to a specified amount of time off each year.

"I'm afraid somebody would horn in on my job," she says.

When she saw an advertisment in the newspaper six years ago telling of a vacancy at the Prince of Whales, she jumped at the opportunity to work there.

"I love it," she says.

A QUARTER CENTURY ago developers carved Lakewood out of bean fields and set a pattern that's spread across the rest of suburbia, for good or ill.

The Lakewood pattern includes a commercial center surrounded by homes, whose residents patronize the commercial center.

As might be expected, the Lakewood center has a number of restaurants to serve the shopping center employes lunch and householders dinner. One of the more popular of these is Love's, 5300 Lakewood Blvd. (at Candlewood).

Manager Stephen Stiefel sees to it that the food is hot and the service is as quick and courteous as possible in the frenzied lunch hours.

His day includes everything from visits to the corporate offices to seeing that food orders come through to fixing the taps on the beer kegs when they malfunction.

Stiefel says business at his seven-day-a-week stand has always been brisk since he took his post seven years ago, though there may be seasonal fluctuations.

He also makes no bones about the bill of fare. The food is good quality, so business is good, he says.

In addition to a long list of sandwiches and hot dishes, the restaurant is graced with a cocktail bar which also serves beer and wine.

For those with massive appetites, the menu includes a rack of barbecue ribs at $7.25, a rack of pork or ham at $3.25 and a half chicken at $2.70.

Beef short ribs and barbecue beef are available for $3.50 each, and chicken and ribs can be had for $4.30.

Popular with the luncheon crowd are Love's sandwiches, priced from $1.75 to $2. Varieties include pork, ham and beef.

For those who missed Bastille day, there are French dip sandwiches priced from $1.90 to $2.25, with varieties of pork, ham, ground beef and beef.

For those who want more than a sandwich for lunch, there are luncheon plates from $2 to $2.65.

The luncheon plates include chicken, deep-fried fish and ground beef steak at the low end of the price range, pork and ham at $2.15 each, shrimp at $2.25, beef short ribs at $2.35, beef at $2.55, and pork ribs at $2.65.

Under the category of "hearty luncheons" are the chicken and ribs combination plate at $3.85, half a barbecued chicken at $2.75.

For those who've already eaten too well and too long, there are the "waist slimmers" plates.

Also on the menu are the melted cheese sandwich at $1.35, the tunafish sandwich at $1.45, and the ever-popular dinner salad at 95 cents.

Love's atmosphere and decor are attractive without being stuffy, a description which seems to apply as well to the waitresses and to the kind lady behind the bar who served the white wine when we visited Love's.

As long as suburbia has bartenders like that, we know it can't be too bad.

DEAR ABBY

Early to bed not wise

DEAR ABBY: I'm afraid I blew it. I am a 47-year old widow with three children, and I'm good-looking but not too smart about men.

I met this beautiful, eligible bachelor and we were attracted to each other instantly. He asked me out, and on the first date, in a weak moment, I went to bed with him.

abigail van buren

Now I could kick myself because he promised to call me soon, but it's been three days and I haven't heard from him. He said he had to go out of town on business, so maybe that's where he is.

Should I call him? Do you think he lost respect for me? If he does call again, should I play hard to get? Or do you think he'll expect me to hop into bed with him because I was a pushover on the first date?

How should I handle this? He acted like he really liked me, and he is the kind of man I want to marry. — PUSHOVER

DEAR PUSHOVER: Don't call him. If he calls you, explain that you got "carried away" and now regret it. (It's true.) If you blew it with this man, take your lumps and learn from the experience. A man may want a pushover for a date, but not for a wife.

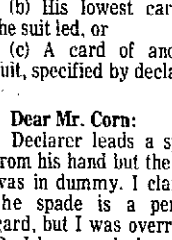

DEAR ABBY: My fiance said he wanted to present me with "a stone" that had been in his family for a long time, so naturally I was all excited when he handed me a small ring box.

Imagine how I felt when I opened it and found an ugly little gray stone which he laughingly identified as a "gallstone" — one of many that had been surgically removed from his mother!

What do you think about a clown like this? — NOT LAUGHING

DEAR NOT: His mother may have had the gallstones, but he's got the GALL.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WONDERING IN SAN ANTONIO": A blood test does not always prove who the baby's father IS, but it proves conclusively who the baby's father ISN'T.

ira corn on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn:

Are bridge tournaments conducted for monetary stakes or is it all for fun and glory?

On Dole
Baltimore

Answer: Cash prizes are specifically prohibited in any tournaments sanctioned by the ACBL. The players primarily play for the fun and the glory of winning master points with each ACBL player ranked according to the number of master points he has won. Pride in improving skill is also a significant factor.

Speaking of money, the highest gross income ever achieved in a single year by a private citizen is the estimated $105,000,000 made in 1927 by Chicago gangster Al Capone. At the time, Capone's business card listed him as "second hand furniture dealer."

Dear Mr. Corn:

What happens if a defender plays a card prematurely when it was his partner's turn to play?

Quick Shot
Stephenville, Tex.

Answer: This offense understandably carries a very stiff penalty. Declarer may require offender's partner to play:

(a) His highest card of the suit led, or

(b) His lowest card of the suit led, or

(c) A card of another suit, specified by declarer.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Declarer leads a spade from his hand but the lead was in dummy. I claimed the spade is a penalty card, but I was overruled. Do I have anybody on my side?

Appeals Review,
San Antonio

Answer: When a declarer leads out of turn, the illegal information transmitted to dummy can do his side no good, and only the defenders can benefit. The defenders can accept the lead or require the lead from dummy.

On the opposite side of the coin, when a defender leads out of turn, his partner might be able to use the authorized information and the defenders suffer the penalities of a penalty card. Sorry, but the laws are not on your side.

Dear Mr. Corn:

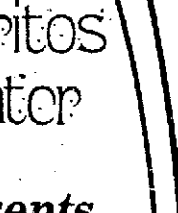

Not vulnerable, what opening bid would you suggest with:

♠ Q J 10 9 8 7 4 3 2 7/8-A

Poor House,
Scarsdale, N.Y.

Answer: Four spades. The nonvulnerable preempt promises to take within three tricks of the bid and the seven spade winners are right out of the text book.

Should you buy before you sell, or sell before you buy?

Our GUARANTEED PURCHASE PLAN eliminates the risk of owning 2 houses at the same time.

Our PLAN puts YOU in the position of a CASH BUYER!

Frequently, the purchase of a home must coincide with the sale of the buyer's previous home. This often results in a contingency sale or seller refusing to sell under these conditions. The seller never really knows whether his home is sold or not, until the contingency is removed.

Walker & Lee's Guaranteed Purchase Plan was designed to solve this dilemma. We'll guarantee — in writing — to sell your home within a stipulated period of time, at full appraised value. We'll carefully itemize all costs of sale, so you'll know in advance the exact amount of your net equity. If we don't sell your home before the time period is up, we'll buy it — at the price guaranteed — and you'll have cash. You can select from any home available, without making a contingency offer. AND YOU'LL NEVER HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT OWNING TWO HOMES AND MAKING TWO PAYMENTS.

HOMES FOR SALE

Should you buy before you sell, or sell before you buy?

Our GUARANTEED PURCHASE PLAN eliminates the risk of owning 2 houses at the same time.

Our PLAN puts YOU in the position of a CASH BUYER!

Frequently, the purchase of a home must coincide with the sale of the buyer's previous home. This often results in a contingency sale or seller refusing to sell under these conditions. The seller never really knows whether his home is sold or not, until the contingency is removed.

Walker & Lee's Guaranteed Purchase Plan was designed to solve this dilemma. We'll guarantee — in writing — to sell your home within a stipulated period of time, at full appraised value. We'll carefully itemize all costs of sale, so you'll know in advance the exact amount of your net equity. If we don't sell your home before the time period is up, we'll buy it — at the price guaranteed — and you'll have cash. You can select from any home available, without making a contingency offer. AND YOU'LL NEVER HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT OWNING TWO HOMES AND MAKING TWO PAYMENTS.

HOMES FOR SALE

Should you buy before you sell, or sell before you buy?

Our GUARANTEED PURCHASE PLAN eliminates the risk of owning 2 houses at the same time.

Our PLAN puts YOU in the position of a CASH BUYER!

Frequently, the purchase of a home must coincide with the sale of the buyer's previous home. This often results in a contingency sale or seller refusing to sell under these conditions. The seller never really knows whether his home is sold or not, until the contingency is removed.

Walker & Lee's Guaranteed Purchase Plan was designed to solve this dilemma. We'll guarantee — in writing — to sell your home within a stipulated period of time, at full appraised value. We'll carefully itemize all costs of sale, so you'll know in advance the exact amount of your net equity. If we don't sell your home before the time period is up, we'll buy it — at the price guaranteed — and you'll have cash. You can select from any home available, without making a contingency offer. AND YOU'LL NEVER HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT OWNING TWO HOMES AND MAKING TWO PAYMENTS.

Should you buy before you sell, or sell before you buy?

Our GUARANTEED PURCHASE PLAN eliminates the risk of owning 2 houses at the same time.

Our PLAN puts YOU in the position of a CASH BUYER!

Frequently, the purchase of a home must coincide with the sale of the buyer's previous home. This often results in a contingency sale or seller refusing to sell under these conditions. The seller never really knows whether his home is sold or not, until the contingency is removed.

Walker & Lee's Guaranteed Purchase Plan was designed to solve this dilemma. We'll guarantee — in writing — to sell your home within a stipulated period of time, at full appraised value. We'll carefully itemize all costs of sale, so you'll know in advance the exact amount of your net equity. If we don't sell your home before the time period is up, we'll buy it — at the price guaranteed — and you'll have cash. You can select from any home available, without making a contingency offer. AND YOU'LL NEVER HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT OWNING TWO HOMES AND MAKING TWO PAYMENTS.

Call your nearest office listed below for more information and a FREE MARKET EVALUATION ALL OFFICES OPEN 8:30 A.M. TO 8:30 P.M.

Games open—at cost of $1.5 billion

By RED SMITH
New York Times Service

MONTREAL — For the first time since the ancient Olympic Games were revived 80 years ago to encourage brotherhood among nations, country after country quit the global carnival in anger Saturday.

Nevertheless, Queen Elizabeth II of Britain formally opened the XXI Games on schedule and a capacity crowd of 70,000 in a huge, unfinished stadium cheered the gaudy spectacle arranged at an unprecedented cost of $1.5 billion.

For an hour and 10 minutes, Her Majesty stood erect with white-gloved hands folded across her pink skirt while athletes from 94 lands paraded past. Twenty-five other teams, with approximately 600 competitors, stayed away in political and social protest.

Then the Queen spoke, first in French and then in English, the prescribed 16 words:

"I declare open the Olympic Games of Montreal celebrating the XXI Olympiad of the modern era."

Folk Dancers celebrated the occasion; there were the customary speeches by Lord Killanin of Ireland, president of the International Olympic Committee, and Roger Rousseau, head of Montreal's Organizing Committee; cannon boomed; a flock of perhaps two dozen pigeons rose in ragged flight, and at long last the Olympic torch completed an electronic journey from the plains of Olympia.

The lighting of the flame is always the climax of the quadrennial opening ritual, and this time the torch's arrival in the stadium represented another first — a co-educational delivery of the fire. In the past, a single male runner has done the service, but Saturday the torch was borne by Stephane Prefontaine, a 15-year-old student in Montreal's Brebeuf College, and Sandra Henderson, 16, a tidy little gymnast who is in the 11th grade in Toronto.

The flame they carried had been lit by the rays of the sun and delivered by relay runners to Athens, where it was converted into electric impulses that were transmitted to Ottawa by satellite. There they activated a laser beam that rekindled the fire and once more relay runners took charge, turning it over to Stephane and Sandra outside the stadium.

Clutching the big torch together, they did half a lap around the track, climed to a temporary platform in the infield and lit a fire in a long-stemmed giant saucer there. Before competition begins today the flame will be moved to a tall urn just outside the running track to burn until the clambake ends on Aug. 1.

Spectators paid up to $40 for a seat in the three-tiered oval stands — unless they got tickets from scalpers and paid more — and they cheered boisterously as the marvellously colored pageant unfolded, yet there was a somber undertone through this day of sunshine and clouds. Since 1896, when Baron Pierre de Coubertin recreated the festivals of ancient Greece, the Olympics have seldom been altogether free of friction, but the bitter quarrels accompanying this renewal could create lasting harm to the notion that peoples who play together can live together in peace.

The defections were unscheduled, but the ceremonies followed a timetable as rigid as the royal succession. It was precisely 3 p.m. when a fanfare of trumpets signaled the arrival of Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh. Except for white gloves and pearls, the Queen was turned out entirely in flamingo pink, with green-stemmed doodads on her brimless pink hat.

The band played "O, Canada," and a rattle of applause raced around the massed stands. Over the public-address system came an announcement that Greece, the country where the Olympics originated, would lead the parade, as always. The announcement was to have included the exact number of countries here, but nobody knew what the number was. It was changed to "the parade of all the participating nations."

Then the Queen arose in the red-carpeted royal box and stood with gloved hands folded in front of her, while the multi-colored ranks marched and marched and marched and marched in review. Monarchies can be hard on royal feet.

Minding its manners, Greece dipped its flag politiely passing the royal box, but after that it was catch-as-catch-can with respect to the formalities. (The United States should, traditionally, "dip to no earthly king," but might if an unearthly ruler were to surface.)

What happened is usually described, by authorities in these matters, as "a riot of color." The Saudi Arabians strode by costumed like Rudolph Valentino in "The Sheik." The Bulgarian flag-bearer, one Alexendre Tomov, was a stalwart brute who held the staff at arm's length in one massive fist.

The Cameroon's delegates wore ballooning blue kaftans with the cuffs of white pants showing be-

African nations stage boycott and the movement may grow

Let the Games begin

MONTREAL — Twenty-three African nations and one from Asia boycotted the opening ceremonies of the Olympics Games Saturday in a growing racial dispute that could extend through this competition and beyond.

Most of the absent countries, if not all, are expected to remain out of the Games unless an understanding can be reached on the question of future international competition with South Africa. Negotiations described by a highly placed source as "extremely delicate" were taking place Saturday night in an effort to solve the dispute.

If a settlement is not reached, the boycott could expand as the Games proceed. The issue is the presence in the Games of New Zealand, whose government has permitted sports relations with South Africa despite that country's racial separation policy and recent race riots.

It appeared that at least some African countries were out of the Games for good, regardless of the outcome of the talks with New Zealand. This group inclued Kenya, Tanzania, Nigeria and Zambia.

THE AFRICAN boycott Saturday consisted of 17 predominantly black nations, five Arab countries sympathetic to the cause and one Asian nation, Sri Lanka, formerly Ceylon. Also missing from the parade at Olympic Stadium, for a different reason, was Nationalist China, which withdrew rather than march under the unwanted designation of Taiwan.

Asked Saturday night if his country's protest would be continued, a spokesman for the Egyptian delegation said, "maybe not. We hope not. But we have wait and see."

"This protest is not limited to the opening ceremony or even the Olympic Games," another source said. "It will continue."

Support from other Arab, Asian and Caribbean countries also was believed to be developing.

Top Olympic officials from New Zealand conferred Saturday with several of the African leaders in an apparent effort to reach a reconciliation. But the talks were too late to prevent at least some of the countries from refusing to march in the opening parade.

"It's unfortunate this decision had to be made at the 11th hour," said Isaac Lugonzo, chairman of Kenya's National Sports Council. "But we cannot sacrifice principle for the sake of getting gold."

Kenya, with a delegation of 132, had several gold medal prospects among its 32 track and field athletes. Lugonzo, who flew here from Kenya Friday night, said flatly: "We will not align ourselves with a country that has sports ties with South Africa."

The withdrawals mean the Games would proceed without such athletes as John Akii-Bua of Uganda, the defending champion in the 400-meter hurdles; Mike Boit of Kenya, a favorite in the 800; Ethiopia's distance specialists Tua Eshetu and Miruts Yifter; Nigeria's 400-meter challengers, Dele Udo and Felix Amadiyi; and Tanzania's 1,500-meter ace Filbert Bayi who was supposed to face New Zealand's John Walker in one of the feature events of the Games.

Amost every men's track event from the 400 meters up had a possible medal winner from Africa. Besides Udo and Amadiyi in the 400, Stephen Chepkwony and Charles Asati of Kenya and Claver Kamanya of Tanzania were serious threats.

ETHIOPIA'S Eshetu won the steeplechase tuneup race last week and his team's Yohannes Mohammed had very strong times during the year. Boit and Sam Kipkurkat of Kenya were strong in the 800 and Boit was also a threat in the 1,500 with fellow Kenyan Wilson Waigwa and Haibu Ebba of Ethiopia.

The issue of black Africa vs. white-ruled South Africa, with New Zealand, completely overshadowed the departure of Nationalist China, which withdrew from the games Friday rather than officially call itself Taiwan. A handful of Taiwanese delegates checked out of their hotel almost unnoticed shortly before noon.

Much of the day's political drama took place in the Queen Elizabeth Hotel, where the International Olympic Committee held a morning session before going by bus at 1 p.m. to the main stadium for the opening ceremony.

At a noontime press briefing, Monique Berlioux of the IOC brushed off the African question with the comment that only one country, to her knowledge, had formally left Olympic Village. The reference was to Nigeria, which flew its team home Friday night on an airliner diverted from London.

Rhoden hurls, bats Dodgers over Chicago

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

Walter Alston planned to celebrate his 2,000th career victory Saturday night much the same way he celebrated the first 1,999.

"I'll have a good meal, go to bed and be on time for tomorrow's game," the 64-year-old Alston said after becoming only the sixth manager to win 2,000 games.

He reached the milestone as unbeaten Rick Rhoden was winning his ninth in a row this year, a come-from-behind 5-4 triumph over the Chicago Cubs before 37,642 Dodger Stadium fans, the Dodgers' fourth successive victory, seventh in their last nine and seventh in a row over the lowly Cubbies.

"I can recall only about a half-dozen of those 2,000 being laughers," Alston said as the Dodgers remained five games back of the Cincinnati Reds in the National League West.

"I'd trade a thousand of 'em for about 60 more wins this year and then maybe we'll have a good shot. That was our 50th win. I don't know how many it's going to take...109, 110, maybe more...but it's certainly going to take over 100 to beat the Reds."

After the first inning Saturday it appeared Alston's 2,000th win would have to come another day.

The Cubs jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first inning against the 23-year-old Rhoden on Rick Monday's 17th homer, coming on the first pitch of the game, and Steve Swisher's bases-loaded, three-run double.

But the Cubs' pitching being what it is—in a word, grim—the lead lasted less than four innings.

Rhoden himself put the Dodgers over the top with a two-run single in the fourth, his second hit of the game and 15th of the season.

The tall righthander found the groove after the shaky first inning, permitted the Cubs just three hits the rest of the way and struck out seven, high for his career. In his second full season in the majors he's 9-0.

What about 20 wins?

"I haven't thought too much about that," he said. "With a five-man rotation like we have it'll be pretty hard. I'll probably only have 15 or 16 more starts.

"All I'm interested in is winning enough for us to win the division. We're playing well now, as well as we've played all year."

The Dodgers started back against Steve Stone in the second with doubles by Steve Garvey and Dusty Baker for their first run.

In the third they scored two more runs with Rhoden's single triggering the rally. Dave Lopes followed with a double and Bill Buckner's scoring fly ball scored Rhoden. Reggie Smith then singled home Lopes.

The Dodgers loaded the bases with no outs in the fourth when Garvey, who had three of the Dodgers' nine hits, and Bill Russell opened with singles and Baker was hit by a pitch.

The South rises in Shrine, 28-20

By KEN PIVERNETZ
Staff Writer

The South took advantage of five interceptions and a half dozen North fumbles to win the 25th Shrine Game Saturday night, 28-20, at the Rose Bowl.

Despite the number of turnovers, a crowd of 37,842 got its money's worth offensively as the two all-star high school football teams totalled 764 yards.

The South was sparked by St. Paul quarterback Craig Johnston, who passed for 163 yards and one touchdown, plus Poly's Artie Hargrove, who led the Rebels in rushing with 93 yards on 13 carries.

The South scored twice in the first 10 minutes, then used that cushion and a third quarter 40-yard interception return by Louie Campos of San Pedro to snap a three-year drought against the North since the game was switched to an all-Southern California matchup.

Campos, a 210-pound defensive tackle, grabbed off a wobbly pass by San Fernando's Kenny Moore with 34 seconds remaining in the third period and rambled the distance to give his team a 21-14 lead. Moore was pressured by Ken Miller of Bell before he released the ball.

The South proceeded to put the game away the next time it had possession, driving 51 yards in 10 plays, Johnston capping the march by throwing six yards on fourth down to Vic Rakhshani of Edison.

Johnston was particularly effective in the first half when he threw for 150 of his eventual 163 yards.

Moore, bound for USC, scored twice for the North on runs of 51 and one yards.

Hargrove got his TD when he capped an 82-yard drive with the opening kickoff, scoring over right tackle from the one. Johnston completed four passes in the drive which consumed nearly six and one-half minutes.

Carson's Van Wiese set up the second south TD less than three minutes later, recovering a fumble at midfield.

Samoa Samoa immediately made the most of his first appearance at quarterback for the South, taking only three plays to get his team on the scoreboard.

Reds blitz Expos

CINCINNATI (AP) — Joe Morgan and George Foster drilled consecutive home runs in the the first inning, powering the Cincinnati Reds to a 4-1 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday night as rookie righthander Santo Alcala improved his record to 8-2.

Morgan slammed a three-run homer and Foster followed with a solo shot to key a four-run outburst off Woodie Fryman (8-7).

Alcala scattered five hits, including a solo homer by Andy Thornton in the second inning, as the Reds wrapped up their season series against the Expos by winning nine of 12 games.

The loss left Fryman with a 2-12 career mark against Cincinnati.

Alcala, who made the Reds' spring roster because his minor league options had expired this year, struck out seven Expos and walked four, while posting his second complete game of the season.

Royals win, but Hassler doesn't, 2-1

KANSAS CITY (AP) — George Brett, the American League's leading hitter, belted a Luis Tiant pitch into the right field bullpen leading off the ninth-inning Saturday, giving the Kansas City Royals a 2-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Tiant (10-7) held the Royals to six hits until Brett, batting .365, came through with his fifth homer of the year. Mark Littell relieved Andy Hassler at the start of the sixth inning and struck out five while running his record to 6-3.

The Royals, leaders in the American League West, scratched out one run off Tiant in the fourth when Amos Otis singled and scored on John Mayberry's double. Boston tied it in the sixth on two walks and a single by Rick Burleson.

Brett raised his major league-leading batting average to .366.

"The more we play, the better we think we are," Brett said of his Royal teammates who increased their lead to 10 games over Texas.

Brett leads the league in hits, 128; total bases, 176; slugging percentage, .501; and triples, nine. He says he could hit more homers if he was inclined to do so.

"I like to use the whole field," he said. "I don't go for homers. I try to hit the ball where it's pitched."

Hassler pitched well enough to win but, by getting no decision, remains periously close to one of sports' most embarrassing records.

His 17 consecutive losses, dating back to April 29, 1975, are just two short of the American League record. He had a 1-0 lead when he left in the sixth inning with a slight muscle pull.

If Littell had shut out the Sox the rest of the way, Hassler would have received the win. But he didn't.

Tanana wins 11th as Angels roll, 7-3

BALTIMORE (AP) — Bruce Bochte, Dave Chalk and Tommy Davis each drove in two runs, leading the Angels to a 7-3 victory Saturday night which snaped a five-game losing streak and ended Baltimore's winning streak at six.

An infield out by Bochte and Chalk's single accounted for two runs in the second inning, and both drove in runs with singles in the fourth for a 4-0 lead.

The Angels, who had lost eight in a row to the Orioles, tallied three more in the fifth on two bunt singles, three stolen bases, an RBI single by Bobby Bonds and a two-run safety by Davis.

Frank Tanana (11-6) benefited from an 11-hit attack in the first 4 1-3 innings against loser Rudy May (6-7) and Ross Grimsley. Rookie Fred Holdsworth, Baltimore's third pitcher, retired 14 in a row in his major league debut.

Lee May hit his 15th home run in the fourth for Baltimore after the Angels allowed Reggie Jackson's pop fly to fall for a single. Jackson doubled home a run in the fifth.

Hits by Davis and Ron Jackson launched the first rally against May, who has yet to win for Baltimore since being acquired a month ago from the New York Yankees in a 10-player deal.

With two out in the fourth, Dan Briggs doubled and scored on Bochte's single. Bochte took second on the throw to the plate and Chalk's RBI single finished May.

Dave Collins and Jerry Remy beat out bunts to open the Angel fifth and moved up on a double steal. Bonds singled to score Collins, stole second and Davis followed with hs two-run single.

Tanana, 6-2 lifetime against Baltimore, hurled his third consecutive complete game. The lefthander, who ranks second to teammate Nolan Ryan among major league strikeout leaders, fanned six to run his total to 136 while spacing eight hits.

The Angels will send another southpaw, Sid Monge, against the Orioles today in an attempt to earn a split of the four-game set. Monge, 4-3, will be opposed by Dave Pagan, 2-3, and KTLA, Ch. 5, will provide a telecast at 11 a.m., PDT.

Following the Baltimore series, the Angels move on to Milwaukee for a twi-night doubleheader Monday against the Brewers. Another single game with Milwaukee follows Tuesday night before the Angels end the trip at Cleveland Wednesday and Thursday.

Error helps A's, 3-0

DETROIT (AP) — Oakland scored two runs on throwing errors by Detroit catcher Bruce Kimm and rookie Mike Norris fired a no-hitter for 5 2-3 innings and wound up with his third victory as the A's blanked the Tigers 3-0 Saturday night.

Although walking six batters and hitting another, Norris didn't give up a hit until a two-out double by Willie Horton in the sixth inning. Norris (3-2) gave up a single in the seventh and was relieved in the eighth by Rollie Fingers after giving up a leadoff single to Ron LeFlore.

Oakland scored in the opening inning off Vern Ruhle (5-6) when Claudell Washington walked, Don Baylor singled and Kimm threw wildly to third on a double steal, allowing Washington to score.

Yankees win fifth in row

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Graig Nettles pounded three hits, including a double and a homer, and drove in three runs as the New York Yankees beat Texas 7-5 Saturday night for their fifth consecutive victory and the Rangers' 10th consecutive defeat.

Nettles doubled to climax a two-run first inning, singled and later scored in the third and hit his 13th homer with a man on in the fifth. The Yankee third baseman also had two RBI in New York's 3-0 win Friday night.

Nettles homer down the right field line came off Texas reliever Mike Bacsik, who replaced starter and loser Steve Barr (2-5) in the second inning.

Dock Ellis (11-4) pitched 6 1-3 innings of five-hit ball to notch the victory, his seventh in a row after four successive losses. Dick Tidrow picked up his third save in four-games by retiring Jeff Burroughs with the bases loaded in the seventh.

He was racked for four runs in the ninth on four hits, including a three-run homer by Mike Hargrove, his fifth of the year, and a run-scoring triple by Roy Howell.

Thurman Munson, the All-Star catcher making a rare appearance in the outfield, singled home Mickey Rivers in both the first and second innings as New York scored in four of the first five innings to take a commanding 6-0 lead.

The victory boosted New York's East Division lead to 12 games over second-place Baltimore.

Indians' Waits blanks Twins, 4-0

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Rick Waits pitched his first major league shutout, a four-hitter Saturday night, sparking the Cleveland Indians to a 4-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

The 24-year-old southpaw struck out eight, walked four and was helped by three double plays. Waits (3-4) faced only four batters over the minimum while going the distance for the first time this season.

Cleveland scored its first two runs without an RBI. The Indians scored in the first inning on a double play ground ball and added an unearned run in the fourth off losing pitcher Pete Redfern (2-6).

Rick Manning tripled in Frank Duffy in the Indians' ninth and scored on a shallow fly ball to right field when outfielder Dan Ford uncorked a wild throw to the plate.

Duffy had three singles to lead the Indians' 11-hit attack.

Minnesota recorded three double plays in a game watched by 22,290 fans on OldTimers Night.

The Indians loaded the bases in the first inning with no outs on two walks by Redfern and a Duffy single. However, they scored only one as Rico Carty bounced into a double play and George Hendrick grounded to short.

Cleveland added an unearned run in the fourth when Carty scored on a throwing error by Smalley.

Montefusco stifles Phils

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — John Montefusco pitched a five-hitter and Larry Herndon hit a tw-run single Saturday, leading the San Francisco Giants to a 4-1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Herndon's single came with the bases loaded in the second inning against Philadelphia starter Tom Underwood (5-2) and gave the Giants a 3-0 lead. Montefusco (8-8) struck out five batters without a walk.

The Phillies' only run came in the sixth on Dave Cash's infield single and Larry Bowa's triple.

Singles by Bobby Murcer, Ken Reitz and Chris Speier in the second produced San Francisco's first run. Another infield hit by Reitz scored Gary Matthews in the third.

The Phillies had gone scoreless for 17 consecutive innings before getting their run off Montefusco.

The performance by Ed Halicki, who shut out Philadelphia on Friday, gave the San Francisco pitching staff its first complete-game victories of the season.

Montefusco faced the minimum of 12 batters through the firt four innings. The Giants completed double plays behind him in both the fourth and fifth innings.

Montefusco had been belted by the Phillies in two previous starts, yielding eight runs in 11 innings.

Andujar outduels Seaver

NEW YORK (AP) — Cesar Cedeno smacked a solo homer, his 15th of the season, with two out in the first inning, and Houston rookie Joaquin Andujar outdueled Tom Seaver as the Astros beat the New York Mets, 1-0.

Cedeno's drive hit just above the orange line on the brick wall adjacent to the visiting team's bullpen in left field.

The loss lowered Seaver's record to 9-6 and was his first after four consecutive wins. Seaver last lost on June 9.

Andujar, now 6-5, allowed only two runners to get past first base as he set the Mets down on five hits.

Besides Cedeno, only one other Astro got as far as second base against Seaver, who pitched a three-hitter for eight innings.

Shua tops Lakewood

John White lost his no-hitter and shutout in the final inning Saturday at Millikan High but still held on to the victory as the Shua Rockets bested Lakewood, 3-1, in American Legion play.

Mark Wedel paced the Shua offense with a pair of hits and one RBI.

Gilbert Mendoza hurled a five-hitter while collecting two hits and three RBI in San Pedro's 9-2 win over Carson at Harbor JC. Mendoza fanned five and walked two in going the distance.

Terrence Carney and Phil Todd combined on a two-hitter to lead Alamitos Bay past the N.L.B. Panthers, 4-1, at Blair Field.

Carney had a no-hitter with one out in the fifth inning before a double, single and a pair of walks with two out forced him out of the game. Todd came on to record the third out and blank the Panthers the rest of the way.

Jim Wendell was 3-for-4 and scored twice to lead the Alamitos attack.

Motor Patrol picked up a forfeit victory over Peterson in a second Blair field contest.

OWNERS EXPECTED TO RATIFY PACT

Associated Press

Owners of the 24 major league baseball teams are expected to ratify a four-year contract Monday—with the players following suit later in the week—leaving the National Football League as the only major sports league whose players are not under contract.

Neither baseball nor players' union officials see any major roadblocks.

"I believe, as the commissioner has already said, he feels optimistic it will be ratified," a spokesman in commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office said.

"But the only real positive answer in terms of what's going to happen is to hang on until Monday," he said. "Until then, it's really hard to say."

Marvin Miller, executive director of the baseball players union, said he had talked to about a dozen players since the owners' meeting last week but mostly to answer questions.

Henderson's HR lifts Braves over Pirates

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ken Henderson hit a three-run homer and Atlanta pitcher Dick Ruthven snapped Pittsburgh's four-game win streak by scattering 10 hits to lead the Braves past Pittsburgh 10-2 Saturday.

It was the first win for Ruthven (11-8) in three decisions this season against Pittsburgh.

Henderson started the rout in the first inning when he hit one of Bruce Kison's fastballs off the foul pole screen in left field with Rowland Office and Willie Montanez aboard on a single and a walk.

The Braves scored two unearned runs in the second, a single run in the third and four more in a four-hit fifth inning which included doubles by Darrel Chaney and Biff Pocoroba.

Ruthven's bid for a shutout was ended in the eighth when Frank Taveras beat out and infield single, went to second on a balk, stole third and scored on a double by Rennie Stennett. Stennett came home on Willie Stargell's single.

Henderson's homer, his eighth of the season, came with two out after Office singled and Kison walked Montanez on a 3-2 pitch.

Denny in 4-hitter; Padres fall again

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Righthander John Denny hurled a four-hitter Saurday to spark the St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-1 National League victory over the San Diego Padres.

Denny struck out three and walked two en route to his fourth complete game as he improved his record to 5-4.

Second baseman Mike Tyson led a 13-hit Cardinal attack against five Padres pitchers with four singles and an RBI.

The loss was the seventh in a row for the Padres, marking their longest losing streak of the season.

Denny held San Diego scoreless until two were out in the ninth.

Hegan, Colborn pace Brewers over Chisox

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Hegan drove in three runs with a two-run homer and a sacrifice fly and Jim Colborn shackled Chicago on seven hits Saturday night to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 9-2 victory over the White Sox.

Hegan slugged his second homer of the year in the sixth inning after Darrell Porter had walked.

Sixto Lezcano's two-run double keyed a three-run second inning that put the Brewers ahead after Jorge Orta had homered to give the White Sox a 1-0 lead.

Rich Gossage (5-8) was the loser, giving up six runs in six innings.

Colborn, 6-10, allowed four hits in the first three innings before retiring 11 batters in a row until Brian Downing broke the spell in the seventh with a single.

The Brewers added two more runs in the eighth on Hegan's sacrifice fly and a run-scoring single by Yount. They completed the scoring when Porter drove in a run with a triple in the ninth.

Jorge Orta put the White Sox ahead in the first inning with his 11th homer, but the Brewers took the lead with three runs in the top of the second, with Lezcano driving in the last two.

Tim Shaw: Only one shot at gold and glory

By DAVE WIELENGA
Staff Writer

MONTREAL — A few months ago Tim Shaw could have legitimately considered changing his name — to Tim Shah.

The blond 18-year-old from Long Beach virtually ruled the world in the art of freestyle swimming with world records at distances of 200, 400 and 1,500 meters.

During last month's United States Olympic Trials at the Long Beach Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool, the spelling could have been changed again — this time to Tim Pshaw.

The former Wilson High wonder was suddenly beset with a pair of maladies that were cruel in their untimeliness. A shoulder injury and a mysterious case of anemia not only forced him to surrender the last of his world marks but pushed him precariously close to missing the Olympic team entirely.

People with over-eager memories of 1972 had already picked out Shaw's new name for the XXI Olympiad — he was to be christened another Mark Spitz. Instead of a shot at a pocket full of golds, however, Shaw's Olympic hopes now rest solely in the 400-meter freestyle.

The Sullivan Award winner would be happier with a bit more activity.

"It's harder when you're entered in only one event," he said, "because you know that when you jump in the pool it's your only chance.

"Coach (James) Counsilman doesn't want me to go into it cold on Thursday so he's having me swim one of the legs in the 800-meter relay preliminary the day before. Also, that will give one of our guys a little more rest for the relay final Wednesday night."

Yet Shaw is not lamenting his situation, only dissapointed that he could not perform up to his usual level during the Olympic Trials.

"I'm not dissapointed in myself because I wasn't expecting anything," he said. "At the trials guys always come out of the woodwork and turn in great marks. It wasn't going to be easy to make the team in any case."

Now that he has reached Montreal, his goal is obvious.

"To win," Shaw stated quickly. "I'm going to swim for first place. Everyone should do that. No one should swim for second."

According to qualifying times, victory should not prove especially elusive in Shaw's preliminary race Thursday morning. A Hungarian, Zoltan Wladar, carries a clocking of 3:59.30 but that is almost five seconds slower than Shaw's qualifying effort of 3:53.50 in which he chased teammate Brian Goodell to the world record.

The final on Thursday evening will be another matter but at least Shaw knows where his competition lies.

"The Americans," he said. "Goodell (3:53.00) and Casey Converse (3:53.70) are the guys to beat. Steve Holland (3:57.10) of Australia might also be in there."

However, Shaw refused to predict what kind of time will be necessary to win.

"The time doesn't matter. World records don't matter either, especially in the Olympics. World records can be achieved on any day, at any time. You can win an Olympic gold medal only once every four years."

Despite his determination, Shaw remains a question mark. Has his anemia had any lingering effects? What kind of emotional toll has been taken by his recent hardships? And isn't an Olympiad a treacherous place to attempt a comeback?

"There is no problem with anemia," Shaw insisted. "It's been completely cured with a series of iron shots. I've been swimming well and feeling good.

"I don't think I'm making a comeback," he continued. "I got second place to a world record time in the Olympic Trials so I don't have to make a comeback."

Shaw did admit to experiencing some doubts in himself during his illness, doubts that prompted thoughts of retirement.

"This year it came very close to not being fun anymore," he said. "I was sick and I didn't know it so I worked harder and harder but kept going slower. I couldn't understand it. I thought about quitting after the Olympics because I'll never continue swimming when it is no longer fun."

Now, however, the Long Beach State sophomore-to-be is even entertaining thoughts of the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

"I would like to compete in either swimming or water polo," he said, "but I'll just have to do my best and wait and see what happens."

That is also Shaw's plan for his races Thursday.

"It's the most anyone can ask," he said.

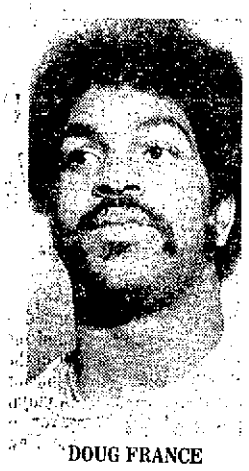

France recalls life with Woody, talks of future

Doug France twice quit the Ohio State football team during the 1973 season because he thought Woody Hayes wasn't being fair to him. Today he is heir-apparent to retired Charlie Cowan as starting Ram offensive tackle.

The primary virtue of the 6-5, 275-pounder during the bad times and the good was confidence. The Dayton, Ohio, native exudes more confidence than Jimmy Carter.

"Taking Charlie Cowan's spot, I know everyone's gonna be looking at me," said Doug during the first week of Ram drills at Fullerton. "Last year when I replaced Charlie when he was hurt, the coaches knew he'd be back. Now it's different.

"People will be trying to press me for the job, but they've gotta work for it because I'm gonna be pressing, too. But this time I've got the lead.

DOUG FRANCE

"I don't think Charlie would have left if he didn't know I was ready for his job."

THREE SETS of people are responsible for France's confidence—Ralph Staub, his Ohio State line coach ("some coaches can't and don't communicate, but he did and really helped me"), his wife, Laura ("she understands my moods"), and his parents.

"Without my parents I probably wouldn't be at the level I am today," claimed Doug. "I quit Ohio State in my junior year, but they talked me into going back. In spring practice I was the starting tackle, but when I returned for fall practice I was second-string tight end.

"I thought that was unfair because I knew I was good enough to be a starter, so I quit before the season even started.

"But when I returned, the situation got worse, so I quit again. I got on a bicycle and headed for Canada. My parents talked me into returning a second time, but Woody Hayes said something that made an impression on me, too.

"He said, 'It's not what you're running from, but what you're running to, that's important.' He was right, but I was second string all season, both at tackle and tight end. Looking back, I guess I opened my mouth too much."

FRANCE HAS mixed feelings about Woody.

"Woody is strictly a football coach, nothing else," sighed Doug. "He has no time for anything but football. After games, he'd lock himself in a room and look at films, and we wouldn't see him until practice Monday.

"We thought after a game that he could talk with us and see how we were doing. I thought we should have seen him more. Out of fear, we thought we weren't supposed to talk with him.

"He does a lot for people, though. Like walking on the campus and stopping a fight, or calling Nixon and saying he's on Nixon's side when nobody else is.

"He's got so many good points, but so many bad ones, too. He's something else."

WHY, THEN, did France go to Ohio State?

"My parents liked Woody. They really liked him! He lets parents know that he'll make their kids go back to college if they don't get a degree in four years. He lets them know their son will get an education, no matter what. Parents think he's neat.

"He came to my house and to my high school, and THAT impressed me. I didn't feel the same after I got to Ohio State, but Woody sure gets you started great.

"In a few years I'd really like to go back and talk to him. I'm too young now. He respects older people who have done something, but he doesn't listen to kids."

THE 23-YEAR-OLD France was an all-Big 10 tight end his senior year, but he's glad the Rams assigned him to the interior line.

"I'd rather play where I am," said Doug, who bought a house in Westminster for Laura and their daughter, Kristin, nine months. "I didn't catch enough passes at tight end, anyway. I was the biggest tight end in football, so all they let me do was block.

"As a tight end, I felt my name should always be in the paper. As offensive tackle, I know it won't be in the paper much. In fact, my wife is trying to fill a scrapbook and she's having trouble.

"I knew the Rams had Bob Klein, too, so they didn't need me at tight end. It's a better thing for me to battle inside.

"I always wanted to be a fullback, though. I really enjoyed that position as a sophomore in high school when I was 6-5 and 230. I powered over people. I admire ball carriers and I love to see them in film highlights. It's neat watching the backs run with the ball."

DID FRANCE learn anything from Cowan?

"A whole lot," was the reply. "We talked a lot and I learned also just by watching Charlie. The way he finessed people was something. It'd be a completely different ball game for me today without Charlie's help.

"I have to do my job step by step, though. I know I can't be up there with Charlie right now because you can't get 15 years in one year.

"Good attitude and performances by Dennis Harrah (Joe Scibelli's heir-apparent) and myself will help the whole team. Players on other teams will say, 'Those two young guys are doing their job,' and they won't think that the Rams have been weakened because Cowan and Scibelli are gone."

FRANCE FEELS he's off to a better start in camp this year than last season.

"I started off too slow last year. I was working every play at three- quarter speed. I tried to pace myself. But now I've started faster and am going 110 per cent on every play.

"I came into camp a little heavy (287), but I'm down to 280 and will be 275. I'm eating only salads, and that's doing it. (Note: For what it's worth, the Ram media guide lists Doug's weight at 260.)

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

"But I'm ready to step into the starting lineup regularly. I feel the coaches are confident about me, too, or else they wouldn't have let Charlie retire."

BRAINS, NOT brawn entirely, is the big difference Doug sees between college and pro ball.

"At Ohio State we ran over people. You can't do that in the pros. There's more to it than that. All we did at Ohio State was run the ball down the opponents' throats. You have to think in the pros."

France has a commendable, though mind-staggering, goal: To change the United States!

"It's a big goal and I know by the time it is reached that I'll be 85 or 90 years old, or dead," conceded Doug. "But I want to get kids when they're young and teach them right from wrong, and how people can live together.

"We raised whites on one side of the street and blacks on the other side. Now that we're communicating, we're still not getting along.

"We pick a president, then tear him down. That's not right.

"If I get people to feel that they're good and can communicate with each other, the whole world will be better. Being a good person is more important than being a big star."

The Rams are confident they have both in Doug France.

Montreal

CHINA FLAG 'SCHEME' IS REJECTED

MONTREAL (AP) — A scheme to smuggle a Republic of China flag into the Olympic Stadium and carry it in Saturday's opening ceremony was scrapped at the last minute.

A source close to the Nationalist Chinese Delegation, which has left Montreal, said five men, two of them Americans, had offered $100,000 if two Chinese agreed to the plan. The plan was rejected as being too political, said the source, who asked that his name not be used.

"They would have been wearing American uniforms and they would have been carrying the Chinese flag on a umbrellatype pole," said the source.

" They would have been at the back of the U.S. delegation and once they got into the stadium they would have slowed down until there was a gap and then they would have shot the flag up the pole."

The source said the plan was developed by persons unconnected to the Taiwan delegation.

Fear, complacency stalk swim squad

MONTREAL (AP)—The American men will be fighting complacency and the American women will be fighting fear as the two halves of the United States' swimming team find themselves in different power positions at the 21st Olympic games.

The swimming competition begins today with heats and semifinals in the women's 100-meter freestyle, the men's 100-meter backstroke and heats and finals in the men's 200-meter butterfly and the women's 400-meter medley relay.

On paper and in the minds of most nations, the American men are the dominating force with a good opportunity to improve their performance of 1972, when they won nine gold medals, seven in events swum by Mark Spitz. The women, however, find themselves in the position of the underdogs for the first time since the late 1950s.

The American men have six world record holders on the team, including Brian Goodell and John Hencken, who each have a pair of world marks. The American women, winners of eight gold medals at Munich, only have one world record holder, Shirley Babashoff, who will be competing in five individual events and two relays.

THE EAST German women, who have never won an Olympic gold medal in swimming, stand a good chance of winning nearly all of them this time. They hold world records in 12 of the 13 Olympic events and are led by super sprinter Kornelia Ender, qualifying to compete in three individual events and two relays.

Miss Ender is so versatile and good that she will not be competing in the backstroke, an event in which she held the world record at 100 meters earlier this year.

One American woman admitted that several swimmers on the team fear the East Germans, but U.S. coach Jack Nelson won't concede anything.

"On paper, East Germany comes in as top dog," he said. "But races aren't decided on paper. They're decided between the blocks.

"Undoubtedly, this is the greatest women's swimming team in the history of the United States."

Olympic shooters are up in arms

MONTREAL (AP) — Olympic shooters are up in arms because they say they are being treated more like potential assassins than athletes.

"We are having two kinds of games here—Olympic Games and police games," complains Dr. Jules Sobrian of Omemee, Ontario, a general practitioner who specializes in rapid fire pistol for the Canadian team.

Doc Counsilman, coach of the U.S. men's team, feels the same way about his entourage.

"I feel this is probably the best international team we've ever had," he said. "We have a potential winner in every event. In the past, we've had superstars. Now we have much greater depth. There isn't even a single event in which we won't be contenders.

"I anticipate the men will win half the gold medals and lots of silver and bronze, too."

THE WORLD records that survive this blitz by the American men and the East German women will be the exception, rather than the rule. Counsilman said he expects every men's mark to fall, except Mark Spitz' standard in the 100-meter butterfly.

Spitz set the 100 butterfly record at Munich, one of four world records he established in individual races. He also swam on three record-setting relay teams.

No one willl win seven gold medals here, although Miss Babashoff, a 19-year-old student at Golden West College, will swim in seven events: Miss Ender will be in five events and backstroke king John Naber probably five.

But the domination of the Olympic Games is not likely to come from one man or one woman. It will come from two teams: The American men and the East German women.

Earl McCullouch: Rams give him second chance

RICH ROBERTS

"I've got another chance to start over again, and with a different outlook. There's no way I'd be back out here if I didn't think I could do it." — Earl McCullouch.

Many performers have lost by playing it safe, later to rue the day. Others have won by disdaining caution.

But what of the competitors who failed for trying too hard? There must be room somewhere in sport's hall of fame for the glorious failures, the flops of gung ho.

Maybe Joe Frazier shouldn't have tried to trade punches with George Foreman, a bigger, younger and stronger fighter. But wasn't Joe's effort magnificent?

Sixty-four years later, race fans still speak of Ralph DePalma futilly pushing his crippled race car toward the finish line at Indianapolis.

Aside from the carnival aroma, give Evel Knievel credit for allowing himself to be shot into the bottom of a canyon aboard a two-wheeled rocket he called a motorcycle.

If you attended the 1968 U.S. Olympic track and field trials in the Coliseum, you must remember Earl McCullouch, who at the time was the world's best hurdler.

RUMORS WERE about that Earl the Pearl, also a football star at Long Beach's Poly High, City College and USC, would sign a pro football contract with the Detroit Lions if he didn't qualify. The Lions had drafted him on the first round six months earlier. There was speculation that McCullouch would sign even if he did qualify, forfeiting a trip to Mexico City.

"I was determined that day to break the world record," says Earl. "I never liked running on that track, but I was trying to make up my mind whether to sign and I knew it might be my last race.

"I came out of the blocks real well, and I guess I was running so fast that when I came up on the eighth hurdle I caught it with my spikes as I was coming up."

McCullouch looked like a man who had stumbled into a bicycle in the dark. He didn't quite fall down, but by the time he recovered his balance the field had caught up—from about 10 yards behind—and he jogged in last.

"With the winning time 13.6, I think I would have run 13-flat that day," Earl says. "But I thought, being close to signing, if this is the way to go out, then I'm going out."

EARL DID SIGN then, of course, and became the National Football League's rookie of the year by catching 40 passes for the Lions.

But eight years later, those 40 receptions are still a career high, and so his athletic career has circled back to the Rams' training camp at Cal State Fullerton.

Released by the Lions after the strike in 1974, dropped after a three-game stint with New Orleans and unredeemed by a partial season as a player-coach with the Portland Thunder of the defunct World Football League, McCullouch is striving mightily to fight his way back from injury at the shaky age of 30. As always, he's giving it his best shot.

"I tore a quad muscle up in Portland last season," he says, tenderly rubbing a leg. "I went to George Gish, a physical therapist in Long Beach, and he worked me strenuously this past off-season.

"We got my leg feeling pretty good so I said, 'Well, I might as well go give it a try.' A month ago I worked out with the Rams and I was running real well."

CHUCK KNOX and assistant Lee Bennett, the receivers coach, both were with McCullouch at Detroit, along with trainer Gary Tuthill.

Earl says, "Tuthill was telling me this week, 'Hey, for an old man you still run pretty good.' "

Norm Pollom, the Rams' longtime scout who is now director of personnel, recalls giving McCullouch the 40-yard test at USC.

"I never clocked anybody as fast as Earl McCullouch," Pollom says. "I timed him in 4.4—and don't believe all those 4.3s and other 4.4s you hear about. I remember it well because O.J. (Simpson) came over and said he could run that fast. I said, 'Okay, let's see.' I got him three straight times in 4.5."

McCullouch smiles.

"I remember that day. Of course, 4.4 was back when I'd just got through working out for track. But my speed right now is not bad. I'm probably running 4.5 or 4.55—right in there.

"Even though I'm 30, I feel I've never had a chance to play the way I'm capable of playing. Now I've got another chance to start over again, and with a different outlook. There's no way I'd back out here if I didn't think I could do it.

"Like I told Chuck, 'I'm gonna give you my all.' When you get older, your muscles get sore and it takes you longer to recover than when you're 22 or 23. But I feel it's in the mind, too."

EARL BELIEVES his 30-year-old head might give him an edge over all those flashy rookies with the 20-year-old legs.

"If you've got experience on your side you react subconsciously to certain situations. When you're first coming in, you're trying to grasp things—plus, I feel I've still got a lot of speed left."

McCullouch does not believe he is conning himself, as he was when he attempted a hurdling comback with the professional ITA two years ago.

"I'd been working out and I felt good," he says, "but when you're off for six years without going over a hurdle you just can't come back that fast."

He ran one race—or part of a race—in a meet at the L.A. Sports Arena.

"I tried to run just on instinct," he says. "I felt good for two or three hurdles, I was in the lead . . . but then my form got kind of ragged."

McCULLOUCH'S BID with the Rams is a far more serious venture.

"I'm not in the best financial situation," he admits. "I lost money in the stock market—so many people have—and I've spent money unwisely. Sometimes you don't listen to advice or you don't see the picture. Again, experience is the best teacher."

But he does have other prized assets.

"Three beautiful children and a beautiful wife, Peggy. We just moved back to Long Beach. I lived out in Westminster for about six months and got a chance to do most of my thinking. I'm going to be around the city now and hope to stay there and find something to do in the off-season.

"Being back out here is good. Things weren't so good back in Detroit . . . the cold weather, and I didn't see us going anywhere."

The Lions have finished second in the NFC Central the last seven seasons.

"I love to win," Earl says. "I come from winning schools—Poly, LBCC, USC. It's imbedded in me. I know it's going to be tough. I'll be sore, I'll get tired and I'll be hurtin'.

"But I'm not slacking up at all. I've come to play."

Activity brisk in village despite fences, firearms

N.Y. Times Service

MONTREAL — In its mod architecture, the Olympic Village resembles four stairways to the stars. Its pretty hostesses in candy-striped blouses try to project that image with their cheery "Bonjour" to everyone. But here in "V.O.," short for Village Olympique, reality is only a glance away.

On the lawn inside the 10-foot wire fence that surrounds its 45 acres, Canadian soldiers in green uniforms patrol in pairs with carbines slung over their shoulders. At the entrances, residents and visitors with dog-tag identification check in through airport-type security.

The memory of the massacre of the Israelis at Munich has created the largest military operation in Canada since the Korean conflict. On a map in the Village's police headquarters, the positions of various policemen and soldiers are marked by yellow, blue, red and green pins.

Many of those pins were shifted to positions inside and outside the Olympic Stadium Saturday for the opening ceremonies.

The security is obviously necessary. Politics also has provoked several nations to depart. But for more than 8,000 athletes and officials who are lodged here, the Olympic Village appears to hum with the "joie de vivre" that appears on the Province of Quebec travel posters. On the walkways, the athletes are in sweat suits of all colors. They seem to be in a perpetual hurry — to go to a workout, to eat, to nap, even to loaf.

On a grassy rise, a dark-haired Spaniard is playing a guitar. Off by herself, a golden-haired Swedish girl is sunbathing. Others splash in the indoor pool that avoids sunburn.

ON HIS WAY TO LUNCH, Quinn Buckner, the Indiana University playmaker who is the captain of the U.S. basketball team, is talking about how the United States hopes to regain the gold medal. He has been the captain of his team in high school, college and now the Olympics.

"Will you be the Milwaukee Bucks' captain too?" he is asked.

"They haven't mentioned it yet," Buckner says, smiling. In the free 24-hour cafeteria, a hostess in a green T-shirt directs athletes to the shortest line in the 12 service areas. On the lunch menu Saturday was tomato bouillon, cream of mushroom soup, assorted hors d'oeuvres such as herring in tomato sauce, grilled minced steak, roast chicken leg, fishcakes with egg sauce, lasagna, lamb stew, butterscotch pudding and fresh strawberries.

"We serve 40,000 meals a day," Jean-Francois Seaher, the food production manager, is saying. "We can serve 7,000 an hour."

About 18,000 pounds of food are consumed each day. It is prepared by 150 cooks. But there are no special meals.

"We sent out the menus to all the countries a long time ago and they approved them," Seaher says. "About the only thing we do different is that the rice is cooked with bottled spring water, not tap water. And we have a special spaghetti from Italy that we will serve twice. But we serve it to everybody. If we make something, it is for everybody, not one. About the only complaint we have had so far is that the food is too good, that they are eating too much"

NOT FAR AWAY is the clinic with 40 hospital beds. This is also the site of the doping control center for the athletes.

"We are testing for steroids," says Adrian Alix, a McGill University medical student, "But we have found no violations yet."

In the basement, there are free do-it-yourself laundry rooms, each with 40 washing machines and four ironing boards. While the machines churn, a huge Bulgarian, perhaps a weight lifter, is ironing his sweat suit. Next to him a tiny Panamian, perhaps a boxer, is ironing a pair of shorts.

"But some of them put their wash in the machine and do not return until the next day," the attendant, Noelline Bellemare, is saying. "That is very bad."

Also in the basement area are the offices of the various delegations. In the Soviet office, marked "USSR" near the open door, a framed portrait of Lenin stares down from above the red flag with a gold hammer and sickle. On another wall are two posters for the Moscow Olympics in 1980, already awarded to the Soviet capital. Iran hopes to be awarded the 1984 Olympics, but in the Iranian offices, a dark-haired receptionist smiles.

"We have no literature," she says. "It is not ours yet."

"I thought you might be campaigning," a man suggests. "We are a monarchy," she said. "We do not campaign."

ON THE 20 FLOORS of the high rise, the athletes are lodged in 980 apartments. On the balconies, clothes are drying in the sun. There are 12 bunks in the largest apartments, five in the smallest. It's cramped, with no real privacy. As a result, the athletes don't spend much time in their rooms.

On the patio of the Soviets' floor, two table hockey games sit alone in the sun. Half a dozen athletes are inside, watching a video cassette of a Charlie Chaplin movie. In the cinema downstairs, there is a different movie every evening. "Breakout Pass" with Charles Bronson was there Friday night. In the open-air theater, Gordon Lightfoot was there Saturday, the Canadian Ballet today.

The buildings are not co-ed. Females are lodged in Building A, the males in Buildings B, C and D.

"The girls can go into the boys' residences," Pierre Durivage, the hospitality director, is saying, "but the boys can't go into the girls' building. With only 2,000 girls and 6,000 boys, it's the only practical way to handle traffic. We haven't had a wedding here yet, but we're hoping for one."

Bonjour.

neath the skirt. Colombia's team cut flashy figures in off-white Palm Beach suits and shirts of shattering red.

Individuals in the parade were immediately recognizable — Gaston Roelants, the marathon runner, carried the Belgian flag; Mike Sands, the sprinter from the New York Pioneer Club, led the party from the Bahamas; immediately behind that group came Barbados, led by Lorna Forde, who runs for the Atoms Track Club of Brooklyn.

The Cuban flagman was Teofilio Stevenson, defending heavy-weight champion, who won a Gold Medal in 1972 by destroying the American redhead, Duane Bobick.

At these global clambakes, each nation is saluted with greater or less enthusiasm depending largely on the number of its nationals in the stands. The United States, naturally, was welcomed noisily, though their position in the alphabetical parade may have surprised some spectators lacking the gift of tongues.

In bilingual Quebec Province, our team is Etats Unis, marching in between Espagne (Spain) and the Fiji Islands. The latter had a team of one, a man in sports shirt and slacks whose banner was toted by a red-haired woman.

Africans offer mixed feelings about exodus

MONTREAL (AP) — African athletes took their countries' decisions to pull out of the Olympics Saturday mainly with resignation born of a fear of reprisal, but one said: "I'm disgusted. The whole thing hasn't a bit of logic."

Kenyans in bright red track suits, Ethiopians in their green warmup jackets, Ghanaians in dashikis wrote post cards, drank soft drinks and winced for the most part when reporters asked how they felt about their teams leaving the Games, or contemplating their departure.

But Philip Ndoo, a 30-year-old Kenyan marathon runner, spoke with rare frankness. He said his government's decision to pull out was announced in dead quiet by the team manager, John Kasyoka, just five hours before the opening ceremony.

A FRIEND of Ndoo's covered his identification badge when a reporter looked at it for his name, but Ndoo said, "I'll speak."

"You know," he said, "Africans would not get up at such a meeting and make a statement like 'I'm staying.' But that does not keep us from being disappointed. This time it is particularly hard because there is no logic in the decision.

"The African countries say New Zealand must pull out because they played South Africa in rugby. But so did at least 22 other countries — France, Britain, etc., and nobody is complaining."

Ndoo went on: "There is never any logic in politics. I'm disgusted, but I go along with our government's decision. I suppose you could say the government and the people of Kenya sent me here, and I could never have come myself. But my sacrifice and sweat was not enough. I'm an individual, not the majority. But it was an individual who was going to beat Frank Shorter."

One other African, Dr. Bedara Diouf, the Senegal team physician, spoke out against the pullouts. "I don't see what you could reproach the New Zealanders for. They did what everyone else did. And they played rugby — not even an Olympic sport," he said.

THE OFFICIAL line supporting the pullouts was enunciated by Wilson Abel Ndessabka, minister of sports of the People's Republic of the Congo, one of Black Africa's most radical states.

"We've lost nothing in this," he said, "except millions in preparation costs. It's the state that trained the athletes. And we are not losers because these people will be well prepared for our Inter-African Games in September. No one is disappointed. Perhaps the Canadians are unhappy. But we are smiling."

Graham keeps 4-stroke lead

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP)— Steady David Graham, the transplanted Australian, fired a one-under-par 70 Saturday for a three-round total of 12-under 201 and a four-stroke lead in the $300,000 Westchester Classic.

The 30-year-old Graham, a winner in this country only at Cleveland in 1972, shared the lead in the first round of this 72-hole test after an eight-under 63, and took a four-stroke lead after 36 holes with a three-under 68.

The slim Graham, a golf club designer who now resides in Hollywood, Fla., carded three birdies and two bogeys in his Saturday round over the 6,603-yard, par-71 Westchester Country Club course. He leads Mike Wynn of Crittendon, Va., who has earned $1,966 this year and is seriously considering giving up the tour if he doesn't do better.

The 31-year-old Wynn, whose best finish since joining the pro tour in 1972 was 12th at Houston last year, hung in with a one-under par 70, including three birdies and two bogeys.

Wynn, who has made only five cuts in 21 tournaments entered, shot a first-round 64 to trail by a stroke, and a par-71 Friday for a 36-hole total of 135 that tied him with Carlton White and Larry Ziegler. His 70 Saturday left him at eight-under par 205.

Stacy fires 67 to tie Rankin

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) —Hollis Stacy, firing a 67, the best round of the tournament, moved into a tie for the lead with Judy Rankin after Saturday's second round of play in the $70,000 Columbus LPGA Classic at Riviera County Club.

Miss Stacy added the 32-35—67 to her opening round of 71 for a two-day total of 138, six strokes under par on the 6,200-yard layout. The Hilton Head, S.C., golfer had five birdies—four of them in succession—and no bogeys in the round, beating par on Nos. 2, 7, 8, 9 and 10.

Mrs. Rankin, the tour's top money winner and the first-round leader, carded a 35-35—70 to go with her opening round of 68. She wasn't pleased with her front nine, where she scored her lone bogey of the day, but said she felt more comfortable on the back side.

She made a 10-foot birdie putt on No. 3 but lost that stroke when she took a bogey on No. 6 after hitting into a sand trap.

The five West Coast tournaments on the Professional Golfers Association tour in 1977 will have virtually the same dates they held this past year, the PGA announced Saturday.

The Bing Crosby Clambake kicks off the California portion of the winter tour Jan. 20-23, followed by the Andy Williams-San Diego Open Jan. 27-30, the Bob Hope Desert Classic Feb. 9-13 and the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open Feb. 17-20

The Tournament of Champions at La Costa is the fifth and final California winter event and will be played April 14-17.

WAVY WAVES showed no early speed, caught her full stride midway on the turn, rallied from the outside to then toy with her field through the stretch and won as the rider pleased. LULLABY, wide but ahead of the winner at the five sixteenth pole, tugged inward through midstretch and could not match strides while the rider lost his whip. ANY TIME GIRL showed speed from the outset to help promote the pace then hung in the stretch. WHO'S THAT LADY was shuffled back on the turn and improved her position in the drive. KING'S MINK broke on top to hold a clear lead to the upper stretch then fell back. DANCE WITH CARE took up at the start. JOYOUS WAYS was always outrun. PENNY PUEBLO tired. KINGS MAIDEN had her bid midway on the turn then stopped in the stretch.

ROMISH showed no real early speed, maneuvered in traffic on the final turn then squeezed through a narrow opening at the sixteenth pole to make up ground. HIRCISMUS, allowed to settle, has his best bid at the head of the stretch and hung. SUNLOT saved ground to be an early threat and faltered on the rail.

Swaps Stakes victor Majestic Light, rags-to-riches runner Madera Sun and major stakes winners An Act and L'Heueruex are part of one of the strongest sophomore fields assembled this year that contests the $100,000-added Cinema Handicap today at Hollywood Park.

The Cinema, which gains hundred-grander status for the first time in the race's 30-year history, to be conducted at 1⅛-mile on the lakeside turf course, could turn out to be a duel between a "prince" and a "pauper."

The prince, Majestic Light, was bred to be a winner and has looked the part. The pauper, Madera Sun, was sold last year for $1,000 and, as late as November, ran 27 lengths behind the winner of an $8,000 claiming race at Caliente.

But when the field of 10 3-year-olds goes to the post today, Majestic Light and Madera Sun are expected to share the wagering spotlight.

Majestic Light will be ridden by the meet's leading rider, Sandy Hawley, and will carry 121 pounds. Laffit Pincay, pressing Hawley for the top spot in the jockey standings, will be aboard Madera Sun, who will carry 119.

A son of 1969 Kentucky Derby winner Majestic Prince, Majestic Light flew in from the East to post an impressive victory in the $165,450 Swaps Stakes on the Hollypark main track.

Madera Sun, a gelded offspring of Montparnasse II, eventually posted his maiden victory in Tijuana, won a claiming race at Santa Anita, then finished third against a better field in an allowance race.

He followed with a triumph in the Sutter Stakes at Golden Gate, then won the Will Rogers Handicap on the Hollypark turf, defeating a group that included the highly-regarded An Act.

An Act, winner of the Santa Anita Derby to be ridden by Marco Castaneda, has been freshened since an unplaced effort in the Ohio Derby at Thistledown.

L'Heureux won the Coronado Handicap on the Hollypark grass in April and will be ridden by Don Pierce.

Rounding out the field are entrymates Double Discount and Alphy Boy, Delta Junction, Today 'N Tomorrow, Byndoerm and Dr Krohn.

PRECEDING today's Cinema 'Cap was another hundred-grander, the $103,975 Hollywood Lassies Stakes, the title-deciding event for 2-year-old fillies, held before a crowd of 33,542 Saturday.

Wavy Waves, a talented daughter of Crozier making her third start of the season, remained undefeated, unleashing a burst of speed in the final three-eighths of a mile that carried her to a 3½-length triumph over Lullaby, who was five lengths in front of Any Time Girl.

Douglas Jets breeze, 10-2, in Mack game

The Douglas Jets pounded out 10 hits and used big innings in the first and seventh to gain a 12-2 Connie Mack victory over Mary Star in the first game of a Blair Field doubleheader Saturday night.

Rick Diffine and Scott Spehar each had three hits and two RBI, with Diffine also scoring three times. Winning pitcher Herb Fauland collected two RBI to go with his five-hitter.

In the nightcap, Paul Homrig had two hits and an RBI and Mark Hughey scored twice as the Harbor Bruins clubbed Lakewood, 7-1.

Wreidt Boats edged Motor Patrol, 4-3, at Cerritos College.

Mike Harris scored the eventual winning run in the fourth inning. Harris singled, stole second and third, and came home on Darryl Klein's basehit.

The drive started when Andy Gray of Narbonne, who like Samoa will attend Long Beach City College, dashed 14 yards.

Samoa followed with a pass to Fred Ford of St. John Bosco for 15 yards and another first down at the 20.

Samoa then faked Hargrove into the middle and kept the ball, rolling left end and taking off a la Sam Cunninghaam to dive over a North defender from the three and into the end zone.

Nitehawks and Barons win twice

The Long Beach Nitehawks ran their Western Softball Congress record to 30-2 Saturday night with a doubleheader victory over the Lakewood Jets, 4-3 and 6-1, at Mayfair Park.

Jerry Flory hit two home runs and Nick Hopkins one to spark the first-game victory behind the four-hit pitching of John Henderson.

Veteran Don Sarno hurled the second-game victory, replacing Bob Todd, who has a broken right hand and wrist. Don Sears homered for the Nitehawks, who play at Culver City in a twin bill today (2 p.m.)

The Jets play the Lakewood Barons in a doubleheader at Mayfair Park tonight at 7.

The Barons took a pair from South El Monte Saturday night, 6-1 and 1-0.

The first game was deadlocked, 1-1, through nine innings, before Rene Wright drove in a run and Merle Modrell socked a three-run homer.

Roger Teskes hurled a two-hitter in the nightcap, striking out nine, and Frank Van Patten had the winning RBI.

Pony Stars win

Randy Robinson hurled the last seven innings and struck out 16 to lead the Long Beach Pony League All-Stars past their Paramount counterparts, 4-3, in 10 innings, in a tournament at Hollifield Park in Norwalk Saturday night.

DODGERS—

Stone fanned Steve Yeager but Rhoden, batting .366 for the year, lined a single to left to score two runs and the Dodgers were on top to stay.

Rhoden admitted that he wasn't aware that he pitched Alston into the select 2,000-win club.

"I didn't know it until it was flashed on the message board after the game," he said.

But he wasn't alone. Alston didn't know it either until just a few days ago.

"I didn't know it until the writers said something about it," he confessed.

"I'm just fortunate to have been in baseball this long to arrive at something like this.

"But like I said, I'd like to take a few of those wins and add 'em to the standings this year. That's where they'll do the most good right now."

How they scored

CUBS FIRST

DODGERS SECOND
With one out, Garvey doubled to right. Russell grounded to short. Baker doubled to left, scoring Garvey. Yeager flied to center. One run, two hits, one left.

DODGERS THIRD

DODGERS FOURTH
Garvey singled to left. Russell singled to center. Baker was hit by a pitch, loading the bases. Yeager struck out. Rhoden singled to left, scoring Garvey and Russell. Garman replaced Stone. Lopes popped out. Buckner flied to center. Two runs, three hits, two left.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Believe it or not, this story is true

"You might call this the tallest fish yarn of the year and also label me as a liar, but there is proof positive that a Hawthorne angler, Fred Oakley, caught a limit of kelp bass in the surf off one of the beaches in the Malibu area. The 10 fish weighed 95 pounds! How about that for a fish story?

Bill Beebe, outdoor editor of The Santa Monica Outlook, passed the information to me the other night when five outdoor writers broke bread with high Department of Fish and Game officials at the Airporter Inn in Irvine. Bill knows Oakley well and insists that he is an angler who can beat anybody in a surf-fishing contest.

Oakley didn't reveal the exact location to Bill, and Bill didn't ask, but it is widely known that there are some strands north from North Monica toward Oxnard that are great potential fishing beaches. Also there are good kelp beds in the same sectors, which, of course, make great havens for kelp bass and other species of fish.

Bill said that Oakley did it this way:

He caught some grunion that were running that night and used them for bait immediately. Almost every cast brought a strike and out of all those strikes, the Hawthorne angler emerged with that tremendous limit of fish. Oakley uses a 12-foot rod and makes tremendously long casts beyond the breaking surf line. The bass are not surf fish, but often they are close inshore especially when grunion are running.

WHILE DISCUSSING kepl bass, it might be well to mention that "kelp" and "calico" names are synonymous. Landing operators who call in the FISHIN' FACTS each evening always call them calicos.

Actually, there are five members of the bass family in California black sea bass, striped bass, kelp bass, sand bass and spotted bass. Years ago, we had occasion to mention black sea bass almost every week, but now we hear of one only when a long-range boat returns from far-off Mexican waters or on rare occasions, when a small one is caught around the Channel Islands.

Stripers are rare in southern waters even though plants have been made in Newport Bay and also at Anaheim Landing. Kelp bass are more frequently referred to as calicos than by any other name. Sand bass, a close relative and often mistaken for kelp bass, is called sugar bass and ground bass, and sometimes calicos.

The spotted bass occurs in smaller numbers and Newport Bay and Mission Bay at San Diego could be called "home" for the species, a close cousin of both the kelp and sand bass.

Both the sand and kelp bass catches this year have been greater than usual and Long Beach anglers who don't like long ocean trips can be thankful for the two species. There is nothing better for the table than broiled or delicately fried fillets of bass. And they are fun to catch.

OUTDOOR MINIS—Randy Vande Brake, 11521 Lindale St., Norwalk, is just 11 years old, but he has deposited $100 in his savings account for catching a tagged rainbow trout in Silver Lake on the June Lake Loop. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Vande Brake. The fish was one of several tagged rainbows that were placed in the four lakes of the Loop. Randy now has a chance to win the $1,000 jackpot at the end of the season. The fish weighed two pounds and fell for a piece of floating cheese on a No. 14 hook.

Chuck Garrison, another of the outdoor writers attending the DFG meeting the other night, told me that a 74-pound yellowfin tuna found his way into Dana Harbor around the first of this month, frolicked around for days eating huge squid and then finally was harpooned on July 8 by Bruce Brown, owneroperator of a commercial boat. Chupu. "Charlie," as the fish was named, was barbecued at the Dana Wharf Fish Market and eaten by many fish market patrons. Sorry, Charlie!

Three new terminal tackle kits have been announced by Weber. That brings the number of do-it-yourself kits to six. If you have a yen to create flies, poppers, jigs, ice flies, spoons and spinners, Weber has the kit for you. The kits offer a real challenge to those anglers who like to devise something new—"a sure thing that will catch the big ones."

The Long Beach Casting Club will have a winter class on all kinds of flies that will be open to the public. The weekly class, however, is usually confined confined to flies.

Foyt locks up Michigan pole

Associated Press

A.J. Foyt won the pole position Saturday for the Indianapolis-car division of the 7th Twin 200s auto race at Michigan International Speedway.

Foyt, defending race champion, pushed his Gilmore Coyote-Foyt to the day's best lap speed of 198.238 mph, a little more than six-mph off the track record set by Gordon Johncock three years ago.

Johncock, in a Sinmast Wildcat prepared by George Bignotti, clocked the second fastest speed—196.122 mph—and starts on the outside of the first row in the $168,250 race.

Al Unser, winner of the Schaefer 500 at Pocono, Pa., two weeks ago, qualified his revolutionary Parnelli-Cosworth at 195.759 mph, good for the inside pole of the second row next to Wally Dallenbach, who clocked 193.496 mph.

Woman driver Janet Guthrie starts on the outside of row six with a speed of 186.480 mph in her Vollstedt-Offy—faster than 10 other male drivers in the race. Her time set a new closed course record for women at the track.

Today's 200-mile Indy car feature will be combined with a 200-mile U.S. Auto Club stock car race.

WORLD driving champion Niki Lauda of Austria edged out James Hunt of England Saturday for the No. 1 starting spot for today's British Grand Prix Formula One road race at Brands Hatch.

Lauda turned a lap of one minute, 19.35 seconds (118.4 mph) in his Ferrari during the final qualifying session.

Hunt, in a Marlboro McLaren, was only a stopwatch tick behind, posting a time of 1:19.41, and remains a marginal favorite to overhaul the Austrian in the race.

Hunt won the French Grand Prix two weeks ago, and is tied with Frenchman Patrick Depailler for second place in the world driver's championship with 26 points. Lauda leads with four victories and 52 points.

The second row for today's race is composed of Mario Andretti in a John Player Special Lotus 77 and Depailler in one of the radical six-wheel Tyrrells. Lauda's Ferrari teammate Clay Regazzoni qualified fifth fastest, followed by the surprise of the meet so far, New Zealander Chris Amon in the lone Mo Nunn-prepared Ensign.

Twenty-six cars will start today's race, which will be for 76 laps and 199.6 miles.

Navy softball begins Monday

Five teams will battle for two district berths in the 11th District, Northern Area, Navy softball tournament this week at Long Beach Support Activity.

The No. 1 and 2 teams will enter the 10-team district finals July 26-30, also on the Support Activity diamonds. Monday's pairings:

5 p.m.- USS Paul Revere vs. Port Hueneme Seabees; Pt. Mugu NAS vs. China Lake Weapons Station.— Los Alamitos NAS will not play until Tuesday in the double elimination play.

Desfor reaches grass court final

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Diane Desfor of Long Beach and USC will face Paula Smith of UCLA today in the women's singles final of the U.S. National Amateur grass court championships.

Aztecs take on Minutemen

Can George Best make it eight game-winng goals in as many home victories this season for the Los Angeles Aztecs?

That will be the question at 2:30 today at El Camino College when the Aztecs take on the Boston Minutemen in a North American Soccer League match.

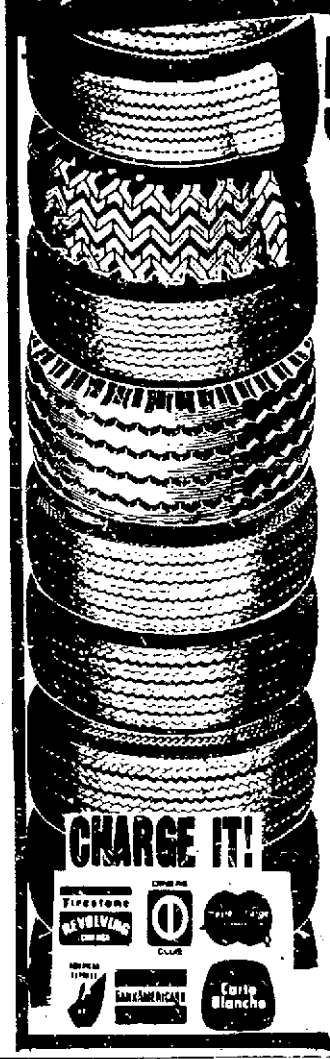

Best's five-yard goal less than five minutes into overtime last Saturday night gave the Aztecs a 2-1 win over St. Louis for their seventh home win of the year. It was nothing new for the NASL's second leading scorer.

He also tallied the game-winning goal in the Aztecs' six previous trumphs at El Camino this season.

Bullfights today

An exciting corrida is expected today when Curro Rivera, Rafael Gil and Marcos Ortega face toros of Trincheras in the downtown bullright, El Toreo de Tijuana, 4 p.m.

Boxing champ's first love is baseball

Associated Press

The world welterweight boxing champion isn't a boxing fan. He seldom goes to a boxing match that he isn't fighting.

Carlos Palomino's real love is baseball.

"That was my dream when I was young. But everybody said I was not big enough."

Palomino's team is the Dodgers and he regrets that his boxing schedule keeps him away from their games.

The 26-year-old, who won the World Boxing Association title from Britain's John Stracey last month, reflected on his past and put forth his dreams as he sat comfortably—but somehow athletically erect—in the home where he lives with nine other people, his parents, brothers and sisters.

Married right out of high school and divorced 16 months later, he has a 5-year-old son whom he hopes will live with him someday.

Palomino is one of 11 children in a family that moved to Southern California from Mexico in 1960. As he talked, a steady stream of small, black-haired children ran into the room, piping down and smiling when they saw Carlos had company.

Those siblings are part of what took him away from the sport he loved. After a year of baseball in high school, Palomino was compelled to start working as a welder at a workaday pace that bored him.

He began working out at a neighborhood gym to relieve the monotony. A coach picked him for a good man with his fists and told him he could make money as a boxer. Today that man is his co-manager, Noe Cruz. Palomino is the only pro he has ever managed.

"Oh, I enjoy fighting. I enjoy the money," Palomino said.

He earned $10,000 when he vanquished the favored Stracey. He is expected to earn $60,000 for each title defense.

"Welterweight is one of the better money-making classes. Some great fighters come out of it," he said, mentioning Sugar Ray Robinson.

"I want to make what I can, then leave it," he said. "Then I'll do what I really want to do."

That is working with children. Palomino is a semester away from graduation at Long Beach State. He is majoring in recreation and hopes to work for the Westminster parks and recreation department.

"Winning the title has opened a lot of doors for me," he said, adding that several cities have asked him to think about working for them when he's ready.

But Palomino says he'd rather stay in or near Westminster. "I grew up here. I know the kids."

"Most of them were there at the airport when I got back from England and came to our house for a party," he recalled. "The little kids—I really enjoyed them—they were hanging all over me."

Palomino doesn't expect that kind of reception from all his fans. He characterizes himself as easy-going and quiet and says he doesn't aspire to be enormously popular—just a good fighter.

He is choosy about his spectators, preferring a sophisticated crowd.

"I really liked the English crowd. They were very fair," he said. "I had just beaten their champion, and after the fight, they waited for me to come back out. They applauded me."

Children tell burial ordeal

CHOWCHILLA — The lost children of Chowchilla came home Saturday — many of them red-eyed from hours of crying, all exhausted and bewildered by a nightmare kidnaping and the horror of being buried alive by masked captors.

The outpouring of emotion in this small Central California town was enough to capture the hearts of the world.

With the children came a hero — the weary, plainspoken school bus driver who for 29 agonizing hours protected and comforted his charges, got them bravely singing, and then organized the frightened youngsters in a successful escape from their prison at the bottom of a gravel pit 100 miles from home.

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown offered a $10,000 state reward Saturday for information leading to arrests and convictions in the Chowchilla bus hijacking.

The predawn return of the victims of the most bizarre mass-kidnaping in history not only solved the mystery of how 26 schoolchildren and bus driver Ed Ray could vanish without a trace, but it also touched off a celebration like the town has never seen.

Jubilant parents, friends and neighbors gathered all over town to give thanks for the safe return of their children, who were held captive in a makeshift, sealed cavern by at least three armed abductors.

The children's homecoming was greeted with whistles, cheers and tears from the townspeople and a placard at city hall which proclaimed simply: "Welcome home, kids."

The three men who engineered the kidnaping were mysteriously silent throughout most of the ordeal, but may have slipped up by using one of their names in front of the victims.

Authorities issued an all-points bulletin Saturday for a "Jerry McCune" in connection with the case. They declined to say how they got the full name, but two of the victims said they heard one kidnaper address another as "Jerry."

There was no further identification of McCune.

Shivering and dazed, the children and driver returned from their journey into terror and described the nightmare of being buried alive by their abductors. They told of their descent into a stiffling, earth-covered cavern fashioned from an old moving truck

Associated Press

President Ford and Ronald Reagan each scored sweeps on the last day of GOP state convention voting Saturday, but Ford ended the day with a net gain of 15 votes over Reagan, moving to within 64 delegates of the presidential nomination.

Ford took all 35 delegates at stake in the Connecticut convention, bringing his delegate total to 1,066, according to the Associated Press tally. Reagan has 1,020 of the 1,130 needed for nomination.

Reagan won all 20 delegates available at the Utah convention in Salt Lake City.

Both victories were expected and left the balance of power with the 172 delegates who remain uncommitted. No more delegates remain to be chosen before the party meets for its national convention Aug. 16 in Kansas City.

Ford called for unity at the Connecticut convention in Hartford, to "center our attack not on fellow Republicans but on this Democratic Congress, the Democratic platform and the Democratic ticket which tries to be all things to all people.

"Now we must resolve to stop fighting each other and start helping each other."

It was his first political address since Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale won the Democratic presidential and vice-presidential nominations Thursday.

Ford got a rousing welcome at the Hartford convention, but outside the hall a group of about 50 Reagan supporters chanted "We want Reagan" and waved placards.

The Reagan camp claimed Connecticut party leaders had stacked the deck against them at the convention by refusing to give them 20 per cent of the delegation. They contended that proportion of the convention supported Reagan.

While Ford called for unity in Hartford, Reagan was repeating his attacks on the President's foreign and domestic policies, telling Utah delegates that Ford had created an illusion of prosperity by deficit spending in an election year. He charged that Ford had failed to tell Americans the truth about the nation's military weaknesses.

"WE'RE TOLD THAT we're having a solid economic recovery. I don't believe that. We've been given the illusion of prosperity in an election year by printing-press money. But what happens then?

"You cannot spend your way to prosperity. You cannot build prosperity by going into debt."

On Friday, Reagan inserted the Watergate scandal into the intra-party struggle for delegates, saying Ford's pardon of former President Nixon would be a campaign issue that would hurt Republicans in the fall if the party gave its nomination to Ford.

Brown had the floor but lacked the polish

By BOB SCHMIDT
Ridder Convention Bureau

NEW YORK — Jimmy Carter won and Jerry Brown lost, and all the profound hindsight in the world isn't going to change that.

And after a week of observing the Carter and Brown operations in action at the Democratic National Convention in New York City, and after watching and listening to the two candidates in person, the feeling is strong that even if hindsight could somehow change the convention's results, it shouldn't.

For Carter, the convention was unnecessary, a ritualistic confirmation of a fact long since established: He is the presidential choice of more Democratic voters than any other candidate.

For Brown, the convention was vital. He needed it to show those Democrats who had come to know him only through the media what he was really like. He had to showcase himself as a future presidential possibility should Carter fail in November, or win in November but fail to perform well in his first term.

It was Carter, however, who treated the week-long conclave as if the nomination were going to be won or lost in New York City. He and his aides stroked the delegates, made the phone calls, held the meetings with unhappy blocs in an effort to make them happy.

If there was any design to Brown's activities last week, it could only have been conceived by Jess Unruh or Bob Moretti, two former Assembly speakers not known for their affection for the governor.

Bus driver tells of terror

Courage gets a new meaning

By ALTON SLAGLE
Knight News Service

CHOWCHILLA — He thought once they must be trying to kill them, the 27 of them crammed together into the airless, half-buried old truck body.

They could hear the hated men above them slowly, deliberately cut the metal mesh and canvas that formed a roof and held back the heavy soil and rock piled atop it.

The dirt and the rocks began cascading down on the crying, scared-to-death youngsters and on Ed Ray, the only adult among them. He tried to comfort the most frightened of the kids and at the same time frantically devise a plan to lead them all to safety.

More pictures and stories on Page A-8

Then the sounds stopped. The clip-clip of shoes above them ceased. They waited for what seemed an eternity in the darkened, steaming body of the old truck that had been carefully designed to contain them for whatever amount of time, and for whatever twisted reason, the three stocking-masked men had intended.

Quietly, the captives made a pile of the mattresses and springs that had been laid inside their macabre prison. The older of the children, those in their teens up to 15, helped as Ray, a stocky 55-year-old, shoved and directed.

The little ones cried for their parents and for food and for some understanding of the ordeal to which they had been so suddenly subjected Thursday afternoon. Five is a tender age to expect such understanding, to know the minds of the beasts who would do such a thing.

The work was hard, but the task proved successful.

Now, in the warm first light of a Saturday morning, Frank Edward Ray, school bus driver, could recount the bizarre story to the eager ears and eyes of the world's press.

They were all gathered here, huddled together in a press room hastily created from the garage of this village's modern fire department. The trucks had been parked outside so that the cameras and the typewriters and the telephones would fit.

The children were back with their overjoyed parents and, finally, Ed Ray, who in 26 years had driven some of those parents to their own classes, could draw a breath.

Nervously, in a dirty green jumpsuit, his square jaw trembling slightly as he regarded his wife, Odessa, at his side, he talked. This is his story:

"I left Dairyland School about 10 minutes to four with my busload of kids. I left off two stops, left off another stop, and then came back

U.S. seeks overland evacuation of Beirut

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials preparing a second evacuation of Americans from strife-torn Beirut favor using a motor convoy overland to Syria, State Department sources said Saturday. However, if warring forces in Lebanon are unable to assure protection for the road convoy, the U.S. may resort to a sea operation similar to the first evacuation last month, which involved sending in a naval amphibious craft. No final decision is expected until shortly before the start of the operation early Tuesday. The U.S. Embassy in Beirut said Saturday that its staff would be reduced to a "bare minimum" and strongly urged the remaining 1,000 Americans to leave Lebanon.

Teamsters 'hold line'

ANCHORAGE — Alaska's powerful Teamsters union Saturday announced unprecedented "hold the line" agreements with the Associated General Contractors and the Alaska Carriers' Association. Local 959 Secretary-Treasurer Jesse Carr said in Anchorage the union had negotiated a one-year extension of existing contracts, with no wage increases after Jan. 1. But Carr said if time brings no display of restraint from other groups, the Teamsters will seek catch-up increases and more in the next bargaining sessions.

Arson fire kills 2

CHICAGO — An arson fire blazed through a 120-resident Northwest Side apartment house Saturday, killing five children and two adults. Firemen rescued many other residents from the four-story building. One fireman said they "came flying down (the) ladders." Four survivors were injured. "As far as we're concerned, this was done by an arsonist," a fire department official said. One witness told police she heard several explosions and then saw a young man running from the building.

South Pacific tremor

GOLDEN, Colo. — A "strong" earthquake rocked a lightly populated area of the Pacific Ocean about 1,200 miles south of Guam Saturday, government scientists here said. The quake, which measured 6.6 on the Richter scale, was centered in the New Ireland area of the South Pacific, a scientist for the U.S. Geological Survey's Earthquake Information Center said. The area hit by the quake is not heavily populated, and minimal damage was expected.

Back to business

WASHINGTON — Extension of the present individual income-tax cuts for Americans is a No. 1 item of business when Congress returns Monday from a two-week recess. Also awaiting decision is an extension of the revenue-sharing plan for state and local governments. The congressional recess that began July 2 covered both the Fourth of July holiday and the Democratic National Convention. Members will recess again Oct. 12 through Aug. 20 for the Republican National Convention. They plan to end their 1976 session on Oct. 2 to give time for campaigning before the November election.

Space flight flop

WASHINGTON — A research rocket designed to strew East Coast skies with red, white and blue clouds blasted off Saturday night — but moments later it plunged into the Atlantic Ocean. Officials said the mission was thwarted by a mechanical failure. The blastoff from Wallops Island Flight Center on Virginia's eastern shore had been postponed Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights because clouds would have obscured the view of four East Coast observation stations that tracked the rocket. The purpose of the colored chemicals was to allow scientists to study upper-air winds and electric and magnetic fields.

Youth's year in jail not spent behind bars

VIRGINIA CITY, Nev. (AP) — Rod Sessum walked out an open jail door to freedom Saturday. Actually, the door had been unlocked for months and Sessum says the sentence was "about the best thing that ever happened to me."

Instead of staying behind bars, Sessum, 19, had worked at odd jobs around this old mining town and often ate dinner at residents' homes instead of in his century-old cell.

By the time he finished his jail term, he had friends, gifts of clothes, offers of full-time jobs, a college scholarship, donations of money and even an old car — which he rebuilt and got to run on Thursday.

The youth, first convicted of assault in the robbery of a hitchhiker, got probation but was later caught in his home state of Louisiana driving a stolen car. He was returned here as a parole violator and in October 1975 was sentenced to a year in jail.

Normally authorities would send prisoners to the state prison in nearby Carson City. But Sheriff Bob Del Carlo said because of Sessum's youth authorities decided to let him stay in the dungeon-like jail.

After Sessum's first six weeks of imprisonment, the cell door was unlocked. He began working around town, getting a chance to meet residents of the community.

"If I had been anywhere else I wouldn't have had this happen," said Sessum. "I wouldn't have made the friends that I made here."

Sessum, asked whether he figures he can now make it in the outside world, said, "Oh, yes, I think I can make it."

He said he plans to rent a house with another youth here for the rest of the summer and then go to Sierra Nevada College at Incline Village, Nev., in the fall.

In the meantime he is trying to line up "some outside work. I don't like to be inside all day long."

Sheriff Del Carlo said Sessum "has come around 100 per cent since we got him. He knows now what he is capable of. He has a lot of self-confidence he didn't have before."

Residents here "aren't bending over backwards for him, but they're sure willing to go along if he is willing to show he can do what he has to and show that he cares," said Del Carlo.

Arab oil nations to prop up Egypt

CAIRO — Four oil-rich Arab countries proposed Saturday to create a $2-billion fund to prop up Egypt's sagging economy. Finance Minister Ahmed Abu Ismail said. The money would be chaneled through, and presumably managed by, a body to be known as the Gulf Organization for Development in Egypt, Abu Ismail told the official Middle East News Agency. The report followed Abu Ismail's meeting with the finance ministers of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates to discuss the project. The proposed fund falls far short of the $12 billion Egypt had originally sought from the four countries toward financing the country's $20 billion 1976-1980 economic plan.

Lockheed impasse

TOKYO — Two officials of the Japanese Supreme Court flew to California on Saturday to help break a legal impasse blocking the questioning of a former Lockheed Aircraft Corp. executive in the multimillion-dollar Lockheed payoff scandal. Lockheed has admitted spending $12 million in Japan to promote sales of its aircraft. Lockheed executives have said at least $2 million of that went to Japanese government officials. A U.S. District Court judge in Los Angeles has allowed Japanese and American prosecutors to question top Lockheed officials under oath. However, he has ordered the testimony kept secret until A. Carl Kotchian, former Lockheed vice president; A. H. Elliot, former Lockheed marketing executive; and J. W. Clutter, former head of the firm's Far Eastern operations, are given complete immunity from prosecution in Japanese courts.

Antarctic cooperation

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union and the U.S. have agreed to cooperate in studying antarctic waters to determine the effect of the South Pole on the world's climate, Tass reported Saturday. Polar explorers from each country will team up on research ships on the Australian and South American sides of Antarctica, the news agency said. A memorandum on the cooperative research project was signed Friday in Leningrad after a five-day conference for polar explorers from both countries.

Retaliation pressure

NAIROBI, Kenya — A Ugandan military spokesman was quoted by the official radio Saturday as saying President Idi Amin was under pressure to avenge the July 4 Israeli commando raid on Entebbe Airport by striking against Kenya. Amin has accused Kenya of collusion with Israel in the raid that freed more than 100 hostages held at Entebbe by pro-Palestinian guerrillas. Kenya has denied the charge, but relations between the two countries remain tense and each has accused the other in the past week of beefing up their military forces along the border. The official Ugandan radio quoted the spokesman, widely believed to be Amin himself, as saying Amin was under pressure to take action against Kenya "to pay back for the blood of Ugandan soldiers and Palestinians" killed in the raid.

Jamaica payoff

KINGSTON, Jamaica — The ruling People's National Party of Jamaica received a $20,000 campaign contribution from the Aluminum Company of America in 1972, according to the party's finance chairman. That contribution was in addition to $25,000 Alcoa has told the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission it gave to the Jamaican Labor Party in 1971, when that party was in power, at the urging of then-U.S. Ambassador Vincent DeRoulet. DeRoulet, who died last year, was trying to prevent nationalization of American bauxite interests in Jamaica, U.S. sources said. Bauxite is the raw material from which aluminum is made.

Reconciliation plea

LISBON — Mario Soares, Portugal's premier-designate and leader of the Socialist Party, ignored widespread attacks against his plan to form a minority Socialist government and urged "national reconciliation" Saturday. In his first public statement since his nomination Friday night, Soares said his government would carry out a program for "national reconstruction" and hoped it would receive broad support crossing party lines. One of the immediate problems facing the new government is how to handle the cases of people implicated in unsuccessful left- and right-wing coup attempts since the revolution.

Moderates sworn in

LIMA, Peru — Twelve generals, four admirals and two civilians were sworn in Saturday as ministers in the Peruvian military government's new, more moderate cabinet. Thirteen of the ministers were holdovers from the cabinet that resigned late Friday in a government crisis that had an ideological tone. Four leftists were fired, leaving more conservative officers in a position to determine the future of the Peruvian military's eight-year experiment in socialism.

Producer Hornblow dies

Combined News Services

Arthur Hornblow Jr., who reigned as a top Hollywood movie producer for nearly 40 years, died Saturday in Lenox Hill (N.Y.) Hospital at the age of 83.

His last three movies, which he produced independently, were "Oklahoma," "Witness for the Prosecution" and an adaptation of John Hersey's novel "The War Lovers."

Hornblow, whose father was editor of the now-defunct "Theater" magazine, gave up a legal career as a young man and started producing plays on Broadway before entering the film world.

He remained active until his death, planning to produce a film adaptation of "The Captive." The play electrified the theater world when he presented it on Broadway 50 years ago because it dealt with lesbian relationships.

Hornblow produced the stage version of the "Cardboard Lover," starring Tallulah Bankhead, before going to work as a production executive for film magnate Samuel Goldwyn in 1927.

In 1933, Hornblow went to work for Paramount Pictures. In 1949 he went to Metro Goldwyn Mayer, where his productions included "Gaslight," "Weekend at the Waldorf" and "Asphalt Jungle," in which Marilyn Monroe won notice.

Swimming

Almost every able person is swimming in China's rivers, lakes and coastal waters this summer to mark the 10th anniversary of Chairman Mao Tse-tung's historic swim in the Yangtze River, the official Hsinhua news agency said Saturday.

Mao reportedly swam 15 kilometers (almost 9½ miles) in one hour and five minutes on July 16, 1966, at the age of 73, Hsinhua said, riding the "winds and waves of the turbulent [illegible]."

Landfall

The leather boat Brendan sailed into Reykjavik, Iceland, harbor Saturday after a two-week voyage from the Faeroe Islands 500 miles across the North Atlantic.

Capt. Tim Severin, the English explorer-writer who piloted the banana-shaped open boat fashioned from 42 ox hides, is trying to prove that Irish monk St. Brendan could have sailed to North America in a similar vessel nine centuries before Christopher Columbus.

Sen. Walter Mondale's birthplace of Ceylon, Minn., made front-page news in Sri Lanka — formerly Ceylon — on Saturday.

Colombo's Daily News featured Mondale's selection as the U.S. Democratic party's vice presidential candidate under the headline "Ceylonese in Jimmy Carter's wagon."

Forgotten

Temporarily forgotten in the hoopla of the Democratic National Convention, Rep. Wayne Hays of Ohio is preparing to return to Washington Monday when Congress convenes after a 2½-week recess.

The 65-year-old Democrat, a central figure in the congressional payroll sex scandal, will face his colleagues in the House — stripped of his chairmanship of the powerful Administration Committee — for the first time since he took an overdose of sleeping pills at his farm home in Belmont, Ohio, June 10.

A spokesman for the House Ethics Committee, which began an investigation of Hays' affair with Elizabeth Ray to determine whether she was on the government payroll for that purpose, said the committee has no action planned next week. A Justice Department probe also is continuing, but nothing significant is expected.

Way cleared for branch Y facility in Scherer Park

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

A local conservationist's unsuccessful bid to block the lease of some city park land has left the way open for construction of a branch YMCA in North Long Beach's Scherer Park.

At the same time, it has raised questions about the manner in which the city approved the lease.

Lester Denevan tried to convince the City Planning Commission last week that the lease robs the citizens of valuable open space in violation of the open-space element of the city's general plan.

But the commission, by a 5-to-1 vote, approved a special permit that exempts the Y from the zoning requirements of the two-acre parcel of park land that is located at Atlantic Avenue and Del Amo Boulevard. (Commissioner Shirley Blumberg voted against the permit.)

Observers agreed that the commission's vote was more a formality than anything else since the City Council had approved the lease agreement with the Y as far back as September of 1974.

Denevan also has challenged that aspect of the arrangement.

The citizen watchdog and former member of the City Planning Department staff said that, for all intents and purposes, the city had reversed the normal approval process by executing a lease before the planning commission had seen the Y's plans and given it a special permit, as well as a favorable environmental impact report. The impact report was approved at the commission's regular meeting Thursday.

Denevan also claimed that the City Park Commission, which has a vital stake in the matter, was ignored in the approval process — although Robert Felder, general manager of the Greater Long Beach YMCA, said that Park Director Chance Hill had been involved in preliminary discussions of the lease. (Hill was on vacation last week and could not be reached for comment.)

With the formality of a special permit out of the way, the Y is now free to start work on the initial phase of the project. Felder said ground will be broken at the 2.2-acre site at the end of this month, and construction of the facility's main structure — a leadership building — will be completed in about 10 months.

The 5,400-square-foot leadership building will house a social hall, a meeting room, administrative offices and service facilities. An off-street parking area for 60 cars also will be part of the first phase of development.

Depending on the availability of private funds, a swimming pool and locker room facilities will be added to the building at a later date, after which a recreation room and Indian Guide cave will be built.

No timetable has been set for the additions.

Felder said the Y felt fortunate to get the city lease, since the organization's recent fund-raising efforts have met with only limited success.

He said the Y was "out to raise $4 million" for a construction program that included a new downtown YMCA, as well as the North Long Beach branch facility, but that only $2.2 million had been raised.

Normally, he said, the Y likes to buy the property on which it builds. "We had some real thoughts about whether we wanted to build on somebody else's land," he explained.

As it is, the Y will lease the Scherer Park property for a nominal fee of $1 a year.

Felder said the organization had given consideration to 12 other possible sites in the area, then narrowed those down to seven. In the end, though, the Y just couldn't put together a suitable private deal, he said.

In response to Denevan's charge that the city is "nibbling away" at its precious stock of open space, city planning officials noted that the city intends to "offset" the institutional use of the park land by developing a new 26-acre park in North Long Beach. It will be

Action Line

P.O. Box 230 Long Beach, Calif. 90844

Action Line is your service, solving your problems, getting your answers, cutting red tape and standing up for your rights. To get action, write Action Line, Box 230, Long Beach, Calif. 90844. Questions are selected for their general interest and helpfulness. Please, do not send original documents you want returned.

Record

Lately, when I've dialed directory assistance from Pacific Telephone a recording says "If you've checked your directory and are unable to find the number you want, please stay on the line and a directory assistance operator will answer." Can Action Line find out if this gentle look-it-up-yourself reminder is reducing the number of calls for information. Does Pacific Telephone know how many callers hang up after the recording? L.S., Long Beach.

Pacific Telephone isn't monitoring the calls to see how many people hang up "because it would be too expensive to install meters," but there are indications that show a reduced demand for directory assistance, according to a spokesman for the company. He said the number of calls made Mondays through Fridays in June 1975 averaged 718,000 per day. In comparison, soon after the recordings began, 546,000 calls were made on Monday, June 21. Monday is the busiest day of the week for directory assistance calls, he said. Although this isn't a true comparison — an average compared with a specific day — it does show a 24 per cent drop in requests. So far, the spokesman said, "73 per cent of Pacific's 213 area code has been converted to the recording." A spokesman for General Telephone told Action Line his company does not have such a recording an has no plans for one at this time. But, he said, "We are watching with interest Pacific Telephone's experiment."

Payments paid

My husband was disabled from Dec. 4 to June 1 and he was laid off from his job. We have disability insurance through our mortgage holder, the Majestic Investment Co. in Denver, Colo., to cover our house payments, but we've been notified that there is an $835 delinquency on our account. We've sent in the disability forms to Majestic and called the company many times. We've also been trying to straighten out a problem with our impound account. For the past two years, Majestic has overpaid our property taxes because of a mix-up with our homeowner's exemption. The county has refunded the overpayment to Majestic and this money should be applied to our house payments or paid to us, but all we get are promises. Can Action Line look into this? Mrs. T.F., Hawaiian Gardens.

Your house payments are now paid up to August. Majestic had been sending your disability forms to the insurance company and benefits were being paid, but they hadn't all been credited to your account. After Action Line contacted Majestic, the firm did a complete audit on your account, crediting the insurance benefits paid to date and paying the excess impound funds on your loan balance. You will receive a new account statement. Your insurance covers only about 90 per cent of your house payments, but the extra impound funds made up the difference.

Restoration

Being a family genealogist, I have acquired many old photographs and I would like to learn how to restore them. I'm considering doing this as an occupation. Can Action Line tell me where I can learn this technique? Mrs. L.T., Lakewood.

When commercial photographers "restore" an old picture, they actually make a copy of it, touch up the reproduction using spot dyeing or airbrush techniques and then rephotograph it. There really is no effective way to restore the original, according to the photographers Action Line contacted. Long Beach City College's Pacific Coast Campus, 1305 E. Pacific Coast Highway, offers general photography classes, which include instruction on spot-dyeing methods to touch up photographs. But the only class on airbrush techniques we could find is at Los Angeles Trade-Technical College, 400 W. Washington Blvd., downtown Los Angeles. The class, "Airbrush Photo Retouching," which is part of the college's commercial art program, will be offered in the fall on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 6:30 to 9:30. Registration for fall classes will be held Aug. 16 through Sept. 10 from 9 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Some background in photography is helpful for persons wanting to take the airbrush class.

REACTION

Action Line recently mentioned that fees at county hospitals such as Harbor General are based on the patient's ability to pay. While this was previously correct, the current policy is that all patients are charged in full for the cost of their care, regardless of their ability to pay. However, payments are arranged based on ability to pay. The only exception is that psychiatric patients are billed based on their ability to pay for both inpatient and outpatient care. W.K., Harbor General Hospital, Torrance.

PG&E head dies in river mishap

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Shermer L. Sibley, board chairman and chief executive officer of Pacific Gas and Electric Co., died when he was swept away from fishing companions in a flood-swollen river in British Columbia, the utility firm reported Saturday.

Sibley, 62, was with a group of friends on the Dean River, 300 miles north of Vancouver, B.C., Friday when he appeared to be stricken and doubled over into the swift-flowing water, his friends said.

They said he floated face-down for a moment, then disappeared before the others could reach him.

The utility said it was told by Royal Canadian Mounted Police in Bella Coola, B.C., that Sibley's body had not been recovered.

Sibley joined PG&E in 1936 and rose within the firm as it grew to become one of the nation's largest private utilities. Sibley, who lived in suburban Lafayette, was a native of Oakland. He joined PG&E after graduating in electrical engineering from the University of California at Berkeley.

He became assistant to the general manager in 1946, vice president and assistant general manager in 1955 and vice president and general manager in 1958. He was elected president and chief operating officer in 1965, chief executive officer in 1969 and chairman in 1972.

Sibley played a major role in postwar expansion of PG&E electric and natural-gas service in Northern and Central California.

He also was a director of General Motors and Del Monte Corp. and held offices in utility-industry organizations.

Survivors include his widow, Mary; a daughter, Mrs. Patricia Allen; two sons, Peter and Jeffrey; a sister, Mrs. Julie S. Egan; brothers Edward F. Sibley, a PG&E vice president of Piedmont, Calif.; and Dr. John H. Sibley, a dentist of Alamo, Calif., and two grandchildren.

Viking still set for Tuesday landing

By RICHARD SALTUS
AP Science Writer

PASADENA — With little of the hoopla that attended America's moon landing just seven years ago, the United States Tuesday will attempt a feat of space exploration in many ways more difficult and less assured of success.

Early in the morning, Viking 1 will attempt to land its small biology laboratory safely on the surface of Mars to conduct its automated tests and see whether there is life on the Red Planet.

MORE THAN 200 million miles away, hundreds of space engineers and scientists will wait in suspense as the unmanned probe falls toward the surface, hopefully for a safe, gentle landing.

As valuable as the probe is — more than eight years of planning and the country's most advanced technology — direct control of its landing is not possible because Mars is so distant that radio waves take 18 minutes to travel there from Earth.

Once released by the orbiting mother ship, the 2,000-pound lander will be guided by a computer as it falls toward its target area, switching on small rockets in the last few seconds to cushion its landing. Because of the radio lag, no one will know until 18 minutes after its touchdown whether it landed or crashed.

The ambitiousness of the billion-dollar mission reminds one Viking official of the myth of Daedalus and Icarus. That father and son fixed feathered wings to their arms with wax in attempting to fly, but the bolder Icarus flew too high and the sun melted his wings.

"All along we've designed this mission more like Icarus than Daedalus," said Dr. Gentry Lee, director for science analysis and mission planning.

"We may have tried to go too near the Sun. But if we succeed, the jackpot will be enormous."

The mission is being carried out in the shadow of several past Soviet tries — all unsuccessful. Three Russian probes made it to the surface, but one crashed and the other two mysteriously fell silent just after touchdown. Scientists don't know whether the problem was the vicious Martian winds that can gust up to 600 miles per hour, a hazard such as a boulder or pothole, or something else.

Viking 1 blasted off from Earth on Aug. 20, 1975. It is a two-part craft consisting of the orbiting mother ship and the squat, three-legged lander. The orbiter began circling Mars June 19, taking pictures in greater detail than past fly-by missions so the technicians on Earth could choose a landing site.

A dry moon-like plain that may once have been a lake or inland sea will be Viking's home, for once it lands it cannot move. The area is called the Western Slope of Chryse Basin and is about 23½ degrees above the Martian equator, equivalent to the latitude of northern Mexico on Earth.

In September a second Viking is scheduled to land. It may be commanded to go farther north, where scientists believe a little water might be found, or south of the equator to the edge of an awesome, rugged canyon.

Soon after Viking 1 touches down — within seconds, in fact — a camera will take the first of many photographs of the surrounding terrain. These will be beamed back to Earth for study.

On the eighth day, a telescoping arm with a small shovel will dig into the surface, scoop up a sample of soil and dump it into a funnel that leads to the three biology experiments. The search for living organisms will be on.

The answer won't come immediately, though, and probably will arrive in bits and pieces. With Viking's July 4 landing postponed because of rough terrain at the originally chosen landing site, the search will be more than two weeks behind schedule.

The first hints of positive findings would not come before the middle of August and could not be confirmed for another two weeks at the earliest.

The fact that Viking controllers had the capability of delaying the landing several times is a sign of how adaptable — and therefore complex — the Viking mission is.

In contrast to Soviet missions, where all the events followed a preset time schedule and no scouting of landing sites was possible, Viking can be continually revised.

Lee, whose flight team group consists of brainstormers who constantly work out "What if?" problems, said, "We have the capability of redesigning the entire mission in 16 days."

Once the lander is on the surface of Mars, its daily chores can be rearranged by sending a signal from Earth that reprograms the lander's computer.

So sophisticated is the Viking way of doing things that there has been some criticism. It might have been better, said the critics, to probe the atmosphere and surface with cruder tools before risking the landers, which cost about $180 million each.

"Some people would have been in favor of a very simple, noncrushable design," Lee said, "that would have gotten down, taken a couple of pictures, told us something about the surface . . . and died."

known as DeForest Park.

In addition, the city plans to construct a 7-acre park as part of the redevelopment of Carmelitos Housing Project.

Denevan insisted that if DeForest park is developed, the citizens ought to know how much they'll pay for it in so-called replacement costs — intimating that the taxpayers will pay, in part, at least, for what should otherwise be the Y's obligation.

Denevan said his major quarrel, however, was with the city's "gobbling up of open space.

"Space is getting scarce," he said. "There's not much open land in the city," and Long Beach citizens simply can't afford to give up valuable park land for private use — however commendable that use may be.

In challenging the special permit, Denevan quoted a planning department document that said the branch facility "does not conform to either the general plan or current zoning."

But planning officials claimed that the facility was not required to conform to the general plan under existing law. And insofar as zoning was concerned, the law allowed the commission to grant an exemption from existing zoning requirements by means of the special permit.

In its report to the planning commission, the planning staff claimed that the special permit would not adversely affect the general plan. It said the proposed facility would, in fact, supplement the park with recreation uses.

The issue was first raised in 1974, when former City Manager John Mansell, in a letter to the City Council, said that "both city officials and Y representatives realize that, if at all possible, it is not desirable to construct non-park improvements in areas devoted to park use."

The letter added that "such use should be considered only in the most exceptional circumstances.

"In this particular instance," Mansell went on, "we have concluded that an exception could be justified on the basis that the site in question is underutilized for park purposes and probably will continue to be underutilized."

More significant, Mansell added, was the fact that the proposed use of the land would "contribute to the welfare and physical and moral development" of North Long Beach youngsters who would use the facility.

"Accordingly, we feel that the human values inherent in this proposal transcend the environmental and park policy factors to which we would normally defer in a situation such as this," he declared.

Thieves break car's wind-wing

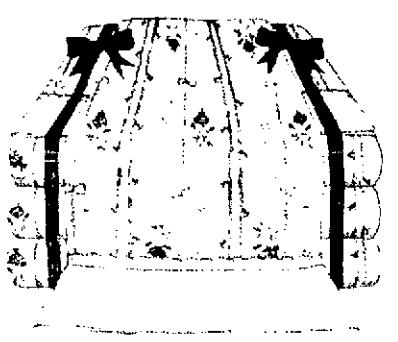

Thieves broke a wind-wing to enter the car of Elizabeth Walmsley while it was parked near her home at 2178 Chestnut Ave. and took a radio/tape player valued at $80, Long Beach police reported Saturday.

Union chief asks firing of top Civil Service officials

By ARTHUR SIDDON
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON—Charging political interference, the president of a federal employe union has asked President Ford to fire the chairman and other top officials of the U.S. Civil Service Commission.

In a letter to Ford, Nathan T. Wolkomir, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes (NFFE), said that Robert E. Hampton, commission chairman, should be removed to "rebuild public confidence" in the merit system.

Wolkomir's allegations were based on a seven-month probe of the commission's hiring and recruitment practices. The study was authorized by the commission and headed by a former Civil Service official, Milton I. Sharon.

The study disclosed that:

—Until 1973, the commission commonly gave special treatment to individuals recommended by the White House and members of Congress.

—Civil Service commissioners participated in such recommendations.

—The commission did not respond adequately to signs of political interference in the system.

"Chairman Hampton, it appears, was silent on or even supportive of the rape of the merit principle while the greatest spoils raid in modern history was under way," Wolkomir wrote Ford.

But in an interview, Wolkomir admitted that the Sharon report did not recommend Hampton's dismissal and that he had no evidence that Hampton actually participated in granting political favors.

Wolkomir urged that there be a housecleaning at the commission to show that the abuses of the Nixon administration would not be tolerated.

"Bob Hampton, however unfairly, cannot fail to have become a symbol of a pervasive scheme to subvert the merit system," Wolkomir wrote to Ford.

"While we are certain that he is essentially a true believer, the record of his support, and that of his top associates on his absolutely key and crucial issue, is dismal and negative," he told Ford.

The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee also has probed the abuses of the merit system and plans to issue a report by the end of July.

One incident the Sharon study investigated occurred in 1970, when a special White House assistant sent two confidential memoranda to the commission's executive director, seeking help in placing 17 individuals with the 1970 White House Conference on Children and Youth.

Several names on the list were those of sons and daughters of high-ranking White House and administration officials. All 17 received positions, while almost 16,000 others who applied were turned down.

In another case, a senator wrote to the chairman in 1969 asking for employment information on behalf of a constituent. Within three weeks the constituent was working at the job of his choice with the Small Business Administration.

Payoff in Teamster loan told

CHICAGO (AP) — A California businessman has told federal investigators he made a $200,000 payoff to obtain a $1.3-million loan from the Teamsters Union's Central States Pension Fund, a source close to the fund said Saturday.

The source, who asked to remain unidentified, confirmed for the Associated Press details of the payment as reported by the Chicago Sun-Times.

He said Foy E. Bryant, owner of the Mount Vernon Mortuary in Fair Oaks, Calif., has told federal officials he made three payments of $50,000, $75,000 and $75,000 to Alvin Baron, 50, formerly a powerful official in the fund who handled short-term investments, the source said.

A spokesman for the fund said it would have no official comment since the matter was under investigation.

Bryant was not immediately available for comment.

A FEDERAL grand jury is investigating Bryant's allegations against the fund, which has assets of $1.4 billion and covers 450,000 Teamsters and retirees in 33 states.

U.S. Atty. Samuel Skinner, heading the investigation, declined comment.

The Internal Revenue Service, in a separate action, reportedly has withdrawn the fund's tax-exempt status — effective Sept. 1 — because of questions about the fund's management.

The fund also is being scrutinized by the departments of Labor and Justice for alleged mismanagement and for making substantial loans to shaky business ventures, some associated with organized crime.

Records examined by the Sun-Times showed Bryant's Mount Vernon corporation borrowed a total of $2.8 million from the fund. Initial loans, the newspaper said, totaled $1.5 million in 1964 and 1965.

Bryant went back to the pension fund in 1974 and negotiated an additional $1.3 million loan after dealing with Baron, the source said.

BRYANT THEN had trouble making the loan payments and requested a delay. His corporate records showed a $200,000 expenditure as "loan fees" in connection with the $1.3 million loan made in December 1974, the Sun-Times reported.

When asked by Teamsters officials, Bryant said the money was a payoff to Baron, the source said.

The information was then carried to federal investigators on the advice of Teamsters President Frank E. Fitzsimmons, the source said, and Bryant repeated his story in a subsequent interview with federal authorities.

Baron, who lives in Las Vegas, was asked to resign by the fund's trustees, a source said, and his duties were assumed by Daniel Shannon, the fund executive director, who was unavailable for comment.

Democratic change of guard

Humphrey shaped new party

By WILLIAM BROOM
Ridder Convention Bureau

NEW YORK — A changing of the guard in politics is accomplished in many ways.

It can be abrupt or unpleasant, with the old order banished to the sidelines in disgrace, despair or defeat.

It can happen in full view on the field of battle or stealthily in smoke-filled rooms.

It can leave a bitter residue or it can be an inspiring turning point leading to renewal and a new era.

For the Democratic Party, it took place last week in Madison Square Garden before millions of television viewers and thousands of delegates to the party's national convention.

It was all wrapped up in the words and gestures of two speeches delivered by a man who has been at the vortex of eight Democratic conventions starting in 1948, Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota.

On Tuesday, Humphrey received a thunderous and emotional ovation as he gave what just as easily could have served as an acceptance speech for the winning candidate for the presidential nomination. After four unsuccessful tries for the presidency, it was Humphrey's farewell address. He and the crowd knew it, and that awareness heightened the moment and the poignancy for both.

On Thursday, Humphrey was back at the podium again, this time to nominate for the vice presidency his longtime friend and protege, Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota.

It was the changing of the guard, a moment brought on by forces neither man could control but that were shaped as much by Humphrey as by anyone.

"This has been a banner year for me, the greatest gift of my life," Humphrey said the following morning in his hotel suits. "I am at the top of the public-opinion polls. I've got what a man like me needs — friendship, respect, affection.

"I'm going back to Minnesota as happy as can be, knowing we've got a great ticket and knowing that my close friend Fritz Mondale will be the next vice president. I have truly enjoyed what happened here and have no remorse."

No regrets, no sense of loss knowing that will be no more opportunities to become President Humphrey?

"I don't need it," said Humphrey, "I want to live. I've never been happier in the Senate than the past two years, never felt more the sense of accomplishment."

The speculation that his efforts brought about Mondale's selection by Jimmy Carter obviously pleased Humphrey, but he rejects it. He says he was certain that given time and enough exposure to Mondale, Carter would eventually come to realize that Mondale was the best selection.

But Humphrey was available for repeated consultation with Mondale and with Carter and Charles Kirbo, his aide in charge of researching the vice-presidential candidates.

Humphrey conceded that early in June "certain forces were set in motion," activist, liberal, labor, black and Jewish elements in the party who were not enthusiastic about Carter's candidacy. Humphrey believes those groups are now wholeheartedly committed to the ticket.

During the process, Carter and his aides seemed most interested in whether the men they were considering were team players, compatible with Carter, able to advocate and execute effectively policies they might not totally approve — and whether each man could be a good president.

"I told them anybody who can live with me, like Fritz Mondale has, and still be cooperative and still be his own man was somebody extraordinary, somebody hard to find," said Humphrey.

SENS. MONDALE AND HUMPHREY CAMPAIGN IN MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., SATURDAY
—AP Wirephoto

The Minnesota Delegation was urged to talk up Mondale to other delegates at the convention, and Humphrey believes that also contributed to Carter's selection of him.

"The real reason Fritz got it was that he fits in with Carter," said Humphrey. "He, like Carter, is rather new on the ntional scene, and because they are new they have good vibes."

It could have been a different convention, different but for the chemistry and character of Hubert Humphrey.

After the Pennsylvania primary went to Carter, the party's traditional activist groups stepped up pressure on Humphrey to run. Joseph Crangle, New York state political leader, said he had 500 delegates committed to Humphrey. But Humphrey declined.

"If I had come in here with 400 or 500 delegates, there would have been a knockdown, pitched battle, very divisive, and I knew it," said Humphrey. "It would have been of no help to me in the election, and I knew that.

"The press and the media would have called me an old man and a spoiler."

And so for Humphrey the final arena will be the Senate and not the White House. He heads the Joint Economic Committee and in reality, if not in title, runs the Foreign Relations Committee. He has epochal legislation heading toward passage, and he prides himself that the past two years have been the most fruitful in two tours of duty in the Senate.

The Senate and Mondale in the vice presidency are his consolation.

"It was the time for some younger people, some new people," Humphrey said.

Just Plains folks coin cash from Carter's candidacy

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Jimmy Carter's friends and neighbors opened their cash registers to visitors Saturday.

But at least one local entrepreneur suffered. Amy Carter, the Democratic presidential nominee's 8-year-old daughter, had to shut down the lemonade stand she had run for thirsty reporters.

Security precautions barred reporters from sitting on the street outside Carter's ranch-style home.

Inside the home, sealed off from the public, Carter savored his nomination.

He also prepared for his Sunday-school lesson at the First Baptist Church, caught up with Georgia press coverage of the convention in New York and dipped into biographies of two other Democratic politicians: Minnesota Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey and the late President Johnson.

When Carter returned to Plains from New York he expressed hope that the pressures of his presidential campaign wouldn't change him or his neighbors. But change was hard to prevent, and its signs were everywhere.

Carter's house is the only one on Woodland Drive, and Secret Service agents erected guardhouses and barricades to seal it off from the curious. There was an unconfirmed report from knowledgeable sources that communications equipment last used at the Key Biscayne, Fla., house of former President Nixon had been installed.

Down on Main Street, Carter's first cousin, State Sen. Hugh Carter, was selling peanuts at $4.95 for a five-pound burlap bag and his own privately produced "Carter For President" pins.

Elsewhere in town, Carter campaign workers in the headquarters building that once housed the railroad station sold hand-painted Carter tote bags and purses, $15 scarves and other souvenirs.

An enterprising druggist bottled boiled peanuts in glass pill bottles and sold them for $1.50 each.

Carter achieves dream, the grand coalition

By GIL BAILEY
Bipartisan Convention Bureau

NEW YORK — For the first time in 12 years the Democrats got it all together here. And now it's up to Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale to translate "unity" into victory.

The Democratic Convention last week put the party, which fell apart in 1968 and 1972, back together. And as the convention closed, it provided some much-needed enthusiasm for the Democratic nominees.

ANALYSIS

At the final moments, Alabama Gov. George Wallace shared a podium with Carter, Mondale, Sens. Hubert Humphrey, Henry Jackson and George McGovern, Rep. Morris K. Udall and California Gov. Brown, while the Rev. Martin Luther King Sr. gave an emotional benediction.

CARTER, at least on the surface, has translated his dream of re-establishing the old Democratic grand coalition of the South, the minorities, the cities, labor, agriculture and the liberals, the coalition which was first split in 1948 over civil rights and later broken apart on the rock of the Vietnam War and the riots of the late 1960s.

But 1976 is a far different year from 1932, when Franklin Roosevelt first established that coalition. And Carter now must find the issues that stir the American people if he is to make that coalition produce the votes that make presidents.

He sounded his theme in his acceptance speech and that theme, as in the primaries, was that the American people can trust him to restore the American dream.

THE DEMOCRATS, in the three convention days, did more than select candidates and heal wounds.

A New South has risen, a South that may be more liberal on race questions than, say, a city such as Boston. And a man from the Deep South has a chance, depending on his own efforts, to be the first southern president in more than 100 years.

In addition, that tired old cliche, a "new generation of leader-ship," actually took office. Carter, 51, and Mondale, 48, represent a new generation of leadership for the Democratic Party.

Humphrey, McGovern, Eugene McCarthy, Wallace, if not retired, at least have become "senior statesmen." Most of the old wounds are healed, on the surface, and in some cases below the surface.

ONLY DURING the vice-presidentialnominating process did two of those wounds surface.

Reps. Ronald Dellums and John Conyers, both black, reminded the convention that the minorities still want a piece of the action. But they did so in terms that made it clear they feel that action will only come from the Democratic nominees.

"We believe in unity. We witnessed the unity of the '60s, when people of every background came together . . . in the struggle of justice that still continues," Conyers said.

The Vietnam War also still hurts, as Marine Sgt. Ron Kovic told the convention from a wheelchair.

Kovik quieted the crowd as he spoke of his wounds and the wounds of others. His left him "with legs that would not stand, a body that would not feel and a pain and anguish that would never leave me."

He was followed by the anti-war, amnesty candidate for the vice presidency, Chris Efaw, who left the country to avoid service in a war he opposed.

One delegate held his nose as Efaw called, like Kovic before him, for total amnesty. Carter supports amnesty for those who refused to serve, as Efaw did, but not those who deserted from the military.

Those two brief flashes of disunity were quickly set aside as the pleaders and pledged themselves to Carter and Mondale.

The Democrats were unified, and it had been Carter's careful doing.

He stacked and stage-managed the convention with an iron discipline that left no room for disagreement.

In fact, the convention was so well managed that it was dull, and that dullness threatened to dampen the enthusiasm necessary for victory.

The Democrats were on time, and sometimes ahead of time, leaving television's merciless cameras with nothing to catch. Americans watched anything else offered on television other than the convention.

On Monday night, New Yorkers preferred that great old movie "Casablanca" to the convention. On Tuesday night, even the reporters and many delegates watched baseball"s all-star game rather than a dull recital of the Democratic platform.

Meantime, Carter and his aides put out any threatening fires, including an effort by female activists to get 50 per cent of the delegates at the next convention.

Jerry Brown tried to stir up a little action, but fell on his face. He hoped to rally 500 delegates to his cause, but he still fell short of the Udall vote count.

Udall conceded in a happy and witty speech that brought the convention to its feet, and his speech was the best thing going for Carter until Carter and Mondale spoke for themselves. Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Tex., also proved again that she has a voice and an eloquence that can stir the hearts of Democrats.

"She'll be our first woman president," one enthusiastic Democrat said.

Carter himself finally stirred the convention. His choice of Mondale brought the liberal and activist camp to his side.

Labor wanted Mondale, the blacks had been urging Mondale, the activists wanted Mondale. Mondale it was and the Democratic left was ecstatic

Little recognized, but also a factor, is the Carter-Mondale appeal to agriculture. Both are from farm states. Carter is a farmer and knows farm problems first hand. And many farmers are vastly unhappy with the Ford administration, particularly over the administration's policy concerning grain transactions and embargoes.

So as the convention closed, Carter was in a position to carry his message to the American people for their decision.

"We have been shaken by a tragic war abroad and by scandals and broken promises at home. Our people are seeking new voices, new ideas and new leaders," he said.

"Although government has its limits and cannot solve all our problems, we Americans reject the view that we must be reconciled to failures and mediocrity, or to an inferior quality of life," Carter told the convention.

He promised jobs. He promised tax reform. He promised reform of the bureaucracy. He promised justice for all.

He punctuated his remarks with the sentence: "You can depend on it."

That sentence was built on the foundation of Carter's previous assumptions, seemingly naive, that he would be nominated and would be elected president, assumptions that drew laughter when he first announced this candicay.

No one laughed Thursday night.

But the speech contained few specifics, and in the coming debate with the Republican nominee, specifics are going to be demanded. Carter may resist that demand, remembering George McGovern's massive problems when he got specific.

Carter will face other problems, and one of them is his stand on abortion.

Representatives of the Catholic Church are not happy with Carter's refusal to call for an anti-abortion constitutional amendment. However, polls of Catholics, and others, show that most of the American people, including Catholics, support the court's decision.

In fact, when Carter tried to mollify the anti-abortion criticism at a Thursday press conference, he risked offending the majority opinion and raised once again the question of whether Carter speaks on both sides of the issue.

Carter faces one further political problem. He is a southern Baptist, "born again in Christ," and, as is proper, he speaks of that rebirth. Millions of Americans share that belief, and it may be the strongest religious belief in the nation, but others do not share nor are they knowledgeable of conservative Protestantism. Some are suspicious.

LAWMEN WORK AROUND OPENING TO BURIED TRUCK WHERE 26 CHILDREN WERE HELD

Kidnapers were prepared

Truck fixed as prison

LIVERMORE (AP) — The prison that held 26 children and one adult for nearly 18 hours was probably an old military moving-van type of truck abandoned years ago and only recently renovated to receive the hostages.

"It has been here for a very long time, maybe just after World War II," Alameda County Sheriff Tom Houchins said Saturday as he led reporters around the heavily guarded site.

"I thought we were going to die down there," said Mike Marshall, 14, one of the abducted children.

Teams of FBI agents and sheriff's deputies were probing for clues as Houchins explained that the kidnapers apparently had worked long and hard to get the truck ready for the children.

The vehicle had six feet of dirt on top of the roof and was in an old burial ground for surplus military equipment. A circular hole, about two feet in diameter, had been cut in the roof for access.

Dead brush, six feet high or more, was planted in the dirt to camouflage the site.

"Whoever they were, they obviously took a great deal of time to fix it up," said Houchins. "There was a fresh supply of food — sandwiches, potato chips and the like, mattresses, bedspreads and a water supply."

The food was enough to last about two days, he said.

"We don't know how the truck got here. We don't know what, if anything, it was used for. We don't know what they planned to do with it in the future," said FBI agent Charles Bates.

Suddenly, in dark, kids began singing

By PATRICK ARNOLD
Associated Press

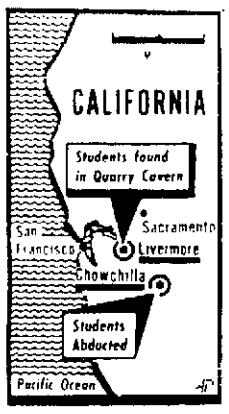

CHOWCHILLA — At first, some thought it was a joke. But as 26 school children were taken to a dark, half-underground prison and shut in, some wet their pants, and a little girl fainted.

But the panic didn't last long, and soon, a little hesitantly at first but with gathering enthusiasm, they were all bravely singing to keep their spirits up.

"We kids were asking all the time why they were doing this to us," said 9-year-old Jennifer Brown. "They didn't say anything."

The children, along with their driver, were spirited from their school bus Thursday by three silent men, then buried alive in a quarry nearly 100 miles away. Many doubted they would come home alive to this farm community.

"We didn't think we'd ever get out," 11-year-old Michelle Robison said Saturday after being reunited with her family. "I thought it was a joke at first. But I didn't when they put us in the vans."

Darla Daniels, a deeply tanned 10-year-old who aspires to movie stardom, said the bus from Dairyland Unified School District was stopped by three gunmen who blocked the roadway with their van. She said the gunmen were wearing ties, but later switched to white coveralls.

During the ride north to a Livermore quarry, Darla said, the two-van caravan stopped three times so the kidnapers could refuel the vans from gasoline cans they carried. She said the children were hot because they were covered with a tent-like tarp, and they weren't permitted to go out to the bathroom, so "all of us had to go in our pants."

They were herded down a ladder and locked into a what might have been the body of a World War II-vintage moving van covered with earth. The kidnapers provided them with potato chips, cereal, and eight gallons of water, then they were left alone with only a flashlight for light.

The children and their driver, Frank Edward Ray, did what they could to keep their fear under control in the stifling underground atmosphere.

"We were singing songs like on the radio," Darla related.

When the children came to the police station Saturday to be questioned and fingerprinted (to check off prints on the school bus) some spoke with reporters. None could even guess why they were abducted.

Nine-year-old Rebecca Reynolds, asked how it felt to be home and wearing clean clothes, said earnestly: "It's better than being in that hole all covered up."

GOOD FOR DAYS SHOWN

In town of fear

Relief, then lynch talk

By JAMES SCHUTZE
Knight News Service

CHOWCHILLA — This town struggled to return to life Saturday but with mixed sentiments — great relief, bitterness and fear.

The kindly smile vanished from the face of Marguerite Steyer, a white-haired widow who says she is "a little short of 64," when the subject of the kidnapers came up.

"I begin to see why people got the rope in the old days," she said.

"But I was so, so relieved when I heard the kids were all right."

The people of this dairy and cotton farming community, whose first instinct, they say, has always been to fix lunch for strangers, talked often of vengeance during their long ordeal.

Rose Taylor, 59, whose 11-year-old grandson, Jodie Helfington, was among the kidnaped children, talked about lynching.

The people of Chowchilla, 90 per cent of whom are white, live in houses worth an average of $25,000 to $35,000. They describe themselves almost universally as modest, hospitable people, who nevertheless are capable of standing up firmly in a fight.

The wives of Chowchilla's volunteer firemen amazed the large and frenzied army of reporters by supplying them with a steady flow of food, coffee and encouragement through the all-night vigil.

Somehow the residents, whose grief was real, always seemed to be comforting the press, whose trials were merely professional.

But up and down the main street Saturday, where white oleander blossoms floated on the breeze like snow, the talk implied almost guiltily that perhaps the town has been naive too long.

Rodney Tucker, 42, nursing an 8 a.m. beer in the Corral Bar, said, "I sure hope people will tighten up."

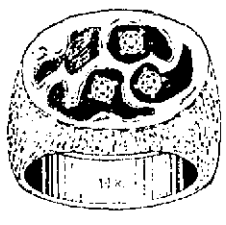

Tucker then snorted and said, "I do not want to see this happen again. I just keep wondering why Chowchilla, way down here in the middle of the state?"

There was talk along the street of Charles Manson and the Zodiac killer, as if California's major cities somehow were fielding an alliance of madmen against the rural interior.

But invariably, angry words gave way to expressions of relief and profound gratitude that the children were safe.

Bob Boscarri, 52, leaned against the school bus he was fixing at his auto shop Saturday and said, "I just thank the good Lord that everybody's all right."

U.S., Germany end Bonn's role in funding troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and West Germany announced Saturday that they are ending a multibillion-dollar program under which the Bonn government, for the past 14 years, has partially compensated the United States for the stationing of troops in West Germany.

The announcement was made in a joint statement by President Ford and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt at the conclusion of Schmidt's two-day Bicentennial visit here. Schmidt flew to Philadelphia Saturday morning.

Ford and Schmidt also announced that West Germany will contribute $ 8.5 million for the relocation of a U.S. combat brigade, totaling 3,800 men, near Bremen in northern Germany. The brigade will be transferred from the United States.

OFFICIALS SAID the move was part of a plan to place greater emphasis on U.S. combat capability in Europe and phase down support facilities.

The West German contribution to the relocation is about 60 per cent of the total cost, and officials said the brigade is expected to be in place at the end of 1977.

The United States has about 217,000 troops stationed in West Germany, and by way of so-called "offset agreements" over the years the West Germans have contributed $11.2 billion under various formulas to help defray balance of payments costs to Washington.

The last such agreement, costing West Germany $2.21 billion, expired in fiscal year 1975. Much of the German contribution over the years was made in the form of purchases of U.S. military equipment.

Officials said that, even though the West Germans will no longer be tied to a specific arrangement for compensating the United States, they will continue to be a major purchaser of American military equipment.

SINCE THE expiration of the last offset agreement 13 months ago, officials said, West Germany has acquired several hundred million dollars worth of U.S. equipment.

A senior American official said the United States had decided before Schdmit's visit that it was not interested in a new offset agreement, but Pentagon sources disputed this statement.

They described the U.S. decision not to press the issue as a major concession to West Germany.

The announcement said the two governments felt a new agreement was not necessary in view of the improved strength of the dollar and the more acceptable U.S. balance of payments situation.

Italy warned 'loans stop' if Communists given cabinet posts

By LESLIE H. GELB
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The United States, West Germany, France and Britain have reached an informal understanding to bar further loans to Italy if Communists hold cabinet posts in any new Italian government.

Administration officials said Saturday, however, that under the formula advanced by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Communist Party participation in the government, short of membership in the cabinet, would not constitute an obstacle to further financial aid.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt disclosed the understanding, which was reached during a seven-nation economic conference held in Puerto Rico last month, in a background briefing to reporters here Friday. The White House deputy press secretary, John G. Carlson, said Saturday: "I would have no quarrel with what the chancellor said."

ROME (AP) — The Italian left and the dominant Christian Democrats reacted angrily Saturday to the disclosure that the United States and three Western European nations have decided to deny economic aid to Italy if Communists are included in the next cabinet. An official of Premier-designate Giulio Andreotti's Christian Democrat Party said he was annoyed above all by the fact that West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt broke the news at a time when Andreotti is trying to woo the Communists and the labor movement into a soft stand.

THE UNDERSTANDING goes well beyond previous warnings by administration leaders about the consequences of Communists' coming to governmental power in Italy. Administration officials said the understanding had been communicated to leaders of the Italian Christian Democratic Party in an effort to dissuade some of them who might otherwise be tempted to share cabinet authority with Communists.

As a result of last month's parliamentary elections, the Communists hold 228 of the 630 seats in the Chamber of Deputies, the lower house, where they are second only to the Christian Democrats.

Administration officials said that Canada and Japan, two other participants in the Puerto Rican conference, had raised no objections to the formula. Italy was the seventh participant in the meeting, which was called to discuss mutual economic problems.

THE SUBJECT of financial aid to Italy was not specifically on the formal agenda, but officials said it had been discussed in informal meetings between U.S. leaders and the other heads of government.

The officials maintained that in terms of the timing of the conference — just after the Italian elections and before the American political conventions — the question of what to do about Italy was uppermost in the minds of the American participants.

As one high administration official put it, "Our objective was to link further financial aid to Italy to certain economic and political conditions."

If these conditions were met, officials explained, one possibility for generating additional loans to Italy would be for the International Monetary Fund to use its authority to provide aid "in special circumstances" out of its $5-billion to $6-billion reserve for industrial countries.

Administration officials seemed to have been taken off guard by Schmidt's conversation with reporters Friday. "The State Department refused through the day to make an official comment. West German diplomats spoke as though the chancellor had done nothing more than say the obvious.

Brown may have lost big chance

First of all, there was Brown's decision to insist on being nominated "so those people who worked so hard for me could exercise their prerogative to cast a vote."

But surely the people who supported the campaigns of Morris Udall, George Wallace, Henry Jackson, Frank Church, Fred Harris and Ellen McCormack believed in their candidates as much as the people who supported Brown's believed in their's, and worked as hard.

Yet all the candidates, save Brown, believed the appearance of party unity was at least as important. Udall let his delegates cast a symbolic vote for him, but only after he had spoken from the convention podium and stated the concerns which had caused him to be a candidate. He then pledged support for Carter.

Brown, too, had concerns that he thought were not being considered by the candidates and so he had entered the race. Just a few days before the convention he said that, despite Carter's certain nomination, "those issues are still there."

Where better to articulate those concerns than the convention podium, with 30 million Americans watching? How better to plant in those viewers' minds, and in the minds of the delegates present, the memory of Jerry Brown as the leader who had expressed those concerns, and in so doing indicate a unique sensitivity to the people's needs and aspirations?

Udall chose to do that, and he did it well, before adding a gracious acknowledgment of Carter's clear victory.

The Californian chose, instead, to pass up the chance.

"When I take that podium," he said in some exasperation late Wednesday night, after the roll call, "it will be when I have something significant to say."

There were other decisions of questionable merit.

Cesar Chavez was chosen as Brown's main nomination speaker, and the United Farm Worker's leader who has so often spoken with incisiveness and passion and powerful persuasion chose instead to read a prepared speech — certainly a decision in which the Brown team participated — and it came across as dull and curiously without emotion.

But without doubt the most startling decision was the one to ask Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards to give a seconding speech for Brown.

Organized labor has a unanimous antipathy for right-to-work laws. No Democratic presidential hopeful in his right mind would deliberately antagonize labor. Yet Brown identified himself with a governor who only recently signed a right-to-work law.

As if that were not enough, a few weeks ago Edwards was asked why he was not supporting Carter, a Southerner like himself, instead of Brown.

Because Carter, he said, does not understand the plight of the oil companies.

Which suggests that Brown had revised his thinking on oil companies. His previous statements indicated that he would not use the word "plight" to describe the current circumstance of oil companies.

Brown has attracted national interest because of his unorthodoxy, but he has sometimes seemed to be straining to nourish that image. He seemed to be straining at the convention.

He said after it was all over that he planned to go to a Trappist retreat to think things over. It is time he did.

Fallen protester

James Holiday, one of more than 150 blacks in a march calling for open housing in the southwest side of Chicago, falls to the street after being struck by a thrown object Saturday. Whites in the area tossed rocks and bottles at the marchers. At least 28 persons were injured and 62 were arrested. The marchers were members of the Martin Luther King Jr. Movement. A federal judge earlier declined to block the march after city officials argued there would be trouble.

Marines' maltreatment continues

By EVERETT R. HOLLES
New York Times Service

SAN DIEGO — The maltreatment of boot-camp recruits by drill sergeants at the Marine Corps training depot here has continued in the wake of the scandal arising from the fatal beating of a mentally retarded youth seven months ago, official sources have acknowledged.

Since Pvt. Lynn E. McClure, 20, of Lufkin, Tex., was clubbed to the ground last Dec. 6, there have been at least 33 other cases in which drill instructors have been punished for abusing recruits, are awaiting court-martial or have been suspended.

The 33 incidents are in addition to charges brought against six Marines, three of them officers, for allowing McClure to be knocked unconscious during mock bayonet combat with 12-pound pugil sticks while he was on probation in a since-disbanded "motivation" platoon.

Pugil-stick bouts still are taking a toll of injuries at the San Diego recruit depot, with 18 casualties reported since Jan. 1, none of them fatal.

A spokesman for the base commander, Maj. Gen. Kenneth J. Houghton, confirmed that courts-martial for maltreatment were running at double last year's rate. The charges range from hazing, harassment and "borrowing" of money from recruits, to dereliction of duty, violation of training regulations and aggravated assault.

The court-martial of the second drill sergeant in the McClure case, Staff Sgt. Henry C. Wallraff, 27, of St. Croix, Minn., will be resumed Monday before a four-man special court on three charges of dereliction of duty.

Wallraff was watch supervisor on Dec. 6 of the special training battalion that included the disciplinary motivation platoon and four other platoons made up of various types of "problem" recruits.

Staff Sgt. Harold L. Bronson, 30, of Freeport, Fla., who allowed "three blows" to be struck against McClure after the Texas youth threw down his pugil stick and refused to fight, was acquitted June 28 by a general court-martial on seven charges including involuntary manslaughter.

NEW KIND OF COURAGE

on Avenue 21. There was a white van parked down the road with the door open, and I slowed up because he was over the white line.

"I slowed up to go around him and out jumped a man with two guns and a mask on. He ordered me to open my door. Then two other guys jumped out of the van. One of them ordered me to the back seat, and the other took over my bus. He continued on down the road for about a mile, then turned into the slough (dry creek) bottom, into the tules (reeds), with my bus with all the kids on it.

"The white van pulled up by my door, backed up and ordered about half the kids in. Then they pulled a black van up and loaded the rest of 'em. I was in the black van. It was just solid dark in there.

"We got stuck, and I thought he wasn't gonna' get out. But he got out and we traveled and traveled and traveled to get to where we were.

"We got to this one spot. He runs through some brush and stuff. I could hear it scratching the van. He left the cooler on for a while, and then he shut it off. We thought we was gonna' suffocate in there for a while. I pulled the carpet loose to try to get air.

Then about 3:30 in the morning, he backed the van up to this thing that was all canvassed over. He unloaded us through the back door. He wanted the bus driver first, so I got out and he asked me my name and my age. Then he wanted my pants and my boots, so I had to give him them.

"Then he unloaded all the kids and asked for a name and age. He gave me a flashlight and I had to help the kids down through this hole, about a three-foot hole, down into this old truck body I guess it was. When they got through, they pulled the ladder up and put a big steel plate over the hole, so there we was down in there.

"They had some food and some water for us, some Cheerios and 'tater chips, plenty of water and a couple of loaves of bread.

"They had this thing all lined with big ol' mesh wire. They stood on the outside and we could hear them cutting the wires and the ceiling started to cave in. We thought we were gonna' have it right then. We kept beggin' them to let us out.

"In the afternoon we never did hear 'em cutting the wires no more, so me and a couple of the boys decide we'd better start diggin'. When we started to move this steel plate, we couldn't hardly move it because it had two great big ol' batteries on top of it. One of the batteries I couldn't even lift myself. I had to get the kids to help me. We had to pile up mattresses and stuff to get us close enough to the hole to get out.

"They had another big box filled about 30 inches high. They had dirt piled on each side and on the top, and we couldn't start to move it. It's just lucky we had a short block of wood in the thing there that they had for a brace, and we used it to pry.

"We'd throw water over our heads to try to cool off, then go up and dig some more. I'd say it was about 7 o'clock we got dug out. I handed the kids up to the other boys and we got out. Just lucky enough there was a gravel pit there, within 200 feet of us, and there was a man over there, so we told him what happened. He went and called the sheriff, and the sheriff's men and the fire trucks and everything else acame and we had a big crowd and we all got home safe."

They had found themselves in a gravel pit outside of Livermore, 100 miles from Chowchilla.

Ray spoke with modesty about how he had "kept quieting the kids down so those guys didn't get mad at us. We had a lot of cryin' and beggin' for their mamas and stuff." However, he said, the children were never actually threatened.

The abductors had cut small holes in the metal sides of the 8-by-16-foot prison. But the air inside was stifling, Ray said, and it became increasingly difficult to breathe.

He said the kidnapers said nothing to him except to ask his name. "I never did as much as hear 'em speak to one another," he added.

But the frightened children made up for their silence. " I just talked to 'em and begged 'em not to holler and scream, that we're gonna try to get out of here," he said.

The three men all were wearing stocking masks, Ray said, "but I think I'll know one man if I ever see him again because I looked at him the whole time I was helping those kids down the ladder. I looked straight up at him."

When they started cutting the wire mesh, and the dirt started caving in, Ray became fearful that the men meant to kill their prisoners. "That's the only thing I thought about," he said.

And how does he feel about the abductors now?

"I wouldn't let 'em live if I could get a-hold of 'em," he said.

But now it was over. It was 6 a.m., and he had spent nearly 30 minutes reliving his recent horror. The pink rays of the sun shone brighter and, in the new morning light, Ed Ray looked extremely tired.

"How do you feel ? a questioner asked gently.

"I feel a lot better than I did a while ago," he answered simply.

It had been nearly 40 hours since the ordeal began, and the gentle bus driver rose to leave. His audience applauded loudly.

And suddenly, in a little firehouse in Chowchilla, the word courage had a new meaning.

CHILDREN TELL ORDEAL

which they believed was intended to be their coffin.

"We didn't think we'd ever get out," said 11-year-old Michelle Robison as the children came to the police station to be questioned and fingerprinted (for comparison with prints on the school bus). "I thought it was a joke at first, but I didn't when they put us in the vans."

Mike Marshall, the 14-year-old son of a rodeo performer, said, "We didn't know if they were going to be there pointing guns at our heads or what . . . I thought we were going to die down there . . .

"We were really sweating bad because we had no air," said Mike, whose five hours of digging finally allowed the children and the driver to escape Friday night.

Mike also said that he and a friend heard one of the kidnapers call another kidnaper "Jerry."

An all-points bulletin was issued for the three men, believed to be traveling in two vans, one white and one medium blue, each with two CB radio antennas.

Police said they were looking for a man about 35 years old, with black curly hair, a chipped front tooth and a tattoo on his right forearm. Another kidnaper was described as about 27, with brown hair, blue eyes and a hairy mole on his right cheek.

The descriptions only deepened the mystery. It was not known how authorities obtained the detailed descriptions, since the kidnapers reportedly wore stocking masks. And the APB's description of the vans conflicted with the description given by bus driver Ray, who said one van was white and the other black.

Of the ordeal, Ray said: "We thought we'd had it. The kids kept hollering, 'Why'd they do this to us?'

"I don't know either," the 55-year-old driver added.

As a statewide search was in progress for the three kidnapers and the two vans, authorities allowed more than 100 reporters and photographers to view the bunker-like prison, buried six feet underground at the rear of a quarry near Livermore, about 100 miles to the northeast, toward San Francisco.

The makeshift prison had been equipped with ventilation tubes, two exhaust fans, a portable toilet, mattresses, bedding and food supplies.

"The roof was shored up with 4-by-4s," said Alameda County Sheriff Tom Houchins. "Whoever they were, they obviously took a great deal of time to fix it up."

Madera County Sheriff Ed Bates said the FBI was leaving the case "at this time" because there was no proof the kidnapers had crossed a state line. However, he said the bureau would continue to offer asssistance of its lab facilities.

The sheriff noted that the FBI "developed some very good investigative leads," but "motive is one of the areas where we have the least amount of information."

Authorities said no ransom request had been received, and they noted that Chowchilla is not an affluent town, nor did any terrorist group claim responsibility or demand a swap of political prisoners for the children.

When the children arrived back home, weary but unharmed, the whole town was up to greet them in the moonlit, predawn hours.

The children, ages 6 to 14, were rumpled and dirty, most of them lost in oversized prison jumpsuits hastily brought in to replace clothing taken by the kidnapers.

Diplomats studying up on Carter

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Certain foreign-policy aims outlined by Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter have worried key allies of the United States, pleased others and dismayed the Arab countries.

But an Associated Press survey after the Democratic convention of two dozen of the 128 embassies in Washington disclosed a consensus on one thing:

The international policy platform adopted by the Democrats seems to almost all hard-eyed diplomats to be bland and broad enough to permit Carter, if elected, to switch course and change emphasis on quite a number of major world issues.

"It's one thing for a challenger for power to spell out his wishes," a veteran European ambassador remarked. "It's another thing for him to fulfill those wishes when he faces the realities in office."

Most embassies sent observers to the New York convention to analyze and report to their home governments on the sort of international posture a Democratic administration might be expected to take.

ONLY a few, however, considered themselves free to provide attributable comments. A majority of the envoys declined to be identified for fear of being accused of meddling in internal U.S. affairs. Spokesmen for the Soviet and other Communist embassies declined to discuss any aspect of Carter's approach to world affairs.

The survey showed:

—Concern among America's partners in the NATO alliance over Carter's skeptical attitude toward existing nuclear strategy. Carter has publicly expressed disbelief in the possibility of limiting nuclear war. This strikes at the idea of "flexible response," which is at the center of NATO planning now. And to anxious West German, British and other allied officials, it revives the long-discarded concept of "massive nuclear retaliation" against an aggressor using even tactical atomic weapons.

—Pleased relief among Japanese and South Korean authorities over Carter's pledge to consult with them on preserving a U.S. military presence in their area. "We have the impression Mr. Carter is keeping his options open and we appreciate that," a senior Asian envoy said.

—Unconcealed dismay among 15 Arab countries over what they see as the Democratic Party's readiness to back up the Israelis to the hilt militarily, politically and economically.

$500 reward offered high school arsonists

At 1:15 a.m. last July 1, fire swept through a one-story classroom building at Millikan High School, 2800 Snowden Ave., causing damage totaling $120,000.

Fire department arson investigators determined that the blaze was set by vandals who spread gasoline around the interior of the building before igniting it. Witnesses told the investigators they saw two juveniles running from the school just before the flames erupted.

Secret Witness will pay $500 for information leading to the arrest and arson conviction of those responsible for the fire.

If you have such information, call Secret Witness at 436-2526 from 8 a.m. and midnight on weekdays, or from 3 to 11 p.m.

U.S. 'has lost' drug-abuse battle, says Senate report

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling drug abuse a national tragedy, Senate investigators said Saturday that a reorganization intended to strengthen federal efforts to combat the traffic in illicit drugs has failed.

In the three years since the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) was established, the nation's illicit drug traffic has grown, said a report of the permament investigations subcommittee, a unit of the Senate Government Operations Committee.

"THE NUMBER of drug addicts continues to increase at a rapid rate, brown heroin from Mexico continues to come into this country in massive amounts and drug abuse continues to spread into rural and suburban areas," it said.

In comments on the report, Peter Bensinger, DEA administrator, said that while the agency welcomes and needs the interest of the committee for more effective law enforcement against drugs, "the findings of this report, simply put, are dated."

"They may represent the committee findings on past DEA operations, but do not portray DEA's mission or strategies in July 1976," he said in a statement.

The subcommittee's report was based on an investigation and hearings conducted last year.

IT SAID that "although DEA has presented statistics to demonstrate considerable numbers of arrests of violators and seizures of illicit drugs, the ability of higher-echelon dealers and financiers to bring illicit drugs into the United States has not been effectively deterred."

The subcommittee said the DEA has concentrated too much on pursuing low-level drug dealers and addicts, and not enough on conspiracy cases targeted against high-level narcotics traffickers.

It also complained of a lack of cooperation in exchanging information between DEA and the Customs Service, responsible for protecting the nation's borders and ports of entry against smugglers.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., acting chairman of the subcommittee, said in a statement accompanying the report that DEA and Customs had "declared war on each other — not on the big-time, international narcotics smugglers and dealers."

The DEA was established in the Justice Department on July 1, 1973, under an executive order of former President Nixon that consolidated the enforcement functions of a number of agencies.

Nunn said that despite the subcommittee's criticisms of DEA operations, he was impressed by the efforts of Atty. Gen. Edward Levi and Bensinger "to correct many of the problems they inherited."

However, he added that "Congress must also take a major role in this effort" and said the subcommittee will hold hearings later this month to search for ways to improve federal narcotics enforcement.

On the type and level of DEA arrests, Bensinger said that DEA's Class I heroin arrests (major trafficker organization) have increased 106 per cent in the past nine months. Class IV arrests (street level) declined for every drug category in the last nine months of fiscal year 1976, with marijuana Class IV arrests down 45 per cent (1,400 cases), he said.

Bensinger also said. "Customs and DEA relations have been strained in the past, but our relations have improved markedly."

Internal security staffing has been increased from 29 inspectors in January to 51 inspectors now, he said and added, "I am impressed by the caliber of the people at DEA."

In addition to faulting DEA for a misplaced emphasis on low-level dealers, the subcommittee questioned reliance on buying narcotics and information by undercover agents, a so-called buy-bust technique, as a principal investigative tool.

"More often than not, street-level pushers could not identify a major trafficker if they wanted to," the report said.

It also said that integrity problems with DEA personnel have resulted from an overemphasis on street-level, buy-bust techniques, with the attendant dangers of corruption, and also from the lack of an independent, fully staffed internal investigative unit.

New-drug tests 'not thorough'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is not properly monitoring new drug tests to protect the general public and human test subjects from severe side effects, a study said Saturday.

The U.S. General Accounting Office, the watchdog agency of Congress, made the accusation in an 85-page report calling for better FDA regulation of new-drug testing.

The Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act and the FDA's regulations require the agency to closely control the human testing of new drugs and to approve a new drug for safety and efficacy before it is placed in the interstate market.

"POORLY conducted clinical investigations unnecessarily expose human subjects to potential hazards and could result in the FDA's approving a drug for marketing on the basis of inaccurate and unreliable data," the GAO said.

It added: "To prevent this, the agency must monitor the performance of clinical investigations. Such reviews, however, have been limited."

To satisfy FDA requirements for safety and efficacy, the sponsor of a new drug must, among other things, clinically test the drug under closely controlled circumstances.

LEADERS IN CRISIS—

Garfield pushes civil service

Associated Press

NINETEENTH OF A SERIES
By SID MOODY

Like honest garbage men, politicians of the Gilded Age heaved mightily to "throw the rascals out." Often as not they heaved a new set of rascals in.

The public trough was never more larded or brazenly looted than during the post-Civil War decades, climaxed by the swinish gorging of the Grant administration. The floor of Congress was all but an auction market as carpetbaggers, land-hungry railroad barons, Wall Street predators and unclassified swindlers swapped stock and favors for jobs and contracts.

"Let us have peace," said U.S. Grant, taking office in 1868. His friends and relatives preferred a piece of the action. There was the Credit Mobilier scandal that feasted on the 45 million acres of public land given to build the Union Pacific. A Whisky Ring in St. Louis guzzled at excise taxes. Post Office contracts for rural "star routes" were handsomely padded. Even Grant's hand-picked minister to London, Robert C. Schenck, was found kiting silver-mine stocks on the job, finally recalled in disgrace when the odor became overwhelming after four years and then renominated for his old post by Grant because a new appointee was rejected by the Senate.

Some of this even touched a scholarly young man from Ohio named James A. Garfield, the last president born in a log cabin and the second one shot. Spoils were not unconnected with his demise.

The spoils system had first taken an eventually pernicious root in the American system in Jefferson's day when he voiced violent exception to some of John Adams' last minute appointment of Federalists to public office. Idealists thought frequent changes of bureaucrats democratically broadened participation in government and assured honesty by brief exposure to temptation. Realists such as Jackson and Van Buren, however, applied the principle retributively to keep the party faithful and as a necessary tool to nourish party longevity.

But by Abraham Lincoln's time, the White House had become such a swarm of office seekers that one wag suggested Honest Abe flesh out his needy Army by drafting them all. After the war, as the country burgeoned not like Topsy but a cocktail party, there were 80,000 civil-service positions, some of them even necessary but most political appointees. In 1877 James Garfield, a congressman for 14 years, wrote that something had to be done about professionalizing job staffing.

Garfield had been born poor, quit a youthful career as a canal-barge deckhand after falling overboard for the 14th time—he couldn't swim—and embarked on getting himself an education. He eventually arrived at Williams College, where education, he said in probably his most memorable statement, consisted of its illustrious president, Mark Hopkins, sitting on one end of a log and the student on the other. He was a youthful (32) major general in the Civil War.

A convention campaign manager for another Ohioan in 1880, Garfield surprisingly was made Republican nominee himself and defeated Democrat Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock.

In his inaugural speech, witnessed by his mother, another first, Garfield again espoused the cause of Civil Service.

Garfield, however, at 49 had not attained the consistency of age. One of his first acts was to replace the capable collector of the New York Customs House, a lucrative job, with a friend of his. Secretary of State James G. Blaine, variously known as "the Plumed Knight" and the "continental liar from the state of Maine." In the ensuing intraparty uproar, New York's two Republican senators—Roscoe Conkling, a grand vizier of spoils, and his altar boy, Tom Platt—resigned, and the cause of reform seemed mothballed. Sen. George H. Pendleton of Ohio had introduced a bill in December 1880 to require a competitive exam for civil jobs as in Great Britain. But democrats feared Republicans would manage to grade their vast body of incumbents too highly, and Republicans were at war over the Customs House.

Meanwhile, far on the fringe of the ins was an almost fanatically religious hopeful named Charles J. Guiteau, who wanted a diplomatic post in Paris and had managed to see both Blaine and Garfield about it. His qualifications were scant. He had lived for awhile in the free-love Oneida Community, married a 16-year-old and moved to New York and an 11-year career of "cheating merchants, publishers, pawnbrokers and boarding-house keepers." His tastes ran to $75 suits and rooms at the best hotels, usually unpaid for, and if his wife objected, he locked her in a closet. He had written a tract modestly entitled "The Truth: A Companion to the Bible" and loitered about GOP headquarters in New York during the campaign in hopes of career improvement.

Put off by Blaine, whom he had encountered in a corridor, he wrote Garfield that he should fire the secretary: "Otherwise you and the Republican Party will come to grief." Garfield, who himself had but two secretaries until he hired another to keep the mob away, may not have even seen the message. But Guiteau purchased himself a .44-caliber British Bulldog revolver with bone grips (he thought they would look better in a museum even though they cost $1 extra) and began target shooting within sight of the White House.

On July 2, 1881, Blaine drove the president down to the Baltimore and Potomac station in Washington, where Garfield was to board a train for Elberon, N.J., where his ailing wife was recovering from malaria, and thence to Williamstown, Mass., for his 25th reunion.

Guiteau stalked Garfield into the station, shot him twice, was quickly apprehended, tried and hanged. Garfield died 10 weeks later of blood poisoning. On his death bed he expressed sorrow at Conkling's resignation and said, "I will offer him any favor he may ask or any appointment he may desire." Habit, too, died hard.

And yet, ironically, the president's death was a bloody reminder of the need for reform. In 1833, Pendleton's bill was finally passed by Congress. It would be wrong to deem Garfield a martyr to Civil Service any more than Charles Guiteau. But they played their parts.

Ford signs new flag code

WASHINGTON — President Ford has signed legislation that for the first time in 34 years revises the rules governing the use of the American flag.

The amendments to the code were introduced in Congress by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., to clear up "some of the misunderstandings over the proper use of the American flag that have arisen over the years" since 1942, when the law was drawn up.

The code still requires men to "remove their headdress with their right hand and hold it at the left shoulder, the hand being over the heart" when saluting the flag, but a line requiring women to "salute by placing the right hand over the heart" was deleted.

The amended code permits around-the-clock display of the flag and the flying of the colors in inclement weather because of advances made in weather-resistant flag materials and outdoor lighting. Before, the law allowed the flag to be flown only on "days when the weather permits." Now, it can be displayed any time as long as an all-weather flag is used.

Finally, the revised code gives life to Old Glory. It now reads: "The flag . . . is itself considered a living thing."

All correct entries qualify for the Grand Prize Drawing

★ HOW TO PLAY ★

CASH-O is a weekly game played with numbers. Games begin on Thursday and end on Tuesday. A CASH-O chart will be published each of these days in the Independent Press-Telegram. A CASH-O chart contains 24 number boxes and a CASH-O box in the center. Three or four new numbers will be published each day Thursday through Tuesday. A total of 22 numbers will be published by Tuesday.

Copy the published numbers on your CASH-O entry form (or draw your own entry form) as they appear in the Independent Press-Telegram each day, Thursday through Tuesday. By Tuesday you will find that there are only two numbers missing. When you fill in the two correct numbers you have solved CASH-O.

How you arrive at the correct solution to CASH-O and what the two missing numbers are, is what makes CASH-O a real challenge. Look out! CASH-O may fool you. To solve CASH-O you may have to add, subtract, multiply, divide or you may have to do a combination of those things. You may even have to find another way to solve CASH-O, such as by inverting numbers or by seeing a pattern develop which could lead you to a solution. CASH-O is tricky. It's not only a new game with a new solution each week, but the method of solution may also change each week. Watch it!

★ RULES ★

1. It is not necessary to buy or subscribe to the Independent Press-Telegram or to use a CASH-O entry form. Copies of these newspapers can be checked at public libraries. You may submit an entry by copying on a plain sheet of paper the entry form and the published numbers as they appear in the Independent Press-Telegram together with your solution of the two unpublished numbers. Photo or mechanically reproduced entries will not be accepted.

2. After you have completed your CASH-O entry, mail it to:
CASH-O
Independent Press-Telegram
P.O. Box 420
or bring your entry to the Independent Press-Telegram building at 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach.

3. There is no limit on the number of entries you may submit, but each entry must be in a separate envelope and each must be received no later than 5 p.m. of the Monday following the end of each weekly contest. Prize winners will be determined by random drawings among the correct solutions received on time. If no correct solutions are received or fewer correct solutions are submitted than the number of prizes offered, the prizes, or the remaining prizes, will be awarded by means of random drawings from all entries received by the closing time. The decisions of the Independent Press-Telegram judges are final in all cases.

4. PRIZES: Each week one first prize of $300, one second prize of $200 and five third prizes of $100 each will be awarded. BONUSES: A 10% cash bonus will be awarded to regular CASH-O weekly winners who are verified daily home delivery subscribers to the Independent or Press-Telegram as of the date of the drawing.
GRAND PRIZE: After the last CASH-O game, the Grand Prize 1977 Ford Thunderbird winner will be selected at random from all correct entries received, including past winners.
Winners' names and the answers to the weekly puzzles will be published in the Independent Press-Telegram on the second Wednesday following the close of each game. Cash prizes will be mailed.

5. The contest is open to anyone 18 years of age or older, except employees, circulation representatives and their immediate families of the Independent Press-Telegram, Knight-Ridder Newspapers, Inc., its affiliated companies, and Marden-Kane, Inc.

Moses, Marilyn Monroe did it

By JOHN BARBOUR
Associated Press

"There is a terrible pain involved, an excruciating pain," the man says, choosing his words carefully and trying for fluency. "A stutterer dies when he speaks."

Stuttering ranges all through time, through every race, religion and culture. Seven out of every 1,000 people stutter, experts in the field estimate.

Some studies show that they are perhaps a bit more intelligent than the average population, but there are stutterers among the severely retarded as well as the exceedingly bright.

Moses stuttered, they say. So did Winston Churchill, Marilyn Monroe, Fred Astaire, Jimmy Stewart, Garry Moore, Jack Paar and even Raymond Massey, whose voice never faltered when he played Abe Lincoln, but always did when he played himself.

Although there is more research today than 10 years ago, most experts see little hope for long-lasting cures. There are countless theories on why a person stutters. In the end, most therapies treat the symptom. The cause or causes remain elusive.

IF ANYTHING, there's a problem of having too many approaches to treatment, says Dr. David Burns, a University of Pennsylvania psychiatrist who treats stutterers. But a number of them have promise, he said.

Demosthenes, the silver-tongued Greek orator, "cured" his stuttering by practicing his speech with a mouthful of pebbles.

That technique today would be called distraction, a way of drawing a person's attention away from the act of speaking. Long ago, doctors designed braces for the teeth that served as a distraction for the speaker.

Today there are rhythmical distractions. Stutterers are taught to speak to the beat of a metronome. Some find they can avoid their stuttering by swinging their arms and talking a syllable or two with each swing. Almost all stutterers lose their stammer when they sing.

But, as any stutterer knows, most therapies seem to work at first. The question is how long they will last.

Says Dr. Richard Curlee of the University of Oregon, a leading authority: "There are people in mental hospitals who are diagnosed as psychotic who stutter. There are people who are neurotic who stutter. In short, it appears that personality, as well, varies independently with the stuttering symptom itself."

Most stutterers first encounter difficulties at about the age of 4 when they are trying to achieve fluency.

Researchers have tried to find differences in their nervous systems, in the linkage of nerve and speech mechanisms, even in the biochemistry of their cells. Some contend that one or more of these things combine to bring the stutterer to a threshold, and stress pushes him over.

Some have tried to show that it is the difference in the speed at which people hear their own voices that causes it. For instance, we hear both by air conduction and by sound conveyed through our bones, which is why our voices sound different to us when we hear ourselves over a tape recorder. These researchers contend that the sound of a stutterer's voice reaches his ear several microseconds faster than it does with a non-stutterer. In a sense, he hears in a stutter.

Another theory is that stutterers suffer a vocal-cord lock or spasm.

One of the more popular theories is that of Wendell Johnson, a University of Iowa therapist who blamed parents for holding up standards of speech that were too high. He said stuttering is what people do in an attempt to speak fluently.

As the child begins to struggle with his fluency, it turns into stuttering, and in a sense he learns his stuttering. By adulthood the disability has become a habit.

Stutterers share almost across the board the common feelings of guilt, remorse, embarrassment and shame. The severity differs. Some people try for five or ten minutes to say their name and then give up.

"Many stutterers have a great deal of trouble on the phone," Curlee says.

Lower drinking age, accidents linked

By RONALD KOTULAK
Knight News Service

Traffic accidents among drivers under age 21 have zoomed 33 per cent since Illinois lowered the legal drinking age nearly three years ago, a Chicago Tribune survey has revealed.

The survey, which also showed an increase in teen-age drunken-driving arrests and traffic fatalities, parallels the findings of other studies that link lowered drinking laws to an increase in traffic mishaps.

The Illinois law, which went into effect Oct. 1, 1973, lowered the drinking age for beer and wine from 21 to 19. Other neighboring states, such as Wisconsin and Michigan, lowered the drinking age for all alcoholic beverages to 18 in 1972.

As a result of the survey, Illinois State Rep. Aaron Jaffee, a co-sponsor of the bill to lower the drinking age in Illinois, said he would call for a legislative study to determine if the lowered drinking law caused the increase in traffic accidents.

"I think that 19-year-olds can handle beer and wine and that the new law basically is realistic, but I am disturbed about these figures," Jaffee said.

"We need to take a look at the overall problem of the increase in teen-age drinking with a special emphasis on drinking and driving," he said. Jaffee said he would move to set up the study committee at the next regular session of the Legislature in January.

If the legislative study concludes that the liberalized drinking law contributed to traffic deaths and accidents, then legislators would have to consider raising the drinking age to 20 or 21, Jaffee said.

Last spring Minnesota Gov. Wendell Anderson signed into law a bill raising the drinking age there from 18 to 19. The age had been lowered from 21 to 18 in 1973.

Problems with students drinking in high school and a major concern over increasing traffic accidents among youths spurred the move, said an aide to the governor.

At least 23 states have reduced their drinking ages.

But the trend to reduce the drinking age appears to have stalled, and a number of states are considering raising the drinking ages, primarily because of increasing traffic accidents.

'Fagin' is hunted in 3 states

FORT LAUDEDALE, Fla. (AP) — Police in three states are searching for a man described Saturday as a modern-day Fagin who ordered a ring of 14 youngsters to rob hundreds of homes and to try to murder a police officer.

Robert Varone Sr., 44, has been charged with conspiracy to commit felonies, receiving stolen property and solicitation to commit murder, police said Friday. They said Varone had fled and was believed to be in California or Nebraska. The charges were filed in April but had been kept secret until Friday.

"I call him the big kahuna (boss)," said detective Michael Sullivan of the Broward County sheriff's office. "All the little kids in the neighborhood looked up to him. He supplied them with drugs and money."

OFFICIALS said the youngsters who worked for Varone during the three-year operation ranged in age from 12 to 17. They stole hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of television sets, furs, radios and jewelry from 200 homes, police said.

They said he recruited youngsters through his son, Robert Varone Jr., 16, and from a youth center near his home.

"He went there 10, maybe 15 times a day," police said. "He paid in grass, pills, Quaaludes (a depressant drug) and coke (cocaine) at times."

Officers said the younger Varone pleaded guilty to a burglary charge earlier this month and is awaiting sentencing. At least eight teen-agers received immunity from prosecution in return for their testimony, police said.

POLICE said the elder Varone often pinpointed the homes he wanted burglarized and rarely held the merchandise for longer than a few hours. He often had the youngsters deliver the goods directly to buyers, officers said.

Varone also offered two youths $2,000 each to murder Detective B. Edward Madge of the surburban Lauderhill police force, officers said. But the scheme was not carried out because on the night of the planned killing another officer replaced Madge on a stakeout.

Asst. State Atty. John King said Varone regularly cheated his corps of youthful burglars.

"He would take a tube from a color television and tell the kids it wouldn't work," King said. "He would then give them $10 for it."

LEADERS IN CRISIS

Garfield pushes civil service

Associated Press

NINETEENTH OF A SERIES
By SID MOODY

Like honest garbage men, politicians of the Gilded Age heaved mightily to "throw the rascals out." Often as not they heaved a new set of rascals in.

The public trough was never more larded or brazenly looted than during the post-Civil War decades, climaxed by the swinish gorging of the Grant administration. The floor of Congress was all but an auction market as carpetbaggers, land-hungry railroad barons, Wall Street predators and unclassified swindlers swapped stock and favors for jobs and contracts.

"Let us have peace," said U.S. Grant, taking office in 1868. His friends and relatives preferred a piece of the action. There was the Credit Mobilier scandal that feasted on the 45 million acres of public land given to build the Union Pacific. A Whisky Ring in St. Louis guzzled at excise taxes. Post Office contracts for rural "star routes" were handsomely padded. Even Grant's hand-picked minister to London, Robert C. Schenck, was found hiting silver-mine stocks on the job, finally recalled in disgrace when the odor became overwhelming after four years and then renominated for his old post by Grant because a new appointee was rejected by the Senate.

Some of this even touched a scholarly young man from Ohio named James A. Garfield, the last president born in a log cabin and the second one shot. Spoils were not unconnected with his demise.

The spoils system had first taken an eventually pernicious root in the American system in Jefferson's day when he voiced violent exception to some of John Adams' last minute appointment of Federalists to public office. Idealists thought frequent changes of bureaucrats democratically broadened participation in government and assured honesty by brief exposure to temptation. Realists such as Jackson and Van Buren, however, applied the principle retributively to keep the party faithful and as a necessary tool to nourish party longevity.

But by Abraham Lincoln's time, the White House had become such a swarm of office seekers that one wag suggested Honest Abe flesh out his needy Army by drafting them all. After the war, as the country burgeoned not like Topsy but a cocktail party, there were 80,000 civil-service positions, some of them even necessary but most political appointees. In 1877 James Garfield, a congressman for 14 years, wrote that something had to be done about professionalizing job staffing.

Garfield had been born poor, quit a youthful career as a canal-barge deckhand after falling overboard for the 14th time—he couldn't swim—and embarked on getting himself an education. He eventually arrived at Williams College, where education, he said in probably his most memorable statement, consisted of its illustrious president, Mark Hopkins, sitting on one end of a log and the student on the other. He was a youthful (32) major general in the Civil War.

A convention campaign manager for another Ohioan in 1880, Garfield surprisingly was made Republican nominee himself and defeated Democrat Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock.

In his inaugural speech, witnessed by his mother, another first, Garfield again espoused the cause of Civil Service.

Garfield, however, at 49 had not attained the consistency of age. One of his first acts was to replace the capable collector of the New York Customs House, a lucrative job, with a friend of his. Secretary of State James G. Blaine, variously known as "the Plumed Knight" and the "continental liar from the state of Maine." In the ensuing intraparty uproar, New York's two Republican senators—Roscoe Conkling, a grand vizier of spoils, and his altar boy, Tom Platt—resigned, and the cause of reform seemed mothballed. Sen. George H. Pendleton of Ohio had introduced a bill in December 1880 to require a competitive exam for civil jobs as in Great Britain. But democrats feared Republicans would manage to grade their vast body of incumbents too highly, and Republicans were at war over the Customs House.

Meanwhile, far on the fringe of the ins was an almost fanatically religious hopeful named Charles J. Guiteau, who wanted a diplomatic post in Paris and had managed to see both Blaine and Garfield about it. His qualifications were scant. He had lived for awhile in the free-love Oneida Community, married a 16-year-old and moved to New York and an 11-year career of "cheating merchants, publishers, pawnbrokers and boarding-house keepers." His tastes ran to $75 suits and rooms at the best hotels, usually unpaid for, and if his wife objected, he locked her in a closet. He had written a tract modestly entitled "The Truth: A Companion to the Bible" and loitered about GOP headquarters in New York during the campaign in hopes of career improvement.

Put off by Blaine, whom he had encountered in a corridor, he wrote Garfield that he should fire the secretary: "Otherwise you and the Republican Party will come to grief." Garfield, who himself had but two secretaries until he hired another to keep the mob away, may not have even seen the message. But Guiteau purchased himself a .44-caliber British Bulldog revolver with bone grips (he thought they would look better in a museum even though they cost $1 extra) and began target shooting within sight of the White House.

On July 2, 1881, Blaine drove the president down to the Baltimore and Potomac station in Washington, where Garfield was to board a train for Elberon, N.J., where his ailing wife was recovering from malaria, and thence to Williamstown, Mass., for his 25th reunion.

Guiteau stalked Garfield into the station, shot him twice, was quickly apprehended, tried and hanged. Garfield died 10 weeks later of blood poisoning. On his death bed he expressed sorrow at Conkling's resignation and said, "I will offer him any favor he may ask or any appointment he may desire." Habit, too, died hard.

And yet, ironically, the president's death was a bloody reminder of the need for reform. In 1833, Pendleton's bill was finally passed by Congress. It would be wrong to deem Garfield a martyr to Civil Service any more than Charles Guiteau. But they played their parts.

Ford signs new flag code

WASHINGTON — President Ford has signed legislation that for the first time in 34 years revises the rules governing the use of the American flag.

The amendments to the code were introduced in Congress by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., to clear up "some of the misunderstandings over the proper use of the American flag that have arisen over the years" since 1942, when the law was drawn up.

The code still requires men to "remove their headdress with their right hand and hold it at the left shoulder, the hand being over the heart" when saluting the flag, but a line requiring women to "salute by placing the right hand over the heart" was deleted.

The amended code permits around-the-clock display of the flag and the flying of the colors in inclement weather because of advances made in weather-resistant flag materials and outdoor lighting. Before, the law allowed the flag to be flown only on "days when the weather permits." Now, it can be displayed any time as long as an all-weather flag is used.

Finally, the revised code gives life to Old Glory. It now reads: "The flag . . . is itself considered a living thing."

★ HOW TO PLAY ★

CASH-O is a weekly game played with numbers. Games begin on Thursday and end on Tuesday. A CASH-O chart will be published each of these days in the Independent Press-Telegram. A CASH-O chart contains 24 number boxes and a CASH-O box in the center. Three or four new numbers will be published each day Thursday through Tuesday. A total of 22 numbers will be published by Tuesday.

Copy the published numbers on your CASH-O entry form (or draw your own entry form) as they appear in the Independent Press-Telegram each day, Thursday through Tuesday. By Tuesday you will find that there are only two numbers missing. When you fill in the two correct numbers you have solved CASH-O.

How you arrive at the correct solution to CASH-O and what the two missing numbers are, is what makes CASH-O a real challenge. Look out! CASH-O may fool you. To solve CASH-O you may have to add, subtract, multiply, divide or you may have to do a combination of those things. You may even have to find another way to solve CASH-O, such as by inverting numbers or by seeing a pattern develop which could lead you to a solution. CASH-O is tricky. It's not only a new game with a new solution each week, but the method of solution may also change each week. Watch it!

★ RULES ★

1. It is not necessary to buy or subscribe to the Independent Press-Telegram or to use a CA$H-O entry form. Copies of these newspapers can be checked at public libraries. You may submit an entry by copying on a plain sheet of paper the entry form and the published numbers as they appear in the Independent Press-Telegram together with your solution of the two unpublished numbers. Photo or mechanically reproduced entries will not be accepted.

2. After you have completed your CA$H-O entry, mail it to:

There is no limit on the number of entries you may submit, but each entry must be in a separate envelope and each must be received no later than 5 p.m. of the Monday following the end of each weekly contest. Prize winners will be determined by random drawings among the correct solutions received on time. If no correct solutions are received or fewer correct solutions are submitted than the number of prizes offered, the prizes, or the remaining prizes, will be awarded by means of random drawings from all entries received by the closing time. Moses, Marilyn Monroe did it

By JOHN BARBOUR
Associated Press

"There is a terrible pain involved, an excruciating pain," the man says, choosing his words carefully and trying for fluency. "A stutterer dies when he speaks."

Stuttering ranges all through time, through every race, religion and culture. Seven out of every 1,000 people stutter, experts in the field estimate.

Some studies show that they are perhaps a bit more intelligent than the average population, but there are stutterers among the severely retarded as well as the exceedingly bright.

Moses stuttered, they say. So did Winston Churchill, Marilyn Monroe, Fred Astaire, Jimmy Stewart, Garry Moore, Jack Paar and even Raymond Massey, whose voice never faltered when he played Abe Lincoln, but always did when he played himself.

Although there is more research today than 10 years ago, most experts see little hope for long-lasting cures. There are countless theories on why a person stutters. In the end, most therapies treat the symptom. The cause or causes remain elusive.

IF ANYTHING, there's a problem of having too many approaches to treatment, says Dr. David Burns, a University of Pennsylvania psychiatrist who treats stutterers. But a number of them have promise, he said.

Demosthenes, the silver-tongued Greek orator, "cured" his stuttering by practicing his speech with a mouthful of pebbles.

That technique today would be called distraction, a way of drawing a person's attention away from the act of speaking. Long ago, doctors designed braces for the teeth that served as a distraction for the speaker.

Today there are rhythmical distractions. Stutterers are taught to speak to the beat of a metronome. Some find they can avoid their stuttering by swinging their arms and talking a syllable or two with each swing. Almost all stutterers lose their stammer when they sing.

But, as any stutterer knows, most therapies seem to work at first. The question is how long they will last.

Says Dr. Richard Curlee of the University of Oregon, a leading authority: "There are people in mental hospitals who are diagnosed as psychotic who stutter. There are people who are neurotic who stutter. In short, it appears that personality, as well, varies independently with the stuttering symptom itself."

Most stutterers first encounter difficulties at about the age of 4 when they are trying to achieve fluency.

Researchers have tried to find differences in their nervous systems, in the linkage of nerve and speech mechanisms, even in the biochemistry of their cells. Some contend that one or more of these things combine to bring the stutterer to a threshold, and stress pushes him over.

Some have tried to show that it is the difference in the speed at which people hear their own voices that causes it. For instance, we hear both by air conduction and by sound conveyed through our bones, which is why our voices sound different to us when we hear ourselves over a tape recorder. These researchers contend that the sound of a stutterer's voice reaches his ear several microseconds faster than it does with a non-stutterer. In a sense, he hears in a stutter.

Another theory is that stutterers suffer a vocal-cord lock or spasm.

One of the more popular theories is that of Wendell Johnson, a University of Iowa therapist who blamed parents for holding up standards of speech that were too high. He said stuttering is what people do in an attempt to speak fluently.

As the child begins to struggle with his fluency, it turns into stuttering, and in a sense he learns his stuttering. By adulthood the disability has become a habit.

Stutterers share almost across the board the common feelings of guilt, remorse, embarrassment and shame. The severity differs. Some people try for five or ten minutes to say their name and then give up.

"Many stutterers have a great deal of trouble on the phone," Curlee says.

Lower drinking age, accidents linked

By RONALD KOTULAK
Knight News Service

Traffic accidents among drivers under age 21 have zoomed 33 per cent since Illinois lowered the legal drinking age nearly three years ago, a Chicago Tribune survey has revealed.

The survey, which also showed an increase in teen-age drunken-driving arrests and traffic fatalities, parallels the findings of other studies that link lowered drinking laws to an increase in traffic mishaps.

The Illinois law, which went into effect Oct. 1, 1973, lowered the drinking age for beer and wine from 21 to 19. Other neighboring states, such as Wisconsin and Michigan, lowered the drinking age for all alcoholic beverages to 18 in 1972.

As a result of the survey, Illinois State Rep. Aaron Jaffee, a co-sponsor of the bill to lower the drinking age in Illinois, said he would call for a legislative study to determine if the lowered drinking law caused the increase in traffic accidents.

"I think that 19-year-olds can handle beer and wine and that the new law basically is realistic, but I am disturbed about these figures," Jaffee said.

"We need to take a look at the overall problem of the increase in teen-age drinking with a special emphasis on drinking and driving," he said. Jaffee said he would move to set up the study committee at the next regular session of the Legislature in January.

If the legislative study concludes that the liberalized drinking law contributed to traffic deaths and accidents, then legislators would have to consider raising the drinking age to 20 or 21, Jaffee said.

Last spring Minnesota Gov. Wendell Anderson signed into law a bill raising the drinking age there from 18 to 19. The age had been lowered from 21 to 18 in 1973.

Problems with students drinking in high school and a major concern over increasing traffic accidents among youths spurred the move, said an aide to the governor.

At least 23 states have reduced their drinking ages.

But the trend to reduce the drinking age appears to have stalled, and a number of states are considering raising the drinking ages, primarily because of increasing traffic accidents.

'Fagin' is hunted in 3 states

FORT LAUDEDALE, Fla. (AP) — Police in three states are searching for a man described Saturday as a modern-day Fagin who ordered a ring of 14 youngsters to rob hundreds of homes and to try to murder a police officer.

Robert Varone Sr., 44, has been charged with conspiracy to commit felonies, receiving stolen property and solicitation to commit murder, police said Friday. They said Varone had fled and was believed to be in California or Nebraska. The charges were filed in April but had been kept secret until Friday.

"I call him the big kahuna (boss)," said detective Michael Sullivan of the Broward County sheriff's office. "All the little kids in the neighborhood looked up to him. He supplied them with drugs and money."

OFFICIALS said the youngsters who worked for Varone during the three-year operation ranged in age from 12 to 17. They stole hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of television sets, furs, radios and jewelry from 200 homes, police said.

They said he recruited youngsters through his son, Robert Varone Jr., 16, and from a youth center near his home.

"He went there 10, maybe 15 times a day," police said. "He paid in grass, pills, Quaaludes (a depressant drug) and coke (cocaine) at times."

Officers said the younger Varone pleaded guilty to a burglary charge earlier this month and is awaiting sentencing. At least eight teen-agers received immunity from prosecution in return for their testimony, police said.

POLICE said the elder Varone often pinpointed the homes he wanted burglarized and rarely held the merchandise for longer than a few hours. He often had the youngsters deliver the goods directly to buyers, officers said.

Varone also offered two youths $2,000 each to murder Detective B. Edward Madge of the surburban Lauderhill police force, officers said. But the scheme was not carried out because on the night of the planned killing another officer replaced Madge on a stakeout.

Asst. State Atty. John King said Varone regularly cheated his corps of youthful burglars.

"He would take a tube from a color television and tell the kids it wouldn't work," King said. "He would then give them $10 for it."

Lifetime annuity plan proposed

Equity plus occupancy for elderly?

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — A Wharton School professor has devised a financial plan that would enable elderly homeowners to obtain a regular income from the equity in their homes while being guaranteed lifelong occupancy.

If implemented, the plan has the potential for greatly relieving the financial problems of elderly persons while simulateneously assuring them of independence and security in familiar surroundings.

Jack Guttentag, who holds the chair in banking at Wharton, the business and finance school of the University of Pennsylvania, has put his plan in the public domain, for possible promotion by insurers, government and savings institutions.

So far, he said, one large bank has seriously considered the plan, and many individuals have expressed interest, but it is not yet being marketed, even though he believes it can be offered with actuarial assurance equal to life insurance policies.

Guttentag's ideas, contained in "The Bulletin" of the New York University Graduate School of Business Administration, include two new financial instruments, a split-equity plan and a nonrepayable loan plan.

In the split equity concept, the equity of a property is divided in two components, a lifetime interest or right of occupancy, and the residual equity, which is the right to dispose of the property after the occupant's death.

To implement, the elderly occupant sells the residual equity, but instead of obtaining a lump sum payment from the buyer, he or she receives a lifetime annuity or guaranteed income.

Upon the death of the occupant, the buyer ceases further payments and takes possession, sometimes obtaining a more substantial property for the money than would have been possible in a conventional transaction.

The possibility exists, of course, that the elderly owner or owners will enjoy a life span greater than those listed in the actuarial tables, in which the buyer would have to pay a larger sum.

Large institutions, however, can benefit from the laws of large numbers, which generally dictate that extremes average out.

The nonrepayable loan, the other instrument in the professor's concpt, is simply a loan secured by a mortgage repayable only upon the death of the borrower or on the prior sale of the property.

Guttentag believes the time is ripe for the development of these instruments in the United States.

"With the proportion of elderly in the population steadily rising and concern for wealth bestowals through estates declining, the potential market is increasing rapidly," he said.

There is also a strong social interest in the development of the instruments, he believes, because the aged comprise a large part of the poverty problem. The median income for households over 65 is less than half that for all households.

Despite the income problems of many elderly, home ownership is higher than for the population in general. Even for elderly couples with incomes of less than $1,000 a year, home ownership has been measured at 69 per cent.

This home ownership sometimes is achieved at great sacrifice and hardship, however. While property taxes, for example, amount to only 3.4 per cent of total money income for the average homeowner, it comes to nearly 16 per cent for those with incomes of less than $2,000.

Guttentag seeks to relieve this burden while raising income, by utilizing the equity in the house, which generally can otherwise be made available only by mortgaging or selling the property.

I estimate the households 65 years of age and older today have a net equity in homes of at least $80 billion, which defines the outer limit of the benefit they would derive from new financial instruments," he wrote.

Equity of that amount, it is estimated, could generate annual annuities in excess of $5 billion.

The reason that most of the elderly today retain an equity in their homes, Guttentag believes, is that they wish to remain living there — not because they wish to leave a home to their heirs.

Therefore he concludes, let them live better.

Morris, a licensed real estate broker, has been affiliated with Fullerton Creek since its opening last fall. He replaces Ted Dressendorfer as sales manager.

Dressendorfer has moved to WoodWalk at County Hills in Brea.

Located at 2051 Associated Road, north of Yorba Linda Boulevard, Fullerton Creek offers two- and three-bedroom attached single family homes clustered in a park-like setting. Prices start at $50,-190.

601 LIDO PARK HIGH-RISER AT NEWPORT WATER'S EDGE

Lido Park condominiums exceed $5 million in sales

The 601 Lido Park Drive, new 54-unit waterfront condominium residence in Newport Beach, has passed the $5 million mark in sales. Five of the sales, totaling more than $750,000, occurred in the first two weeks in May, bringing total sales in the building to 34.

The project sales manager noted there has been a marked increase in interest in 601 recently, which he attributes to location of the building at the water's edge and may represent the last building of its kind that will ever be built in Newport Beach.

Rising 10 stories near the foot of the Lido Island bridge, 601 Lido offers unobstructed views of both Newport Harbor and the Pacific Ocean. Residents have found that no matter how bright and sunny a day may be, the draperies may be left open to enjoy the views as all of the windows are of anti-glare solar glass.

In discussing some of the important reasons that people have purchased at 601 it was noted, "Many of our residents have moved from large homes after raising families and they now want the freedom to travel, to spend more time at their clubs or to pursue special interests and 601 offers this ability while providing excellent security precautions that give them peace of mind."

Included in the security features at 601 Lido are 24-hour closed circuit television surveillance of all entrances, hallways and other common areas.

All the two-bedroom homes offer step-down living rooms with wet bar and private balcony, individually controlled heating and air conditioning and each master suite has a private dressing room with mirrored sliding glass wardrobe doors and a built-in sauna.

Prices at 601 Lido Park Drive are from $120,000 to $195,000 with furnished models by Walter Nutting and Associates open for viewing daily from 10:00 a.m. until dusk. The building may be reached by taking Newport Boulevard to Via Lido, left on Via Lido to Lafayette Avenue, then left to Lido Park Drive.

Second phase of sold-out condominiums to be built

Within six months of the record-setting close-out of Village Square, mid-priced condominiums in Torrance, Barclay Hollander Corp. has announced plans for a similar South Bay development in Harbor City, at Western Avenue and 242nd Street, between Pacific Coast Highway and Sepulveda.

Village Square established a sales record last year for Barclay Hollander, the firm which built the first statuory condominiums in California in 1963. In the first 30 days following its April opening 74 out of 149 units were sold, and the pace continued at the rate of one home per day for the first 100 days. Prices of the two to three-bedroom homes ranged from $31,950 to $41,450.

Barclay Hollander, senior vice president Ron Hagerthy, said the new edition in Harbor City will have even more buyer appeal, based on its innovative design concept. Sales will begin in August.

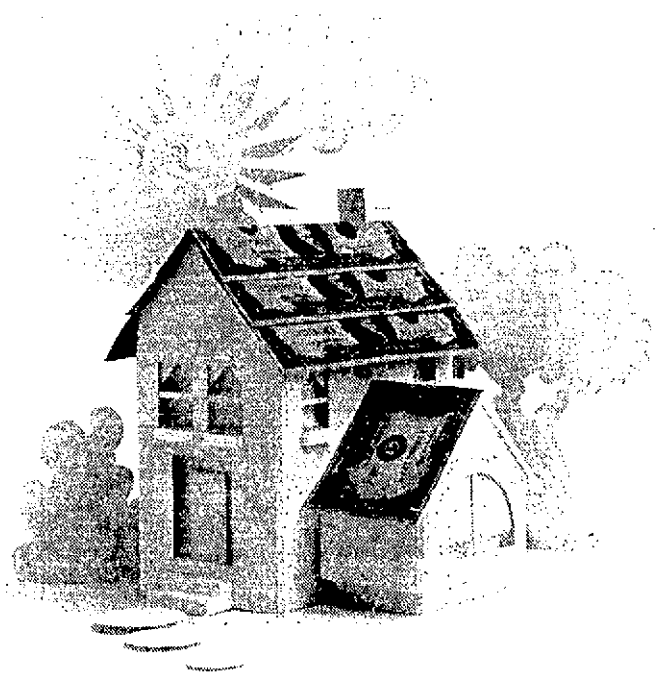

Village Court, the new 105-unit development, will be a totally private, park-centered community, with a card-operated entrance gate and a private patio at the entrance to each home. Patio gates will have electronic gate locks and there will be an intercom system to allow residents to identify guests before admitting them.

One-, two- and three-bedroom plans with enclosed two-car garages will be offered, ranging up to 1,365 square feet. Final prices have not been established, but are expected to be in the $40,000-$50,000 range.

Village Court is located adjacent to Narbonne High School and is three blocks from President Avenue Elementary School. The Harbor Freeway is two miles away.

Comments asked on impact studies

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

Long Beach port officials have called for public input in the preparation of Environmental Impact Reports (EIRs) for several projects.

Dr. Donald B. Bright, the port's director of environmental affairs, issued the call in the first edition of the publication "Harbor Highlights."

Being prepared are EIRs covering:

—The harbor department's general plan for development and modernization of the port through the year 2000.

—A proposed three-berth tanker terminal and a six-tank storage farm on Pier J to be used by Standard Oil of Ohio (SOHIO).

—A proposed 110-acre landfill to add to the container facilities on Pier J.

—An analysis of wave and current actions in the harbor plus those associated with proposed future developments and port expansion.

The largest proposed project is the SOHIO deep-water oil terminal planned for south Pier J. The facility will allow three 165,000-deadweigh- ton tankers (the type that will bring Alaskan North Slope oil) to unload at the same time. The terminal and the tank farm are being designed to receive up to 700,000 barrels of crude oil per day.

Because the project calls for the use of some existing pipelines and the construction of additional pipelines to carry the oil across state lines from Long Beach to Midland, Tex., the project is of national sigificance. The Department of the Interior's Bureau of Land Management is busy preparing the federally required Environmental Impact Statement (EIS). The California Public Utilities Commission is working with the port to prepare the state-required EIR.

Citizens for or against any of the proposed projects are encouraged to call the harbor department or write to Bright at Box 570, Long Beach, 90801.

Security urged

The tragic incident last Monday at Fullerton State University, when a beserk gunman shot and killed seven persons and wounded two others, has prompted Roy Verkich, vice president of the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners, to suggest that an armed and uniformed security officer again be assigned to attend commission meetings.

At one time such a guard was present at the weekly commission meetings in San Pedro, but the practice was discontinued in 1974.

Verkich said an armed guard would be a deterrent to anyone who might be tempted to cause trouble during a board meeting. He added that armed officers attend city council meetings and there is an armed baliff in courtrooms.

At present, most potentially powerful weapon available during commission meetings is the hardwood gavel wielded by the presiding officer.

Jack the Ripper—The final solution?

By JAMES O. JACKSON
Knight News Service

LONDON—Jack the Ripper, that midnight slasher of 19th Century prostitutes, long has been the world's most captivating killer.

He has become the very epitome of the homicidal maniac, the untraceable murderer who killed for his own demented kind of fun, terrorizing the population and gleefully taunting the police with his successes.

He has been made the subject of song, movies, prose, poetry and even children's rhymes. He was never caught, and despite hundreds of attempts he never has been convicingly identified.

But now there is a new theory of Jack the Ripper, one that advances him from the penny-paper sensationalism of the 19th Century to the conspiracy theories of the 20th.

AUTHOR Stephen Knight, in a book just published in London called "Jack the Ripper — The Final Solution," claims that Jack was more than a mere killer. He was more, in fact, than one man. Knight advances evidence that Jack the Ripper was a conspiracy at a very high level, a sort of Victorian Watergate in which the cover-up succeeded.

Knight, a newsman, claims to have gained access to secret Scotland Yard files on the Ripper murders, which took place during a 10-week reign of terror in the fall of 1888. The files were kept secret, says Knight, because of a massive cover-up of a scandal that might have brought down the British throne.

At the heart of the scandal, according to Knight, was Queen Victoria's handsome but unintelligent grandson, Edward, the Duke of Clarence.

It seems that Edward fathered a daughter by a shopgirl named Annie Crook, whom he met through his art teacher, a well-known painter named Walter Sickert. Such peccadilloes were common enough among the aristocracy of the time, but Clarence carried his secret liaison beyond the bounds of Victorian decency; he married the girl.

WORSE, he married her in a secret Roman Catholic ceremony at a time when anti-Catholic sentiment was running strong in Britain. If the story had become public knowledge it could have meant the destruction of the monarchy.

Queen Victoria learned of the marriage, Knight says, and, horrified, she ordered that the affair be ended.

Accordingly, royal agents broke in on the duke's hideaway, hauling him back to his grandmother's palace and incarcerating his wife in an insane asylum, where she eventually died.

The matter may have ended there, but for a young woman named Mary Kelly. Miss Kelly had served as nurse to the couple's little daughter, and she escaped when the marriage was broken up. Apparently sensing a chance for profit, she hatched a blackmail plot with the aid of three prostitutes who lived in London's squalid East End.

Together, Knight says, they drafted an extortion letter, sent it off and awaited results. Results came, but not the kind they expected. Within a few months, all were dead, and all London was in turmoil over what then was called the "Whitechapel murders."

The unknown Jack the Ripper was blamed for the killings, and in the ensuing years writers and policemen have put forth various theories of who he was. One theory suggested that the young duke himself was the Ripper, and another writer has said the duke's close friend, James Stephen, the brother of Virginia Woolf, was the killer. Some say it was not a man, but a woman ("Jill the Ripper") and several sleuths have cited evidence that a doctor was involved.

According to Knight, a docotr was indeed involved— Sir William Gull, the royal physician.

Knight says that Gull, who had certified Miss Crook insane and was already deeply involved in the cover-up of the marriage, undertook to silence the blackmailing Mary Kelly and her friends. With the help of his coachman, John Netley, Gull hunted the women down in a series of macabre murders between August and November of 1888.

In each slaying, the women were horribly disfigured by what police speculated to be a surgeon's scalpel. In one case, parts of one of the victim's kidneys were mailed to the police along with a demented note saying that the rest of it had been fried and eaten.

Miss Kelly, who had herself taken up prostitution and was three months pregnant, was the last to die, on Nov. 9, 1888, when she was found butchered in her bed.

Gull fell ill shortly after the murders and died a year later. His coachman, Netley, died violently five years later when he was run over by his own coach in a London park.

Cross-country comedy film race ends in L.B.

By HARRY TESSEL
Motion Picture Editor

Zoom down Park Avenue at 140 miles an hour and zip through Times Square at 150 to start a wild, wacky, funny sports-car race that ends at the Queen Mary.

Producer Chuck Bail did that with his outrageous new comedy "The Gumball Rally," made with 25 stunt men racing and crashing cars across the country.

"The Gumball Rally," a Warner Bros. release starring Michael Sarrazin, screens in the Long Beach area next month.

"The whole movie isn't for real," says Bail, a 6-foot-4 former stunt man himself. "That's why the action is so outrageous.

"We even have an Italian race driver who snaps off his rear-view mirror and says, 'What's behind me is not interesting.'

"We shut down Park Avenue, Times Square and the Lincoln Tunnel, and had traffic rerouted on Saturday and Sunday mornings. We went through the tunnel at 130 and across the bridge at 140."

The racers are eccentrics competing only for a gigantic gum-ball machine. There are more than 30 major stunts in the cross-country from Manhattan to Long Beach.

The vehicles are a Porsche Targa, Ferrari Daytona, Cobra, Corvette, 600-horsepower Camaro, Mercedes 300SL roadster, Rolls-Royce and Dodge, along with a souped-up Kawasaki motorcycle and a Chevy van loaded with a 200-gallon tank of gasoline.

"For one stunt," Bail says, "we had a Corvette cut in half, then put it back together and held by 'spring-loading' so that it was driveable."

Actor-stunt driver Whitey Hughes takes up the narrative:

"The risk factor was rather high. We went through a barricade at about 55 miles an hour, down a street excavation and up a dirt ramp.

"My passenger, a stuntman, pulled a lever that activated electric brakes on the rear wheels. The back of the car flipped up and landed upside down near us."

In another stunt, the van containing the huge tank of gasoline crashes into a fireworks factory. "The van drivers thought they would win by not having to make any stops," Bail says, "but they ran over a muffler that had fallen from a car and their tank was punctured.

"Gasoline starts leaking out and is ignited when a man throws a lighted cigar from his car window. The flames start chasing the van; the drivers panic and argue about getting off the road.

"They go against traffic, and to miss a car they smash into the fireworks factory. Everything explodes.

"For one second I want the audience to think the men were in the van when everything blew up, but then I have a quick cutaway of the guys diving—you don't know from where—onto the ground."

Bail tells how an unused section of the Glendale Freeway is used for another stunt:

"We had two actors arguing in a car on the home stretch to the Queen Mary, and one says, 'Let me show you what I can do.'

"He cuts against traffic, but a crew is repairing the center divider and the car goes up some lumber. It swings onto two wheels and cuts in and out of traffic for a mile and a half at 50 miles an hour.

"The car then rolls onto its top. Neither man inside is hurt. Safety belts and shoulder harnesses kept them safe. Nothing on the car was beefed up—there was no roll bar."

In another crash, a motorcyclist smashes into a billboard.

"It took a half day's shooting to set up the action," Bail says. "He was going about 45 miles an hour when he runs into a swarm of butterflies, loses his vision, then goes up and into the billboard.

"An unseen 200-foot-long cable snatches him off the bike, though he really seems to have been knocked off by the crash."

And in a scene at the Queen Mary, where the film crew built an outdoor restaurant beside the ship, there is another motorcycle stunt:

"This was a night shot," Bail says, "and we have the motorcycle sailing 160 feet through the air and landing in the water beside the Queen Mary."

Bail adds: "These stunts aren't made to be taken seriously."

BEDLAM AT QUEEN MARY finish line sets in at end of wild cross-country race that began in New York in "The Gumball Rally," new comedy-stunt film starring Michael Sarrazin.

SHIRLEY MacLAINE will return to the screen after a four-year absence to co-star with Anne Bancroft in 20th Century-Fox's "The Turning Point," about rivalry between long-time friends.

ALAN ARKIN will direct "Fire Sale," a Fox comedy to begin lensing at the studio and Southland locations Sept. 21.

A MUHAMMAD ALI look-alike teen-ager will be sought for Columbia Pictures' "The Greatest," based on the life of the boxing champion as scripted by Ring Lardner Jr.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Out of this year's experience you'll formulate basic principles differing from those you've set up thus far, as you now take new conditions into account. update standards for judging what to do and why. It's a very active year for change in relationships, perhaps relocation. Today's natives are original thinkers, don't disturb others with their private goals. Many are expert at managing cash.

Aries (March 21-April 19): You're ready for a quarrel with anybody. A sharp turn of circumstances provokes a flood of words. then requires cash to back you up. Neither borrow nor lend.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): This isn't the day to finalize transactions. Personal concerns build up, distract you from regular work. It's temporary: try to return to normal quickly.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Visualize an idealized version of current events, enjoy what's happening. Stay at home and clear up leftover details. Avoid excesses of any kind.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Unexpected expenses pop up. Don't incur debt needlessly. Once you pinpoint what you want to do about the situation, the going's much easier.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Determine to overcome faulty cooperation, jammed communications. Ponder what you say before lashing out at annoyance, especially when loved ones are the cause.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do no more than you must to meet business needs of the moment. Do it well. Play the role of observer for the time being, let others perform.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's enough just to get through today's incidents. Don't make any major decisions on what you know now. Listen, learn some clues to old mysteries.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Easy does it! Take care of your own people first and keep the peace in doing so. Take nothing for granted, neither facts nor intentions.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): To you, others seem slow; to others, you appear impatient. Find a sensible balance for a limited front. Nothing is gained forcing legal issues.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stick with established plans. Stay away from friends' schemes that you can't understand. Those you care about aren't free to express themselves; wait.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Begin with assurance you can work out solutions eventually, then do what is within your reach. Today's most disturbing problems aren't terribly significant.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Concentrate on previous commitments. If you switch plans, notify people early. A few episodes precipitate painstaking rethinking of your whole program.

Rock Talk

Patti Smith busy with new album

By LISA ROBINSON

In New York, Patti Smith has been busy rehearsing material for her second album. She took time out to perform one concert at the Central Park Schaefer Music Festival, then went into the Record Plant with producer Jack Douglas.

"I'm really excited about him," Patti told me. "Jack's associated with all this hard rock (Aerosmith, among others), and he's technically brilliant, but there's another side to him that no one knows about — he's really into jazz and poetry.

"Our last album had the heart and soul, but the technical side wasn't together. Jack wants us to have the same artistic freedom we had with John (Cale, Patti's first producer), but he'll help us get a better sound.

"He wants to show his different levels too. So we're going to put a little art on the notches of his gun."

New songs on Patti's album will include "Radio Ethiopia" (the title cut) — "I'll play lead noise on guitar on that one," she laughed — "Ain't It Strange," "Chiclets" and "Poppies."

As for performing, don't expect to see Patti Smith in huge places when she begins her fall tour attack. "I don't want our show to get bigger," she said. "I can't stand losing contact with an audience. I'd rather not perform." As an example of what she plans, part of Patti's fall tour will include a week's worth of shows (around Thanksgiving) at N.Y.'s 500-seat Bottom Line club.

"COULD YOU just see Keith Richard doing this?" Elton John mumbled to me after receiving a plaque from Philadelphia Mayor Frank Rizzo last week. In addition to the "key-to-the-city" bit, the mayor gave E.J. a miniature replica of the Liberty Bell, and E.J. gave the mayor a gold disc for "Philadelphia Freedom."

(Elton also pinned a Cliff Richard-promotional "I'm Nearly Famous" button on the bewildered mayor's lapel.)

Following the ceremonies in the mayor's office, Elton went on to perform at the Spectrum to an audience that included his good friend Elizabeth Taylor. Elton ran into Liz in the elevator of the Sherry-Netherland Hotel earlier in the week and invited her to the show.

Liz arrived backstage at the Spectrum wearing a casual white T-shirt and trousers, perfect for a rock concert. And (no one was safe that day) she, too, quickly had an "I'm Nearly Famous" button pinned to her chest. After the show, Liz flew with Elton's entourage back to New York aboard the private Starship jet.

Three of the Jackson Five (Michael, Marlon and Randy) also saw that Spectrum show. "We're recording in Philly," Michael told me "with Gamble and Huff." It's their first album for Epic Records, and their first without brother Jermaine — who alone has remained on the Motown label.

Michael admitted to me that they missed Jermaine, said he didn't know if they would perform or record with him again, and quickly changed the subject.

An enthusiastic observer of Elton's show, Michael asked: "Why doesn't he do 'Honky Cat' or 'Daniel' anymore?" "How does he sell so many records?" and "Is he always onstage for 2½ hours?"

Woman is saved from waterfall

EAST GLACIER, Mont. (AP) — A summer hotel employe in Glacier National Park fell into a swiftly flowing creek and was rescued unconscious just above a 40-foot waterfall.

"When I hit that cold water, I just went into shock," Pamela Goering, 21, of Clarkston, Mich., said Saturday of the incident Wednesday. Henry Rubio, 21, of Los Angeles, pulled Miss Goering to safety, then carried her two miles for aid.

Julie Newmar's clothes keep coming off

NEW YORK—"You have a great proclivity for your skirt coming off," a friend remarked to tall, beautiful, shapely Julie Newmar.

Julie, one of our leading public figures, admitted the accuracy of the accusation: While here recreating the Gwen Verdon role of Lola in "Damn Yankees" at the North Stage Theater at Glen Cove, she was wearing a very delicate, see-through, flowered, cotton outfit, which had already attracted considerable attention because it exposed what somebody called "the most beautiful legs this side of Heaven."

"I was getting out of a cab," said Julie, reliving the moment the other afternoon at the Americana French Quarter. "When these little buttons came undone. I put my hand up to get the buttons, and my skirt came off."

She also had an accident on stage the other night that was mysterious, so she says.

"I was doing the mambo and my top came off," she recounted. "I don't know why. The top just came off, and I was exposed. Not totally.

JULIE NEWMAR
"I Was Exposed"

Everything, indeed, seems to happen to Julie Newmar. She chose on a recent day to make a phone call from the New York Athletic Club, which is notoriously masculine.

"I used to make calls from the back of the club, where they had the regular booths and you could sit down.

"I decided to go in the front of the club from Central Park South. I was totally clothed. As I entered, three guards in blue suits looking like Doberman pinschers with very serious, somber expressions came at me and said, 'You CAN'T come in here in that!'

"They looked me over completely, both up and down, and said, 'No!' With one fell swoop, they swept me out through the door.

Miss Newmar has had other adventurous moments like when she was doing "The Marriage-Go-Round" in Fort Lauderdale and suddenly asked, "Do you think it would be all right if I took all my clothes off in the bath-towel scene?" Everybody seemed to think it would be refreshing, and she went nude for four weeks. Nobody got indignant and she received raves.

Julie's in a new TV series, "Monster Squad," on NBC for children, somewhat reminiscent of the Cat Woman on Batman. She plays the worst witch in the West, Ultra Witch.

THE WEEKEND WINDUP ... Sophia Loren and Carlo Ponti invested in a big shopping center near Hartford, Conn. ... Phil Foster will be featured more next season on the "Laverne and Shirley" TV series. Phil says, "Some day they'll be calling me 'the middle-aged Fonzie.'

Rotund Peter Ustinov says he has no intention of dieting: "I had an ancestor in the 1700's who weighed much more than I, and he lived to be 108!"...Virginia Graham will do summer stock in a comedy, "Let's Hear It For Miss America!"...Alan Alda will star in the film "The Senator"; he helped write it.

TODAY'S BEST Laugh: A reader writes that she's glad some radio stations have quit playing rock music: "Now when I get static I know it's the radio, not the music."

WISH I'D said that: Kin Hubbard said it: "Honesty pays, but it don't seem to pay enough to suit some people."

REMEMBERED quote: "Worrying about whether you'll be remembered doesn't leave time to do anything memorable."

EARL'S PEARLS: It's a shame that Dean Martin missed all the Bicentennial excitement. But he didn't want to break up his New Year's Eve Party. . .

The Post Office is reporting a deficit—and can you imagine how much bigger it would be if they went to the expense of putting glue on the stamps? That's Earl, brother.

Mike makes $2 million in quiet Philadelphia

By GEORGE MAKSIAN
New York News

NEW YORK— Everybody is aware of the boodles of money Johnny Carson makes at NBC. And who doesn't know about Barbara Walters' widely-publicized $1 million at ABC? But quietly stashed away in little ole Philadelphia is easy-going Mike Douglas, waltzing merrily along with a cool $2 million a year TV contract with Westinghouse Broadcasting Co.

The two mill doesn't come easy. He has to come up with a talk-variety show five times a week. It is produced in both 60-and 90-minute versions by Westinghouse, in association with Mike Douglas Entertainment, Inc., and distributed by Group W Productions and the two mill is ALL his. Production costs, etc., are extra.

ASKED how this choice bit of news has never made headlines before this, Douglas said: "I prefer it that way. I don't go for all that show business razzmatazz. That's also why I like living in Philadelphia. It's away from all the Hollywood and New York circus atmosphere."

Douglas, often called the darling of daytime TV and the crown prince of the kaffeeklatsch, said the big money deal came about at the signing of his last contract. "Then," he said, "people were coming out of the woodwork and asking, 'What'll it take to buy Mike Douglas?' 'Two million a year for three years' was the reply and I got it. Now, we're in the process of renewing the whole pact. The pencil is so sharp, the paper is bleeding," he said, with a big smile.

"The Mike Douglas Show" is televised nationally over 130 stations and will celebrate its 15th anniversary Dec. 11.

"Originally, the program was only on one station, KTW—TV, the Westinghouse station in Cleveland in 1961. In a year, four other Westinghouse stations were added, and by 1963, the series was in national syndication. In 1965, the show moved to Philadelphia, and in 1972 a special studio was built in that city's historic Independence Hall.

"THE SHOW grew in popularity strictly by word of mouth," said Douglas during a recent visit. "At first nobody would go to Cleveland for a mere $100, the scale then. But the word got around that it was a good show to do.

"We even got Barbra Streisand to come for scale. Her manager asked us if we could get her a job to supplement her appearance on the TV show. So we booked her at the Chateau Club in nearby Lakewood, Ohio, where she

'Veteran' actor, 14, mindful of his roles

By KENT SCHOKNECHT
Staff Writer

Michael LeClair is a veteran actor. In the last five years, he has appeared in six stage productions, two feature films and over 10 television shows.

LeClair is 14 years old.

He lives with five brothers and sisters in Downey, where he is a junior at Warren High School. He discusses roles, agents and salaries as glibly as someone who has been in the business since vaudeville.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roger LeClair, say they too have learned a lot about the entertainment field from their talented youngster.

The young actor said that "each show has someone in charge of casting, and he sends openings to the agents telling them what he's looking for. If I fit the role, my agent sends me to audition. Then, if I get the part, he gets 10 per cent off the top.

MICKEY LeCLAIR

"I STARTED when I was four, in the play Carrousel. Then I retired until I was nine," LeClair said. He attributed his temporary retirement to a "lack of suitable roles."

Most recently, he has completed a feature role in the soon-to-be-released, Frankovich-Self production of From Noon Til Three, a Western love story starring Charles Bronson.

"But I don't want to just stay in acting, I want to go into other fields, too: Producing, directing, writing," he said. He almost achieved that goal when he started writing a script for an episode of the TV show Sara. Later, however, he abandoned the project as being too difficult.

LeClair said that if he did stay in acting, he'd like to have his own TV series, preferably a variety show in which he could demonstrate his various talents. Besides act, he can sing, dance and perform magic tricks.

But LeClair— who likes to be called Mickey— is a cautious person. He knows what is and what should be important in his life. "I don't want to miss childhood," he said. In his opinion, too many young actors try to become adults too quickly, and pass by the fun of growing up.

"I DON'T GO to fancy parties, I play baseball. Last week, I was with some friends who are actors, too. We didn't even talk about what roles we've had. We talked about skateboarding and stuff."

One of the friends LeClair mentioned was Brandon Cruz, the star of the TV show The Courtship of Eddie's Father; and more recently, the pitcher of the baseball team that opposed Walter Mathau's in The Bad News Bears.

At the advice of his agent, LeClair turned down the Bears role in favor of the Charles Bronson film for two reasons. Bears was filled with youngsters, allowing no one actor the opportunity to be noticed above the others. Also, the part of the pitcher was a relatively small one.

His role as Cody Taylor in From Noon til Three is more important because there is more exposure— LeClair is the only youngster in the film and his part is central to the plot.

"I ride up on a horse and tell (Bronson's wife) about a robbery that's very important in the movie.

"It's one of those roles you have to remember when you leave the theater," he said.

He talked about film making and some of the details he must consider in playing a role in any film, including completing schoolwork that might otherwise be neglected. He said this worried his parents at first and probably bothers those of other aspiring young actors.

"THERE ARE LAWS requiring me to have at least three hours daily study time and I am assigned a teacher welfare worker to tutor me. I take all my regular books and assignments and take makeup tests when I get back to school, but I don't mind. His plans are to finish high school, then decide on college.

Where does Mickey go from here? Next immediate concern is an audition for the part of drug addict's friend for a future ABC Movie of the Week.

From there? Who knows— after all he's only a kid.

Gold medalist eyes Olympics

Water babies: her wave of future

By JANICE NELSON
Staff Writer

Olympic gold medalist Greta Andersen speaks of the games as one might of an old friend.

Relaxing by the pool as four instructors busily teach infants and toddlers to swim, she speaks frankly about America's chances of remaining successful without government sponsorship of athletes.

"I don't think we're going to be No. 1 any more," said Greta, who pioneered teaching babies to swim in 1954. "Now the Russians are taking children when they're 2 and 3 years old and putting them in schools where they can specialize in their particular sport while getting an education.

"CAN YOU imagine what it will be like in 7 to 10 years when these 2-year-olds can compete?"

So, on a private basis — and for minimal cost — Greta has begun in the same manner to groom the gold medalists of the future. The Tadpoles, whose pint-sized members can swim the length of the 20-yard pool using the breaststroke, are generally about 2 years old.

Greta is adamant about the good that comes of physical training at an early age: "Children who swim at an early age develop better hearts, lungs, coordination — and, the fact is, infants who swim, walk earlier."

Right now, she has eight 2-year-olds who can compete. "They can race and swim 25 yards — I don't say perfect, but they're learning the fundamentals of stroke techniques and racing strokes," she said.

"I really feel American parents are 100 per cent behind their children — they'll go through anything to get the best for their kids."

For that reason, instructors at her Los Alamitos swim school and health spa are extraordinarily well-qualified for the job of coaching the tiny team.

Stuart Carter, a New Zealander currently attending Long Beach State University, has taught swimming in three countries, coached the Australian Olympic swim team from 1968 to 1975 and is currently cooing and coaxing infants and tots into becoming their own best friends in the water.

With Carter is equally well-qualified John Bainbridge, an Australian who similarly coached the down-under Olympic swimmers and holds two physical-education degrees from two countries.

Bainbridge, Carter and New Zealander Paul Anderson, who competed for Australia in the butterfly-stroke category, are currently pursuing their master's degrees at LBSU.

For those too young to remember Greta's greatness, don't think for a moment that her staff is more qualified than she. In the 1948 Olympics, she won both a gold and a silver medal. As an amateur, she won six European, eight Scandinavian and 34 Danish championships.

Groundwork is started on unusual undersea park

By DICK HOWLAND
Staff Writer

The groundwork for an undersea park — complete with nature trails, plaques identifying marine life and guided tours for divers and waders — has begun at Whites Point on the Palos Verdes Peninsula.

A volunteer organization of divers and marine scientists called Coastal Monitoring Systems is cooperating with the Los Angeles County Department of Parks and Recreation to launch this new concept in park development.

"The urchins and kelp beds offshore at Whites Point are so thick that divers often are separated from their partners in the growth, making it a perfect site for such a park," says Terry Lackey, director of education for Coastal Monitoring.

His organization has already installed underwater concrete blocks with markers describing the wildlife, and volunteer tour guide-divers are being recruited.

Lectures and wading tours of the tidal pools at Whites Point are offered to the public by the group on weekends.

Lackey said Coastal Monitoring Systems began seven years ago with backing from the Department of Fish and Game and the county Department of Parks and Recreation.

The group's first project was to direct volunteers who smashed thousands of sea urchins to help save diminishing kelp beds along the local coast that were being devoured by the urchins.

The beds were almost wiped out when urban sewage upset the ecological balance by providing nutrients for the natural enemies of kelp to increase in population, and the enemies nearly wiped out the kelp.

Dr. Wheeler North, Caltech professor of environmental sciences and a member of the oceanographic committee of Coastal Monitoring, began farming kelp beds to restore them to their former abundance.

His efforts and projects sponsored by the Department of Fish and Game to transplant kelp from Catalina Island have restored the beds along the Palos Verdes Peninsula from near extinction.

North is now studying the feasibility of a network of offshore kelp "plantations" to supply methane gas for fuel and livestock feed.

A 10,000-square-foot test reef is being readied at the Navy pier in Long Beach.

It will be towed to a point near San Clemente Island, where it is expected that kelp, one of nature's fastest growing plants, will produce fuel energy and feed for cattle and sheep that could support a city of 500,000 to 800,000 people.

Coastal Monitoring Systems is directing a research project that will collect data on how to protect the kelp along the Palos Verdes Peninsula from further ecological imbalances.

Tryouts for volunteer divers begin Saturday at the Ford Park pool in Bell Gardens at 5 p.m. Lackey said about 70 volunteers were needed.

They will be trained on how to place identification tags on urchins, how to use compasses and other skills needed for the project, which begins Aug. 21.

Certificates from the Professional Association of Diving Instructors will be awarded to graduates of the training course.

"We hope many of the volunteers will become interested in working as tour guides, data gatherers and trailblazers for the development of the underwater natural park," Lackey said.

SALES HIKE SEEN AS RESULT OF LAKEWOOD REMODELING

By AL MURRELL
Staff Writer

Plans are progressing rapidly on a multimillion-dollar project to enclose and remodel the mall at Lakewood Center — a move expected to increase sales at the Southland's oldest shopping center by at least 25 per cent.

Claude "Skip" Keyzers, who manages the 2.2 million-square-foot center for Macerich Real Estate Co. of New York, says the firm expects to have construction plans ready to submit to the city Planning Department in October.

Barring unforeseen complications, the roof construction, expected to take about 10 months, will begin in January, Keyzers said.

He said the Macerich firm, which owns seven other malls and is about to close a deal on an eighth, conducted a survey of 42 other malls in the country which have been enclosed.

"Of those we studied, the average minimum increase in sales between the last year they were open and the first year they were closed was 25 per cent," Keyzers said.

L.B. church goes to market

Nonprofit organizations learn to sell to their consumers

By BRAD ALTMAN
Staff Writer

Members of the East Side Christian Church of Long Beach are no longer called the congregation — they're "consumers," and the Sunday morning sermons are "the product."

Those are the terms used by the church's professional marketing consultant.

A marketing consultant for a church?

If McDonald's can apply marketing principles to sell hamburgers, perhaps it follows that nonprofit organizations, such as churches, can use them to increase church attendance.

Rev. Alan Rose, East Side's youth adviser, said the specific problem was that "our 300-member congregation has not grown in years. We'll die without new members."

So the church brought in Donna Russell, a marketing major at Long Beach State University, one of the new breed of consultants who are applying marketing principles to nonprofit organizations.

Last spring she was a student in LBSU Prof. Bob Frye's course "Marketing for Nonprofit Organizations."

"My goal is to encourage young families to join," explained Mrs. Russell, a member of the church at 668 Obispo Ave. "I'm going after a new market by introducing a new product line—in this instance, Sunday evening sermons as an alternative to morning worship."

The church board of directors agreed with her that properly applied marketing principles could increase the size of the congregation. Subsequently, they approved a hike in the annual advertising budget from $250 to $2,000.

"I'm gratified by Donna's success," said Frye, 46, a marketing professor in the LBSU School of Business since 1967. "Applying marketing principles to nonprofit problems is a very young field, mainly recognized by academicians."

Frye contends that nonprofit organizations—such as churches, schools and government agencies, including police departments—will find an increasing need to market their services to the consumer public in the next decade.

"Contrary to what many people think, you can't give things away," Frye said. "Whether it's providing police protection or sweeping the streets, the nonprofit service has an attached price."

The tag isn't always in dollars.

"If you accept free medical aid, you may have to sit in a cold, cheerless place and suffer through the condescending attitudes of doctors and nurses.

"If you're on welfare, the price is going to the social-services department every week to pick up your check—the constant reminder that you're eating out of the public trough."

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

SOME MONTHS AGO, the readers of "People Talk" were introduced to Carl Pat Cassady, the renowned Cloverdale, Ind., artist and boyhood pal of the legendary World War II correspondent Ernie Pyle, the best friend G.I. Joe ever had.

Well, Carl Pat's back with us today, this time with a report on the July 3 ceremonies in Dana, Ind., in which Ernie's birthplace home became a state memorial.

"The event you and I have waited for for 30 years has taken place, and it was a day I'll never forget," said Carl Pat, whose portrait of Ernie is a prominent part of the memorial.

Dana is a small farm and rail community of 850 persons. It was busting at the seams July 3, with an estimated 7,000 persons lining Maple Street to watch the parade which culminated in the dedication.

The Bloomfield Post 196 American Legion color guard led the march, which included legionnaires from Dana and neighboring communities and antique cars. Roast beef and ham sandwiches sold for $1 each, corn on the cob 35 cents each and homemade peanut butter for $1 a cannister. If the citizens had a mind to, they could buy draft beer at an outdoors stand for 50 cents a cup.

Ed Heinke, a friend and former newspaper colleague of mine, was on hand to reminisce about Ernie. Ed, former city and assistant managing editor of the Indianapolis Times (which quit publishing in 1965), talked about Ernie dropping by the Times between journeys to cut up old touches and ask him out to Dana for some of his Aunt Mary's famous fried chicken. "It was damn good chicken, too," Heinke said.

I am, as was Ernie, an alumnus of the Indianapolis Times. I learned my trade under Ed Heinke and can recall the Pyle stories he used to tell — after the paper was put to bed, that is, for Heinke didn't wax nostalgic on company time. When you worked for Scripps-Howard you lifted that barge and toted that bale — and loved every minute of it. It was a survival school, and your continued employment testified that you were a survivor.

I knew the happy side of the Pyle legend, but I was unacquainted with the darker tones until I read the Indianapolis Star story Carl Pat Cassady sent along with his letter.

Richard E. (Dick) Hollander, now an editorial writer for Scripps-Howard in Washington, met Ernie when Pyle was 17 and a copy boy on the Washington Daily News. Hollander told reporters at the dedication ceremonies that Ernie might have had a "subconscious desire to be killed in battle."

Why? "Because he didn't want to outlive the war. He didn't feel there would be any life for him afterward."

It seems that Ernie's marriage was beyond redemption. He and the former Jerry Siebolds had previously been divorced only to be remarried in 1943 (by proxy while Pyle was in North Africa).

Whatever Ernie Pyle wanted from fate, the issue was settled on April 18, 1945, in the battle of Ie Shima, an island near Okinawa. A sniper's bullet wrote "30" to his life but not to his legend, which just keeps on growing with the years.

All the townspeople were at the July 3 parade in Dana, elbow-contesting with several thousand visitors for good viewing space along the line of march. But I don't think Ernie Pyle's spirit was marching along that day. In all likelihood, his spirit was sitting on the front steps of the house where he was born, writing notes on the parade and wondering about the marchers' bunions.

That's the way an infantryman would think about parades, and Ernie Pyle belonged to infantry heart and soul and aching feet.

Ernie wrote:

"Anybody who has been in war and wants to go back is a plain fool in my books. I'm going simply because there is a war on and I'm part of it."

Ernie was a modest man, ever in awe of the dirty, foot-slogging G.I. who carries the weight of battle and the bulk of its pain. He would have been proud of the memorialization of his old home and shared it with his buddies — squads, platoons, companies, battalions, regiments and divisions.

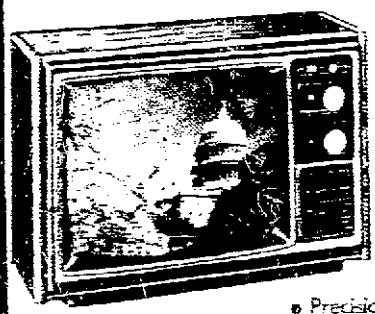

His house is theirs. And the house stands in Dana, a state's gift to the spirit of an uncommon man with the common touch.

"WELL, IT'S NOT EXACTLY PIE IN THE SKY..."

Editorial

But will it play?

The Grits-and-Fritz show, or "Something for Everyone," has ended its New York run and soon will take to the road to dazzle the masses.

The vehicle—featuring Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter and his running mate, Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota—is carefully engineered and runs on ball bearings greased with peanut oil. But whether it can be a bandwagon carrying the Democrats to the White House in November is another matter.

THE VOTERS are the ultimate critics of the Democrats' new road show, and they figure to be a tougher, more demanding audience than the party delegates who packed Madison Square Garden with togetherness and cheered every line in the carefully-crafted script. The voters, unlike the delegates, won't be bedazzled by form; they'll look for substance.

They won't find much.

Carter successfully campaigned for the presidential nomination with a mixture of bromides, platitudes and vague promises to get America moving again. It was so much meringue, the kind of meringue that adorns pie-in-the-sky.

Carter's anointment in New York was as predictable as the acceptance speech he gave. The speech was the set piece of most presidential candidates. It threw up its share of bogeymen. It proposed its share of glittering goals: freedom from crime, better education, a bountiful economy, fairer taxes, more employment, open government, responsive leadership, vigor and vision. Everybody's for those goals.

But, as in the campaign, Carter offered few details of what he would do to implement such goals. He was long on rhetoric, short on specifics. In the most general terms he promised:

—To be a strong protector of the consumer.

—To reorganize the administrative branch.

—To give the country a national health program.

—To push for universal voter registration.

In short, he's going to provide less government with bigger government. And he's going to deliver in four years—"You can depend on that."

To further confuse the issue, Carter tapped as his running mate a liberal senator, a proponent of big government, a man who advocates a broadening of the establishment Carter professes to deplore.

Just what tax reform is proposed? Carter doesn't say.

Just what national health program is proposed? Carter doesn't say.

How far can the government go in consumer protection without intruding on everybody's business? Carter doesn't say.

Nor does he say how universal voter registration can be achieved without opening the process to giant fraud.

Governmental reorganization and its cost? How many more employes needed? Carter just doesn't say.

The voters will want answers to these questions. And they'll be as demanding of the Republican ticket when it's chosen next month.

THERE CAN BE, as President Ford has said, a clear-cut choice offered the people in November. But only if both parties define their stands with clarity. The Democrats in New York didn't.

Jimmy Carter's vision of the presidency, as presently enunciated, is nothing more than a glimpse of confusion caught in a fun-house mirror. He's got four months to put things in sharp focus.

Thus far the Carter presidential campaign has been built on hocus-pocus and sleight-of-hand. His philosophy is an illusion—now you see it, now you don't. He'd best get his act together before he takes it on the road after Labor Day. The voters will expect reality, not generality, from him. Reality is where they live.

What does Minnesota have?

NEW YORK—Here we go with Minnesota again. Sen. Walter F. "Fritz" Mondale of the Gopher State was chosen by Gov. Jimmy Carter to be his vice-presidential running-mate in the 1976 national political campaign.

Mondale thus takes a high place in the extraordinary number of national political leaders who have been spawned by the land of ten thousand lakes.

In terms of population, economic impact and over-all political muscle, Minnesota is no particular great shakes. Beauty it has and sturdy inhabitants and a neat balance between agricultural and industrial interests.

Minnesota is a nice place to visit and a good place in which to live. I say that because some years ago, I was a resident of the state and a Minnesota taxpayer and if my work took me elsewhere, I still consider myself at least an honorary grad-dute of the state of Minnesota.

DURING MY LIFETIME, both in and out of Minnesota, there has never been a time when some Minnesotan was not a dominant figure on the national political stage. One of my earliest foreign policy recollections is of Frank Kellogg of Minnesota, the Nobel Peace Prize laureate.

At the same time, Pierce Butler of Minnesota was a loud voice on the Supreme Court.

Almost in faster order than one could keep up with them came Floyd Olson, a flamboyant Minnesota governor whose populist convictions made him a national figure and had death not struck him down, who knows how far he might have gone?

From the shadow of Olson's death came the young Republican, Harold Stas-

Walter T. Ridder

Washington Editor For Ridder Publications

sen, to take over the governorship and to become a spearhead and spokesman for the national young and liberal Republicans. If his career dwindled into something pathetic, it must still be remembered that at one time he cut a large and important swath in the politics of this nation.

When Stassen started to fade, along came Hubert H. Humphrey who ultimately was vice president of the United States, missed the presidency by an eyelash and remains today a formidable force in the affairs of the country.

Now it's the turn of Mondale. No matter what happens in this November's election he has been pitchforked into a position of top leadership within the Democratic party. He is young enough to wonder where next he might go.

Forgotten by most people this year is that another Minnesotan is running for president. He is former Sen. Eugene McCarthy who has always brought a fresh, if sometimes inexplicable, approach to American politics. It was McCarthy who sparked the dissenters to the Vietnam war in 1968 and it was he who led the movement which ultimately forced President Lyndon B. Johnson to abandon the search for another presidential term. In light of subsequent events, McCarthy's name will forever be in the histories of our times.

MINNESOTA HAS TWO men on the Supreme Court of the United States, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Associate Justice Harry A. Blackmun, an unusual circumstance to say the least.

Nor does Minnesota's seemingly endless stream of actual or potential national political leaders end there. An up and coming star might well be its present Democratic governor, Wendell Anderson, who made a favorable and telling impression at this convention for his performance as chairman of the platform committee. Democratic leaders and politicians are already eyeing him with interest.

Just why all this is so, I do not know. I only know that Minnesota produces volatile and able political leaders in numbers for beyond its population or importance in the national scheme of things.

Now, if I had only stayed in Minnesota...

Carter's abortion gamble

NEW YORK—Jimmy Carter responded to a rare flash of criticism at his carefully controlled Democratic national convention with an astounding—and dangerous—concession: a flat promise to attempt limiting all federal funds for abortions.

Thus, Carter's campaign for the Democratic nomination ended in triumph as it began in obscurity: shading his position on the emotion-charged abortion question in ways that anger both sides and trouble his own supporters. The significance is not so much what it portends for the abortion controversy as what it reveals about the new Democratic nominee.

AFTER GIVING pro-life (anti-abortion) forces in Iowa the impression early this year that he might favor some form of constitutional amendment against abortions, Carter later retreated to this position: anti-abortion but also anti-constitutional amendment. When the Democratic platform also declared opposition to the constitutional amendment (with the reluctant acquiescence of Carter agents), pressure on Carter from pro-life forces—especially the Roman Catholic hierarchy—resumed.

The pressure was most intense here in the Missouri delegation, where Catholics and other pro-lifers urged Carter to disavow the platform plank or risk losing the state. Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton of Missouri, himself a Catholic, unsuccessfully sought Carter's personal appearance before his delegation but had to settle for a telephone conversation with the nominee.

As relayed to his fellow Missourians by Eagleton, Carter said he opposes abortion but stands by the platform. Nothing new there. What was new was a promise by Carter to push federal legislation that would "restrict, insofar as possible," the use of federal facilities or funds for the purposes of abortion. That would seriously threaten spending of 45 to 55 million dollars in federal Medicaid matching funds each year for 250,000 to 300,000 abortions—appeasing pro-life forces but outraging feminists.

Inside Report

THERE IS NO RECORD of Carter ever having taken this stand before. In answering a Women Today questionnaire March 15, Carter declared: "I do not like the idea of government money being spent on abortions." But he promised no legislative efforts and acknowledged that the courts require abortion spending by Medicaid.

Thus, Carter has churned up more muddy waters on abortion, raising these inevitable questions: Did he take the easy way out to meet a momentary challenge? or will he truly risk feminist wrath to fulfill his new promise? The answers carry implications transcending abortions.

An unexpected appeal here by Jimmy Carter to nine governors for "all the help I can get" in the campaign was a dramatic turnabout from his boast three weeks earlier to House Democratic leaders that he planned to win all 50 states.

Carter's appeal to the governors, led by Florida's Gov. Reubin Askew (formerly a sharp critic of Carter), came Wednesday when he summoned them for talks on the vice-presidential selection and the fall campaign.

"JIMMY FINALLY did what he should have done before," one highly influential governor told us. "He asked for our help and he told us we were essential to his campaign." Carter also warned the governors—who needed no warning—that beating President Ford (or Ronald Reagan) is looking tougher every day, no matter what the polls show.

That was a welcome contrast to Carter's private meeting in Washington with House Democratic leaders. He astonished them with what one called "a show of arrogance" in predicting a major sweep and indicating that the Democratic congressmen seeking reelection needed his help more than he needed theirs.

Carter's Wednesday session with the governors, however late, cleared an atmosphere being poisoned with recrimination from his former colleagues. They had regarded him as a loner as governor of Georgia and were beginning to feel beneath his notice at the convention in New York.

Humphrey knew when to quit

NEW YORK—Changing of the guard in politics is accomplished in many ways.

It can be abrupt or unpleasant, with the old order banished to the sidelines in disgrace or despair or defeat.

It can happen in full view on the field of battle or stealthily in smoke-filled rooms.

It can leave a bitter residue or it can be an inspiring turning point leading to renewal and a new era.

For the Democratic party, it took place last week in Madison Square Garden before millions of television viewers and thousands of delegates to the party's national convention.

IT WAS ALL WRAPPED up in the words and gestures of two speeches delivered by a man who has been at the vortex of eight Democratic conventions since 1948, Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota.

On Tuesday, Humphrey received a thunderous and emotional ovation as he gave what just as easily could have served as an acceptance speech for the winning candidate for the presidential nomination. After four unsuccessful tries for the presidency, it was Humphrey's farewell address. He and the crowd knew it and that awareness heightened the moment and the poignancy for both.

On Thursday, Humphrey was back at the podium again, this time to nominate for the vice-presidency his long-time friend and protege, Sen. Walter Mondale.

It was the changing of the guard, a moment brought on by forces neither man could control but forces that were shaped as much by Humphrey as by anyone.

"This has been a banner year for me, the greatest gift of my life," Humphrey said the following morning in an interview in his hotel suite. "I am at the top of the public opinion polls. I've got what a man like me needs—friendship, respect, affection.

"I'M GOING BACK to Minnesota as happy as can be, knowing we've got a great ticket and knowing that my close friend Fritz Mondale will be the next vice-president. I have truly enjoyed what happened here and have no remorse."

No regrets, no sense of loss knowing there will be no more opportunities to become President Humphrey?

"I don't need it," said Humphrey, "I want to live. I've never been happier in the Senate than the past two years, never felt more the sense of accomplishment."

The speculation that his efforts brought about Mondale's selection by Jimmy Carter obviously pleased Humphrey but he rejects it. He says he was certain that given time and enough exposure to Mondale, Carter would eventually come to realize that Mondale was the best selection.

But Humphrey was available for repeated consultation with Mondale and with Carter and Charles Kirbo, his aide in charge of researching the vice presidential candidates.

Humphrey conceded that early in June "certain forces were set in motion," activist, liberal, labor, black and Jewish elements in the party who were not enthusiastic about Carter's candidacy. Humphrey believes those groups are now wholehearted committed to the ticket.

'What's the good word?'

During the process, Carter and his aides seemed most interested in whether the men they were considering were team players, compatible with Carter, able to advocate and execute effectively policies they might not totally approve. And whether he could be a good president.

"I told them anybody who can live with me, like Fritz Mondale has, and still be cooperative and still be his own man was somebody extraordinary, somebody hard to find," said Humphrey.

The Minnesota delegation was urged to talk up Mondale to other delegates at the convention, and Humphrey believes that also contributed to Carter's selection of him.

"The real reason Fritz got it was that he fits in with Carter," said Humphrey. "He, like Carter, is rather new on the national scene, and because they are new, they have good vibes."

It could have been a different convention, different but for the chemistry and character of Hubert Humphrey.

After the Pennsylvania primary went to Carter, the party's traditional activist groups stepped up pressure on him to run. Joseph Crangle, the New York state political leader, said he had 500 delegates committed to Humphrey. But Humphrey declined.

"IF I HAD COME in here with 400 or 500 delegates, there would have been a knockdown, pitched battle, very divisive, and I knew it," said Humphrey. "It would have been of no help to me in the election, and I knew that.

"The press and the media would have called me an old man and a spoiler."

And so for Humphrey, the final arena will be the Senate and not the White House. He heads the Joint Economic Committee and in reality if not in title, runs the Foreign Relations Committee. He has epochal legislation heading toward passage, and he prides himself that the past two years have been the most fruitful in two tours of duty in the Senate.

The Senate and Mondale in the vice presidency are his consolation.

"It was time for some younger people, some new people," Humphrey said.

Letters to the editor

Rights denied

The highest court in the land just ruled that I, a father, have no rights in protecting the life of my unborn child. They ruled that the unborn child can be killed against my wishes.

That same court also ruled that any minor female child of ours can have an abortion performed with arrangements made between her and the state and neither of them are required to inform or involve us, her parents, in that decision.

I am outraged by the flagrant intrusion into my rights as a husband and as a father — rights now taken away from me by King Supreme Court.

I urge all parents who object to such state interference into parental rights and marriage agreements join in the fight against the erosion of our natural rights.

Ripped off again

As a resident of the Wrigley district for the past 30 years, I was most happy when they founded the Wrigley District Association. It has many pluses to be proud of and one is the beautification of Pacific Avenue. Or is it?

As I walk down the sidewalk of Pacific Avenue, I cannot believe what I see. Such sloppy workmanship. I realize it's supposed to have rough texture as they spread rock salt on it for this purpose. But after that it is suposed to be finished smooth but it is not. The brickwork is terrible. There are cracks in it and some of it is missing where the new cement adjoins the old as it wasn't properly finished off. In some places there are missing bricks for someone to trip over. There are saw marks where the workmen forgot to recess the concrete.

We are paying for a new job, not a patch job.

To verify this all one needs to do is take a stroll.

Let's thank police

It's about time the citizens of California began to appreciate the law enforcement officers that work to protect us night and day, seven days a week.

Let us not criticize and put down police officers. Remember, these men put their lives on the line day in and day out to protect the law-abiding citizen. For us to constantly complain about these fine, dedicated men is downright rude, inconsiderate and uncalled for.

City police, sheriff's officers and the Highway Patrol do a very good job of keeping California's cities, towns, freeways and highways safe for people.

Is it not time that we begin thanking these men and give them the respect they have earned but don't get?

An error compounded

Our city officials are real experts. First, they demoralize the whole city by purchasing an outside attraction, the Queen Mary, and spending millions of dollars to improve it while ignoring our own natural beaches.

Now they are doing it again. An outside attraction is going to be our police chief. Why has the city again looked away from local talent? Is it because our own force cannot produce an honest, efficient leader?

I believe this is the opinion of many here in Long Beach. This, in effect, is what they (city officials) have told us.

Friends again

The Bicentennial is now behind us. Memories of events and highlights will linger on. The most spectacular was a visit from Queen Elizabeth of England, presenting us with a new Liberty Bell, and the gala at the White House.

Being born in England and having left there 63 years ago, it's nice to know Britain and the United States are on such friendly terms. I trust all English-speaking countries will hold together in any emergency or crisis.

Don't ignore show

I find it hard to believe that the marvelous local Bicentennial production of "Patriots and Petticoats" has been ignored by the Independent, Press-Telegram staff.

Surely, since you so beautifully covered the writing of this show by two Long Beach residents, you'd want to let your readers know that they can now attend the show. It is being performed this weekend at Marshall Junior High School.

Shame on you for not promoting and supporting our talented Long Beach writers.

Ask the voters

If the members of the City Council are planning on asking for any kind of a tax increase to finish paying for an art museum, they never asked us (the voters) if we wanted it in the first place. They can save time and taxpayers' money — my answer is no, no, no.

No to that and any other of their luxury projects. Clean up your city government before you have the nerve to ask any of us for a dime more in tax money.

I'm staying within my budget and not asking for any help and I'd like the council to do the same.

Dancing lives

As a long-time participant (32 years) in recreational International Folk dancing, I am delighted that your reporter found it alive and well in Long Beach.

Folk dancing has been alive in Long Beach since 1945 with at present four clubs engaged in this form of exercise and socializing. This is probably the largest number of clubs per capita of any city in the U.S.

As with any good thing, there is always room for one more. I welcome the new dance center and will look in some time and, perhaps, kick up my heels a little.

Oiling up America's voters

PARIS—The Democratic party seemed to evade the main point when its platform surveyed energy. Not that platforms are important guides to future policy or even important in mustering votes; but they supposedly serve at least as guidelines of future intent.

Jimmy Carter is pledged simply to "continue control of crude oil and natural gas prices; seek alternative sources of power; minimize dependence on nuclear fuel," and so forth. Not a word about restricting high consumption of petroleum products, which has forced the United States into greater dependence on imports from foreign oil exporters, above all the powerful Arab cartel.

THE PLATFORM is mealy-mouthed when it calls simultaneously for reducing the Pentagon's budget by $15 billion to $17 billion while maintaining "a strong military and nuclear deterrence." A similar cake-having while cake-eating attitude is less clearly spelled out on oil; but it is there.

Right now the American economy is staging an impressive comeback from its first postwar depression while the Soviet economy is having a fit of the staggers. But we tend to forget that the USSR has become the world's leading producer of both oil and coal.

Saudi Arabia possesses the largest proven petroleum reserves (estimated in 1974 at 132 billion barrels) but even then the Soviet Union came second with 75 billion barrels. The United States was fifth on that list with 35 billion barrels, less than half of what is available to our principal rival.

International oil prices, while unsatisfactory to several of the OPEC exporters, are considered somewhat above the sensible level — that level where it is cheaper to produce substitute energy from coal, nuclear or solar power.

But to "minimize" dependence on nuclear fuel — the reverse of what France seeks — appears illogical and economically confusing. For some time the United States has been trying to get into a position of maximizing the use of nuclear energy; seemingly, the idea would be discarded in the likely event of a Carter victory.

C. L. Sulzberger

New York Times News Service

IT WOULD BE comforting to think that the vast Alaskan petroleum pool will soon be piped to the rest of the United States. Nevertheless, it requires a "floor price" policy to insure that all potential American oil resources are developed. Henry Kissinger saw this crucial point.

Three years ago—before the Yom Kippur war and zooming Arab oil prices — Ambassador James E. Akins, then U.S envoy to Saudi Arabia, wrote: "To look simply at the world's oil reserves and conclude they are sufficient to meet the world's needs can no longer be acceptable. We could allow ourselves such fatuities as long as we had large spare oil production capacity, and while our overseas imports are small. We can do so no longer."

But all signs now indicate the industrial democracies will not scale down their reliance on imported petroleum over the next decade. The United States is becoming more—not less—dependent on oil imports, especially from the Arabs.

According to OECD statistics, in 1956 the United States imported 57.3 million tons, representing 5.6 per cent of its energy supply, whereas in 1974 the figures had respectively risen to 300 million tons and 17.5 per cent. Simply stated, our dependence on imported petroleum had more than tripled; the upward rate has since accelerated.

If Jimmy Carter leads the next U.S. administration, he would be wise to take decisive action on energy matters to guarantee that both the American economy and the American defensive posture can be sustained. Neither should be subjected to the conceivable threat of sudden boycott, encouraged by our political adversaries.

WHY CANNOT PETROLEUM consumption be limited while nuclear energy and other power sources are souped up? Is it not desirable to encourage automobile manufacturers to search more intensely for an internal combustion engine that provides more thrust and less wastage per gallon of gas than the present ridiculously low proportion?

And should not Congress be sternly reminded that there are too many cars on the road? Since no one will voluntarily sacrifice his own vehicle, it is high time to levy stiff taxes on second, third and fourth autos in each family (unless it can be proven these are not pleasure vehicles but essential).

This is a quintessentially important problem even if, for the moment, the economy again is climbing the ladder of success. The time to ask a nation to help itself is when things get better, not when it is at the bottom of a slough.

Just throw the money and hope

NEW YORK—Not long ago, vital people who run things discovered a new wisdom: "You can't sovle problems by throwing money at them."

Tell a government man you are desperate because you don't know where your next meal is coming from and he replies, "You can't solve problems by throwing money at them."

Show a political thinker a million people with no place to live and he replies, "You can't solve problems by throwing money at them."

FORD'S PEOPLE in Washington will tell you at the drop of a "Buddy, can you spare a dime?" that you can't solve problems by throwing money at them, and Reagan is in full agreement. I'm not sure about Carter, but he talks suspiciously like a closet believer in the futility of money-throwing every time city bankruptcies come under discussion.

In any case, all three of them have been throwing money in million-dollar wads at the White House job problem this summer, which suggests that vital people are not so sold on the uselessness of throwing money as they would have us believe.

In my experience, the vital people of the world never hesitate to throw money at the tiniest hint of a problem, provided it is their problem that is getting the money thrown at it. It is when somebody else's problem is on the receiving end of the thrown money that the futility of the exercise become manifest to them.

AS A CLASS these vital opponents of money-throwing often become churlish if someone takes them seriously and balks at throwing money. A friend told me recently of being warned by Ford's government that he was going to have very severe problems indeed unless he threw a large sum of money at its tax agents forthwith.

Russell Baker

New York Times News Service

My friend declined to come across. Citing the wisdom of the President's own men, he pointed out that it would be useless to throw money at his tax problem. "You can't solve problems by throwing money at them," he reminded the government.

Two weeks later he was handed a subpoena and threatened with indictment on charges of acting on government pieties.

Not long ago I was discussing broken-down subways with a utility-company philosopher. He ridiculed my suggestion that federal money for subway repair might help get the labor force to work on time and thereby increase production.

"You can't solve problems by throwing money at them," he pointed out. I was glad to hear it. His own company had a problem in the rising cost of oil needed to make electricity. It had been trying to solve this problem by constantly increasing my electricity bill to pay its rising oil costs.

I told him I would immediately stop paying the increase now that I realized you can't solve problems by throwing money at them. He said anybody who didn't throw the money would very quickly have his electricity cut off.

"You misunderstood me," he explained in language much more opaque than his doctored quotation suggests. "You can't solve your problems by throwing our money at them, but you can solve our problems by throwing your money at them." This probably sums up the real wisdom tucked away inside the new wisdom like an olive buried in a baloney.

I have relationships with many vital people, all of whom have problems. Very few, if any, would put up long with my refusal to throw money at these problems.

DEPARTMENT-STORE executives whose wives are nagging them for Venetian vacations deliver monthly computerized demands for money to be thrown at the problem. Children and landlords seem to have nothing in life but problems, and no way of solving them except by throwing my money at them.

Some months in some families all the money has been thrown at other peoples' problems before it has ever been earned, which means you have to skulk around looking for somebody to throw some at your own problems, which is why there are so many people in the stick-up trade and so many governments in the tax business.

Of course you can solve problems by throwing money at them. And the vital people who say you can't, do it all the time with problems ranging from securing peace from a wife's lawyer to securing the nation's borders from enemy attack. Throwing money doesn't always eliminate the problem, to be sure, but in most cases it at least keeps it from becoming insufferable.

Deep thoughts while shaving

ST. PAUL, Minn.—I will be forever in the debt of the Gillette Company. Its "Blue Blade," I felt, was the start of manhood. That was a good blade. It took that fuzz I had been staring at down to a smooth surface that, flory be, became abrasive the next day. That is, one could feel the stubble of rubbing the tongue across the upper lip. It is old stuff now, of course, and insecurity vanished ages ago.

My best razor was a Gillette, one selling for about $10 or $12. It had heft. There was confidence. And then the improvements began. The good razor was lost, somewhere. It became a matter of frustration: which one of many models of Gillette, or Schick, for that matter, was a person to use? And which blade?

THERE ARE GILLETTE "Super Stainless" blades, "Thin Blades," "Trac II," "Platinum Plus" and "Super Blue Blades."

None of them does what the old "Blue Blade" use to do: that is, shave you without fuss or worry. What else does a person want? A comfortable, clean shave, accomplished without any anxiety caused by the thought there may be a superior blade about, or a superior razor.

All right. We still have Blue Blades, and we have Techmatics, Trac II Adjustable, the Twinjector. And now something known as "Good News!", a disposable razor. It has the same shape as the Trac II. But we now have something else to throw away.

WE ASK AGAIN what does a person want in a razor?

Certainly, not a guessing game.

You want something first of all that will not pull, cut or scratch and something that has the lasting qualities of the Wilkinson blade before Gillette bought out this old English company.

The Trac II is just fair. I am not good with my hands, and flunked model airplane building. It is simply too much in the morning, when my reading glasses are on the bedstand, and I am in the bathroom, to change the blades. I know. I know. I confess to idiocy. Many of you have already noticed this, anyway, so I am rather shameless on this point.

There seem to be any numbers of safety razors, my preference, on the market, and none is worth a damn. The Wall Street Journal published a story a couple of months ago detailing the testing that goes on at Gillette, so you have to wonder if it is some disability on your part or, possibly, in the testing process.

Many of you don't read The Wall Street Journal. This article of concern detailed Gillette's razor testing programs. Gillette employes are encouraged to participate. Gillette executives participate, I gather, or else. The tests involve the use of every shaving product the company puts out and the use of razors until they begin to rip and tear. At times, the brave are given razors used by others. To test what? I don't know.

William G. Sumner

Ridder News Service

INTERESTINGLY, the best razor to come along this decade was a heavy, German-made diagonal razor, Pomco available in many men's clothing stores. The best blade found is the Schick Plus Platinum.

You see what splendid services are offered here. Not one word about the political convention. Just human stuff. And I'll hear that this may be sexist, and I answer in this manner: if you are a militant feminist, go ahead and shave. It is a splendid way to start the day, given, as noted, the right equipment. And then smack into a crisis.

No Yardley's after shave, anyplace.

What is happening? Has all sanity and decency departed? Our sense of civil behavior? A friend who also uses Yardley's went from store to store the other day in an unsuccessful quest. He was asked, incredibly, one should think, if he wouldn't care to try a "musk" aftershave. As I understand the story, he had to slap cold water from a drinking fountain on his face, such was the shock of being asked to try "musk".

Musk. And disposable blades. Wonderful in a society that has discarded wool and cotton for knits made of petroleum.

Water babies her wave of future

She holds 13 world records and was said to be the first woman to successfully compete against men, which resulted in her winning prize money in both men's and women's divisions.

Already, Greta says, she has several promising tots. Most unusual is 14-month-old Scottie McClaskey. In a few months he will probably be ready to join the Tadpole program. He is said to be the youngest persons to ever complete the requirements for a Red Cross beginning swimmer card.

To earn the card, he had to fulfill these requirements in sequence: jumping into the deep water, leveling off, swimming 15 yards, turning and swimming back to a starting point, swimming halfway back, turning over on his back, resting in a floating position for 30 seconds, turning from back to front and continuing to swim back to the starting point.

"He swims, he dives, he breathes — he does everything," bragged Greta.

Two-year-old Kati Arnett has been taking lessons since she was 3 months old, and she can swim five lengths of the pool "like nothing!"

Brandon Jessie, 2, son of Los Angeles Rams wide receiver Ron Jessie, is another talented youngster. He can swim 20 yards with an overarm stroke. "This is very unusual for a 2-year-old. Most children can't do it before 4 years," Greta said.

A little red-haired fireball named Erie Vaughn, also 2, dives off the board into 12 feet of water, swims to the bottom "and sits there . . . He's a natural," Greta boasts.

Married for 10 years, the Danish swimming star has no children, although she confesses that she loves them: "I've devoted my life to everyone else's children."

Greta dislikes the "winning ethic in this country" when it involves children.

"This is not the Little League," interjected Carter, who was standing nearby. "We place the emphasis on enjoyment — not pressuring for advancement."

Most nonprofit organizations are production-oriented, manufacturing goods they figure the public needs but unconcerned with ways to present their services, Frye said.

Examples, he said, are two "lemons" dropped on a disapproving public: the Santa Monica Freeway's Diamond Lanes and the supersonic transport (SST). If marketed correctly, both could have been successful, he believes.

"Caltrans (California Department of Transportation) butchered the Diamond Lane project. I happen to know they have marketing consultants who didn't even know the Diamond Lane project existed until two weeks before the proposal was released to the public."

Frye said Caltrans officials failed to "survey consumer attitudes extensively" and instead "sat back in their armchairs and guessed people's reactions.

"In public transit, marketing is recognized as the No. 1 problem. We've got to get people out of automobiles, but so far the public perceives the alternatives as lousy."

He said it never occurred to the government that people "don't want sonic booms over Kansas—until it was too late. If the marketer had known from the beginning that people would react angrily to sonic booms, he would have known how to market the SST."

Marketing in the nonprofit sector is at the stage where commercial marketing was before World War II, Frye says:

"They still need to develop ways to sell what they produce. Fortunately, the American mood is changing. We're not going to continue sustaining a throwaway economy."

He said the stores in the newly enclosed malls increased their sales from 25 per cent to 47 per cent "just in the first year and we expect to do at least that well here."

Keyzers said the project probably would cost about $8 million, which is substantially more than it cost to build the Butler Brothers store that gave birth to the 164-acre center in November 1951.

He said the prime reason for enclosing Lakewood Center was to increase business during the evening hours. "We just aren't getting our share of the night-time business," he said.

Keyzers said Westminster Mall did nearly one-third of its business between 5 and 9:30 p.m., and "I think it's probably the same at Cerritos," which he said was the No. 1 competition for Lakewood Center.

He said that sales at Lakewood Center in 1975 totaled approximately $118 million and that this year's sales were slightly ahead of last year's pace.

The city of Lakewood received about $1.2 million for its share of state sales taxes from the center, and a 25 per cent increase in sales would create a like increase in tax revenue to the city.

In addition, the increase in market value of the shopping center, which now is approximately $1 billion, would generate an increase in both city and county property-tax revenues.

Keyzers said the Macerich firm, which is moving its corporate headquarters from New York to Santa Monica next month, was not planning to seek any governmental redevelopment funds for the project.

"We're going to do it with private capital because it's not worth the price of going through the red tape to get the redevelopment money," he said.

In addition to building a roof over the mall, the project plans also call for resurfacing the mall floor and the center parking lot, adding modern sculptures, replacing all of the planter boxes and construction of 50,000 to 60,000 square feet of new shops east of the May Co.

Services Monday for teacher Elsie Oakden

Services for Elsie Parret Oakden, 62, a teacher in the Long Beach Unified School District for 30 years, will be Monday at 11 a.m. at Dilday Family Chapel, 1250 Pacific Ave., Long Beach.

Mrs. Oakden, of 519 Cedar Ave., Long Beach, died Friday at Long Beach Memorial Hospital of cancer.

She was born in Fresno, received her A.B. degree from Peru Teachers College in Nebraska and did graduate work at USC, UCLA and Long Beach State University.

She taught at Longfellow and Grant elementary schools in Long Beach until her retirement in 1974

Donald Ashley, assistant superindendent of the district, said her co-workers considered her "an extremely professional teacher whose enthusiasm never wavered."

She is survived by her husband, John; brothers, Edwin, Glenn and Harold Parret, all of Fresno; and sisters, Alta Barse of Orange, Mary Harmon of Eugene, Ore., and Mildred Schroeder of Northridge.

Lackey, 30, of 3712 Orange Ave., Long Beach, is a civilian marine electrician who installs equipment ranging from toasters to computers on ships at the Long Beach Naval Shipyard. He is working on his bachelors degree in biology at Long Beach State University and plans on a career in marine biology.

He took up diving six years ago. He and his wife, Linda, recently lived in Guam for five months, where he earned a living by diving at night for six to eight hours for fish to sell at the market.

Coastal Monitoring was launched by Paul Meister, a Los Angeles timepiece electrician, with help from Dennis Plaunt, a worker for the county Department of Parks and Recreation.

Sometimes membership in the organization has dipped to two or three persons, but now fluctuates from between 40 and 100 persons, according to Lackey.

SMOG REPORT

POLICE BEAT

Boy hurt in fall from cliff

A Rolling Hills Estates boy fell 65 feet from a cliff at Marineland Saturday and was rescued by a Coast Guard helicopter, Lomita sheriff's deputies reported.

Bill Masters, 14, of 4844 Elmdale Drive, was climbing on the cliff by himself about 1 p.m. when he slipped and landed at the base of the cliff. He was rushed to Torrance Memorial Hospital, where he was in guarded condition with severe cuts.

L.B. man robbed of wallet

A Long Beach man was robbed of his wallet containing $80 Saturday after a young woman hit him on the head with a bottle while a man held him from behind, Long Beach police said.

Edward C. Morton, 42, of 4901 Clair Del Ave., told officers he was robbed shortly before 3 a.m. as he walked toward a service station rest room near Pacific Coast Highway and Cherry Avenue.

The assailant, a woman in her early 20s, approached him from behind and demanded his wallet, Morton said. When he ingnored the demand and continued walking, the woman kicked him in the groin. Then her accomplice grabbed Morton and the woman struck him repeatedly on the head with the bottle, officers said.

The victim was taken to St. Mary Medical Center, where he was treated for cuts on the forehead and cheek.

Officers Gerald Fullerton and Vernon Whybrew found Morton's wallet lying on the front lawn of a home near the service station.

Bandit robs hotel of $200

A robber armed with an automatic pistol took more than $200 from a Long Beach hotel Saturday, police said.

A clerk at the Holiday Inn, 2640 Lakewood Blvd., told officers a man about 45 approached the desk, pointed the gun in his face and demanded cash. The robber fled after ordering clerk Lancing Brandon to lie face down on the floor.

Purse with $13 stolen at home

Addy Maye Dial reported that burglars entered her home at 1404 E. 56th St. through the unlocked front door and took her purse containing $13, Long Beach police said.

picked up $2,500!"

Douglas, 51 on Aug. 11, said he started out making only $400 a week. "Only in America could something like this happen," he said. "But don't get the idea that the job is easy. It's very hard work."

"There are times I wish I didn't have all this success; that I could go out with my children and not be stared at. I don't mind giving out autographs, but once you start the mob is at you."

"THAT'S WHY we like living in Philadelphia," piped in Mrs. Douglas, his wife for over 30 years. "We can live quiet, decent lives."

The Douglases may go for the quiet life, but it's not simple. They live outside of Philadelphia in a 31-room Tudor house on a 14-acre estate, complete with pool and a tennis court. With them is their teen-aged daughter Kelly.

Douglas said he doesn't think about the competition. "I know it's there," he said. "But, in the latest national Nielsen for syndicated shows we were No. 1. Dinah Shore was second and Griffin was third."

Often called a square because he doesn't drink, smoke or gamble, Douglas said: "I wish there were more squares like me. The world would be better."

Questions, answers about TV

By BETTELOU PETERSON
Knight News Wire

Q. What has happened to Carol Burnett? What will become of her next season when "Rich Man, Poor Man" takes over her time spot? K.J.

A. TV can't win. Everyone complains about reruns. CBS ditches Burnett reruns for new summer shows and still gets gripes. Bit of confusion, there on next fall, though. "RM, PM" will be Burnett's competitor on ABC at 10 p.m. Saturdays, same time she's on CBS.

Q. Please tell me if Grandpa Hughes of "As the World Turns" died in real life. They had such a lovely memorial service for him in the story. I cried. K.M.

A. Santos Ortega, who played Grandpa Hughes, died April 10 in Florida of an undisclosed ailment. He was 76 and had been ailing for some time. Ortega was one of the original members of the 23-year-old serial's cast and the producers decided to pay tribute on the air. It took two months to find a place the service would fit into the story line.

Q. There's a man who does commercials for the Kroger markets on TV. He looks just like the man who was the host of that lovely show, "The Girl in My Life." Whoever he is, he is very pleasant, even on a commercial. M.J.A.

A. Fred Holliday was selling groceries at the same stand before he hosted "Girl." He hoped the show would get him out of the supermarket but it didn't work out. No real grief, though. Selling is a better way to maximize his dollars.

Q. What happened to Melody Patterson? She was Wrangler Jane on "F Troop". Why hasn't she been making more movies? R.H.

A. Melody married James MacArthur of "Hawaii Five-O." MacArthur didn't want his wife in Hollywood working while he was in Hawaii working. So Melody gave up her career.

Q. I have a letter to send to "Sixty Minutes" but I can't find the azwess. J.H.

A. Sounds like you don't watch the show, then. Address is given each week during the letters section. Write: 257 W. 57th St., New York, N.Y., 10019.

Q. Have been watching "Donny and Marie" show regularly and wonder if you can tell me if they are man and wife. They surely are a charming couple. L.W.

A. I suppose there had to be someone, some place, who's never heard of the Osmond Brothers and sister Marie. For some reason, folks seem to find brother and sister acts hard to believe. Many still figure Richard and Karen Carpenter are married rather than brother and sister.

Q. My 4 1-2 year-old daughter is an avid fan of "Emergency." We plan to be in California this fall and she would like to see her favorites. Could we visit them at their studio? MRS. C.S.

A. You might be lucky. "Emergency" is made by Universal and Universal has studio tours. Could be you'd see some of the "Emergency" company on the lot or lunching in the studio commissary (you won't be in the same lunch room but public and staff restaurants share building and common lobby). You won't actually see "Emergency" being filmed (If the company's at work on the lot and not on location). Sound stages are off limits when actual filming's being done. Too many whispers can ruin a show.

Q. What happened to news reporter Sander Van Ocur? I haven't seen him for months. B.MG.

A. Van Ocur went over to the opposition. He writes about television, as reporter and critic, for a Washington newspaper.

Q. I heard that Johnny Carson has forbidden certain people to be guests on his "Tonight" show. One of them is Barbra Streisand. How does he dare do it? D.K.

A. It's his show. Carson's beef with Streisand is over a "no-show" a few months ago. She was booked to do "Tonight," but didn't appear; didn't excuse herself. Carson staff had to scramble for last minute fill-in. Carson said, "Who needs her?" Can't say I blame him.

Q. My friend insists that Dennis Weaver played Luke McCoy in "The Real McCoys." I'm sure Richard Crenna was in the show at the end. L.C.

A. At the beginning, too. He was the only Luke. Crenna's TV career started as crack voiced Walter Denton in "Our Miss Brooks," a role he did in the radio version, too. He went on to do the "McCoys," then played a politician in "Slattery's People." He took time out to do movies, produce TV shows in partnership with Danny Thomas. Next fall, he'll be back on TV in a new Norman Lear comedy, "All's Fair." He plays a conservative newspaper columnist who runs into a liberal lady photographer, played by Bernadette Peters.

Carter's TV $s to increase now

By LEE WINFREY
Knight News Wire

NEW YORK — Gerald Rafshoon created and distributed almost $3 million worth of television commercials for Jimmy Carter as the former Georgia governor marched successfully through the Presidential primaries.

Now, with Carter's anointment as the Democratic Presidential nominee, Rafshoon is already making plans to spend two or three times that much to put his client in the White House.

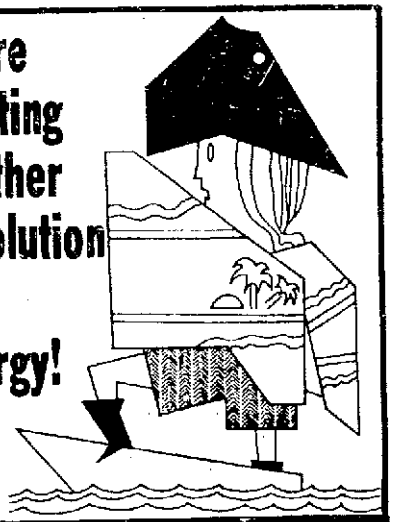

Rafshoon, 42, is president of Gerald Rafshoon Advertising, Inc., of Atlanta. He has directed Carter's TV, radio and print advertising for the past decade. He discussed future plans in an interview here.

Rafshoon said much of Carter's TV commercial approach can be planned and executed no matter whether President Ford or former California Gov. Ronald Reagan is the Republican nominee.

WHAT RAFSHOON calls the "positive Carter stuff" won't change. So this fall you can look for multiple images of Carter calling for reorganization of the federal government and overhaul of the tax system. Plus brisk and flowing footage of working man Carter striding through his farm fields and

The British Columbia nobody knows

By BOB SANDERS
Staff Writer

If you want to see the British Columbia nobody knows, take a turn across Canada's Yellowhead Route 16 from Prince Rupert, located on Kaien Island at the start of the inner waterway to Alaska, to Prince George, some 454 miles, or 726 Canadaian kilometers, to the east.

Of course one of the major problems with such a tour is getting to Prince Rupert in the first place, since it is some 946 miles, or 1,514 kilometers (Canada is in the process of converting to the metric system and by September, 1977, all road distances and speed limits will be in kilometers) north of Vancouver, which is some two and a half jet hours north of Long Beach.

But, if you can make it, it is certainly worth it.

On a recent one-week tour, the problem was neatly solved when we flew CP Air to Vancouver, and then by smaller plane on to the tiny town of Sansprit on the beautifully wooded Queen Charlotte Islands.

After a 40-minute "flight—see" over the islands, during which none of us could see anything because the double-paned windows on the DeHavilland Otter were all fogged up, we landed at Prince Rupert to start our trip by motorcoach.

ROUTE 16 begins by winding along the scenic Skeena River through some of the most beautiful countryside imaginable to the pretty little (16,000 population) town of Terrace.

If you visit Terrace be sure to take at least one meal at the picturesque Bavarian Inn and catch at least one of the routines of "Deenee," the exotic dancer at the pub in the Lakelse Motor Hotel. Deenee also sings in the hotel's cabaret later in the evening.

If you're interested in lava beds there's an hour and a half (one-way) side trip on a logging road north of the town, which our guide insisted was very interesting. If you're not interested in lava beds, skip it.

SCENIC BRIISH COLUMBIA ROUTE

FROM HAZELTON the route follows the Bulkley River through such exotically named towns as Smithers and Vanderhoof. Another 41-mile side trip took us to Stuart Lake, where old Fort St. James is being restored.

From Terrace the route turns north, still along the Skeena, to Hazelton and the restored Indian village of Ksan (pronounced "Kuhsand".

If you visit Ksan be sure to take the guided tour, since, without a guide, the village is just a series of totem poles outside Indian-type buildings. The guide takes you into the locked buildings and explains the tribal customs and artifacts contained therein.

Working from pictures taken of the fort in the 1890s and the remains of several of the actual buildings, the governments of Canada and British Columbia are cooperating in restoring the Hudson's Bay Company's early outpost to its 1890 heyday.

How they are going about it is the main attraction at this time.

After spending one night in the town of Prince George our bus turned south off Highway 16 (which continues on eastward through Jasper National Park and out of British Columbia) to visit Quesnel (pronounced Kwenel with the accent on the second syllable) and the restored goldrush city of Barkerville.

BARKERVILLE was named for Billy Barker, the man who struck gold there in August, 1862, and started the great Cariboo gold rush.

The city has been restored in authentic fashion, even to the signs in the windows of several residences reading, "Private Residence". A good lunch but no booze can be had at the uniquely named Wake Up Jake Saloon in the heart of town.

Highlight of the year in Barkerville is the annual Billy Barker Days festival in mid-July, when the town attempts to turn back the clock to the gold rush days with a staggering schedule of parades, rodeos, baseball and golf tournaments, gold pan throwing and beard growing contests, raft races and other such amusements.

All in all, British Columbia's Route 16 has a great deal to offer — if you have time to savor and enjoy it. Plan on at least two weeks to do the portion from Prince Rupert to Prince George.

Discover America by plane, train and bus

By BILL MacKAY
Ridder News Service

If the nation's far-flung travel industry has its way, this will be the summer you and your family "discover America" — or at least a portion of it.

Discover America is the Bicentennial year theme by which airlines, bus companies, Amtrak, travel agencies, resort areas, state tourist bureaus — seemingly everyone involved in transporting, housing, feeding and entertaining tourists — are trying to woo what they hope will be a record number of vacationers into getting up and going somewhere.

Package tours abound. A person can walk out of almost any travel agency bearing an armload of free folders, brochures and booklets picturing in full color vacation attractions in every corner of the land — from San Francisco's Chinatown, Yellowstone's Old Faithful and the ruins of the Alamo, to the colorful gardens of Mobile, Civil War battlefields in Pennsylvania and a solitary lighthouse on the rugged coast of Maine.

Amtrak and major bus lines are making it possible to tour the country by rail or highway for one flat payment. Until Sept. 16, Amtrak is selling 14-day ($250), 21-day ($325) and 30-day ($400) tickets, good for unlimited travel.

Continental Trailways, Greyhound and other bus companies are promoting one-month ($250) and two-month ($350) unlimited travel tickets that can be used interchangibly on the participating lines.

AIR TRAVELERS can take advantage of Bicentennial fares, discounted 30 per cent. To get the reduced rate, however, travelers must make their round-trip reservations at least 14 days in advance, pay for and pick up their tickets at least 10 days in advance and make their return flight not less than seven or more than 30 days from the date of departure.

Airlines are saving a certain number of Bicentennial fare seats on each flight, so it is important to make reservations well in advance, the earlier the better.

Getting information about where to go and what it can cost can be a king-size undertaking. Travel agencies can be a big help. Their business is travel — where to go, how to get there and what it costs. Travel representatives know about the many package deals, group tours and other special vacation plans that can save you money.

A travel representative's services cost the traveler nothing. The agency receives its money from commissions paid by airlines, bus lines, Amtrak, hotels, resorts, rent-a-car agencies and others.

TRY ONE of the off-the-beaten-path national parks. The U.S. National Park Service would like to see vacationers using hundreds of little-known parks whose names do not have the notoriety of Yosemite, Yellowstone, Grand Canyon and Glacier.

A booklet issued by the park service, "Visit a Lesser-Used Park," lists 132 parks. It can be had for 70 cents by writing Consumer Information Center, Dept. 96, Pueblo, Colo. 81099.

And you can get information about the big, famous parks by writing the superintendent of each: Glacier, West Glacier, Mont. 59936; Yellowstone, Wyo. 82190; Grand Teton, Moose, Wyo. 83012; Grand Canyon, Ariz. 86023; and Carlsbad Caverns, 3225 National Parks Highway, Carlsbad, N.M. 88220.

Almost all states have tourist information bureaus where one can write for free information. The public library has a complete list.

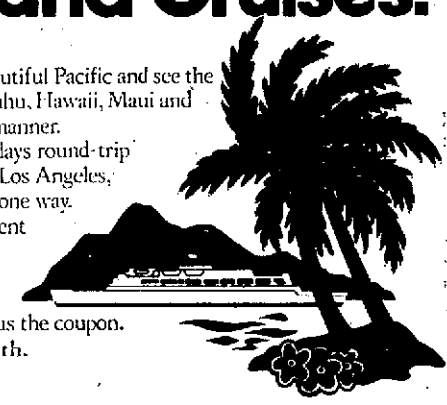

Baja air service from L.B.

With AeroMexico no longer serving passengers from Los Angeles and Tiajuana to Mulege and Loreto in Baja California, Baja Airlines, a Long Beach firm, becomes the only scheduled carrier flying to the two popular resorts on Mexico's Sea of Cortez.

Departing from Long Beach Airport, the flights also pick up vacation-bound tourists at San Diego's Lindbergh Field, flying five times weekly to many off-beat destinations in Baja California and Northern Sonora.

Known as the nation's only international commuter airline, Baja has headquarters at the Long Beach Airport terminal, 4100 Donald Douglas Drive, which features public auto parking at minimal daily rates.

TROPICAL BEACHES HAVE HAZARDS

Little known national park

By PHIL GRUIS
Ridder News Service

It's a land of pink and green, deep canyons and soaring monoliths, darting lizards, gnarled pinon and juniper trees and extravagant cactus blossoms.

It's a land where bobcats prowl the rocky draws and a handful of bison browse. A land where little water flows and relatively few tourists seem to venture.

Colorado National Monument, located just west of Grand Juntion in west central Colorado, was first the home of dinosaurs, then prehistoric basketmakers, and later the Ute Indians before it became the domain of tourists.

Today, most visitors motor along the 22-mile Rim Rock Drive, looking at the weather-hewn rock against the checkered background of fertile Grand Valley and the Book Cliffs to the north.

Tumultuous geological history is on display, and park naturalists will tell you about it in nightly talks near the campground and information center.

They'll tell you that as the billion-year-old (Precambrain) crystalline rocks gradually weathered away, the area was covered with stream and lake deposits and shifting sand dunes.

They'll tell you of the upthrust of the Rocky Mountains, of the cutting away of soft sandstone by the elements, and of the towering monoliths topped with harder stone which linger still in the deep canyons.

And they'll tell that the weathering process is still at work, fashioning a new and changing face for the monument.

But the best way to experience the area is on foot. A few carefully maintained trails drop sharply from Rim Rock Drive down into the canyons where the rush of traffic can't be heard.

San Francisco

Summer in the sun: "We are going to be at Dorado Beach in Puerto Rico. Late August. What about weather? How to dress?"

That was a VERY dressy layout when I was there. I mean Laurance Rockefeller's Dorado Beach Hotel.

You aren't ALLOWED on the tennis courts unless you wear WHITE tennis clothes. Jacket AND tie in the dining room. Expensive. Grand food.

The weather: Sorry to say you are in the middle of the Caribbean rainy season. But the rain comes in bunches. Like somebody emptying buckets for a half hour — usually afternoons.

Then it stops. You get plenty of sun.

It's also the season for mosquitoes and the tiny biting no-see-ums. Carry a spray can of repellent. Mornings and evenings are their biting times. They prefer the ankles.

Your room will have a spray can for murdering them. Before bedtime, spray around the edges of the ceiling. Particularly in the upper folds of the window drapes.

"There's a jellyfish that stings you in Hawaii?"

It's transpaprent with a purple tint. I've seen one — only once. I've only known ONE person who got stung. That was at another Rockefeller place — the Mauna Kea Beach Hotel on the Big Island.

Divers rub on a paste of meat tenderizer. They say the same thing that's in papaya draws the stinging substance out.

Hawaiians rub on mashed raw papaya itself. There's always papaya some place nearby in the islands.

Some mosquitos in Hawaii near the beaches but not many. Repellent keeps them off. The Chinese papa-mama stores sell coils of punk that burn slowly. The smoke or smell seems to keep them away.

In French Canada, my boy who was 8 began to raise fearful bites. I sprayed the poor child for three days while he got more and more welts. Then I found out he had chickenpox.

"Being divorced with two small children, I'd like to take them on a warm summer vacation that would still give me some social life."

The beach at Waikiki is the best place in my opinion. It's wall-to-wall high-rise, true. But that puts more traffic on the beach. It's a big singles beach.

And there's something casual about beach meetings. They don't signify anything more than conversation and you can walk away from it if you like.

Or you can work it up to a lunch. A noon drink at the outdoor beach bar at the Royal Hawaiian gives you a full circle view of the loners.

"We charged some glass in Italy to a credit card (Diners). The glass has never arrived. We write and the shop doesn't answer. Now what do we do?"

If you haven't paid Diners Club yet, don't. I'm sure they can recover even if they've paid the shop. If you HAVE paid Diners, write "Customer Service." See if they'll get you some action.

Catch a Fairwind to the Caribbean.

Take a National Airlines/Sitmar Air-Sea cruise.

You can spend 7, 10 or 11 days aboard the Liberian-registered TSS Fairwind. Choose the cruise that's right for you, and visit such wonderful ports of call as San Juan, St. Thomas, Montego Bay, Antigua and Curacao.

Your holiday begins with a National flight direct to Miami and includes everything: round-trip airfare, transfers, your cabin, 4 sumptuous meals daily, a wide range of shipboard activities and nightly entertainment.

If you've never taken a Caribbean cruise before, the Fairwind is a good way to begin. It's larger than most cruise liners, for one thing. So there's more to do and more room to do it in. And with 54 chefs lending their talents to every meal, the food alone would make the trip worthwhile.

What's more, you have up to 30 days to return home. So you can stop over in Miami Beach, New Orleans or Walt Disney World for no additional airfare.

A COLORFUL TILE sculptured mural covers a full wall in the student lounge area at Braille Institute in Los Angeles. Student Agnes Aslanian "reads" one part of story the mural tells. Its story is one of hope.

Think of the things you do every day without even thinking. Dialing a telephone, for example. Or counting money. Or pouring yourself a glass of milk.

Now try doing these same things blindfolded.

Pretty difficult, isn't it?

As a sighted person, of course, you always have the option of taking the blindfold off.

Others aren't so lucky. Their sight loss is real and permanent and their choice is to learn to function despite their handicap or remain forever dependent.

"Our role is helping people overcome dependence," said Braille Institute spokeswoman Dorothy Coleman. "From the moment a person first comes here we encourage him or her to become self-sufficient.

"The first steps towards independence are never easy," Mrs. Coleman emphasized. "But with help our students find they can do things they never thought they could do. They find it's possible to be independent."

A 57-year-old community service organization, Braille Institute has over the years developed programs designed to ease the trauma of the first steps towards independence.

BLIND STUDENTS learn to make beds and fix meals again, learn to walk unassisted with the use of a white cane, learn to communicate via Braille and touch typing.

Over the years Braille Institute has also attempted to create a physical environment to encourage the visually handicapped in their journey to independence. That effort is paying off as Braille Institute's new Los Angeles center becomes a reality.

"The architects who worked on our Los Angeles quarters lived under blindfolds for several days in order to experience first-hand the stimuli which affect those with sight loss," Mrs. Coleman said. "They knew, for example, how important sound is to the visually handicapped and how a person with sight loss might orient himself by what he feels under his feet.

"Their knowledge was put to use in the design of the new facility. As a result, I think we've got a center here that is not only pleasing to the sighted world but that is a tremendous boost to those who suffer sight loss."

The new buildings, located along the 700 block of North Vermont Avenue, are part of a five-phase construction program which began in 1968. Phase three of the program, the Sight Center, was completed in May. Other construction, completed in 1970 and 1974 respectively, house the Braille Institute Press and library and the Institute's education program. Phases four and five will convert an outdated auditorium into additional classroom space and will permit the creation of a garden for visually handicapped students to enjoy between classes and activities.

"Our old quarters were pretty dismal," said Mrs. Coleman, referring to the series of remodeled 50-year-old storefronts which have been torn down make room for the new center. "The passageways connecting the buildings were narrow and dark and it was difficult for many of our people to get around.

"The design of our new quarters takes into account the fact that visually handicapped people often need more room to move in. And there's plenty of light, natural light whenever possible."

TO THE UNITIATED, an unusual and seemingly extraneous feature of the new Braille center is the architects' use of color in decorating the interior. Why bother with color when most of those who use the center can't appreciate it? According to Mrs. Coleman, this attitude is one of the many misconceptions the sighted world has about blindness.

"Almost 90 per cent of the legally blind have some perception of light and dark and can pick up some color, especially orange. The use of light and dark colors on the walls and floors can aid a blind person in determining where he is.

"The fountain is another thing that helps the visually handicapped orient themselves to their location," said Mrs. Coleman during a tour of the student lounge area. "To us, a fountain is just a pleasant touch, something nice to listen to. To someone who has lost his sight,

At this point in time, cliches gain immortality

By JIM GALLAGHER

In this day and age, when honor is being paid to the 1,001 forces that have shaped American life and made this nation great, Lawrence Paros is beating the drum for an unsung hero, the Great American Cliche.

"Without cliches," Paros declared, "Americans never could have blazed a trail across a rugged continent. There never would have been a House Divided, a Union Dissolved.

"Cliches stood with us in our darkest hours, during the deepest throes of the Depression. If it weren't for cliches, how could we have had a chicken in every pot?

"Cliches established us as the bastion of democracy, the hope of the Free World. They took us to the far-flung corners of the globe, but they always brought our boys home. Without cliches, we never would have been able to purge the nation's sores and bind the nation's wounds. And, of course, cliches always have provided the fresh, new, dynamic leadership that has enabled America to get on the move and make this nation work again."

In our personal lives, Paros continued, "cliches see us through thick and thin. They're always there in the crunch. They're a person's best friend — they used to be just a man's best friend. And they tide you through the trials of adolescence. They'll bring you joy and solace in the twilight of your years. The Great American Cliche — an idea whose time has come."

Paros, 42, is the author of the new book entitled — what else? — "The Great American Cliche" (Workman Publishing Co., $3.95). It's a compendium of all the trite little sayings that have become a part and parcel of American life.

ARRANGED INTO such categories as "America Comes of Age" and "America Comes Clean and Stays Healthy," the cliches are cleverly illustrated by the most familiar pictures you've ever seen. Paros even has included a photo of Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) ("the ultimate cliche of an American politician," he explained) sitting next to and thoroughly dwarfed by a giant, stuffed Snoopy.

"Ordinarily you can't judge a book by its cover," Paros said, "but this one is different."

On it are an American flag, a little woman and mom's apple pie a la mode. Paros even has supplied his own reviews, which include "A book with a message," "The definitive study," and, "If you can read only one book, read this one."

A former college teacher — "I've labored in the vineyards of education lo these many years" — Paros said the idea for the book "just came to me one day like a bolt out of the blue." If it sells like hot cakes, he added, grinning from ear to ear, he stands to "clean up and make a bundle."

According to Paros, there are several types of cliches:

— Old maxims like "A stitch in time saves nine," which "capture a very difficult idea and convey it precisely in an imaginative and creative way." As time goes by, however, they become so commonplace that people no longer pay attention to the thought behind them.

— Tired metaphors, like "Getting down to brass tacks." Many started out as moving phrases in literature ("Parting is such sweet sorrow"), but they've long since become corny and lost their impact.

— Snipets from commercials that have slipped into the language, like "Good to the last drop" and "the real thing."

— Phrases and expressions from specialized fields, like "the letter of the law" and "a whole new ball game."

— Everyday sayings like "I gave at the office" or "Keep the faith, baby."

— "Weasel words," meant not to convey information but to conceal it, to confuse and mislead people. The Vietnam War supplied lots of these, Paros said: "Winding down the war," "the light at the end of the tunnel," "We had to destroy the village to save it," and the Green Beret phrase, "termination with extreme prejudice," which means to kill someone.

'Education' series by KOCE-TV

"Education," a three-part series which focuses on the problems, the financing, the philosophies and the responsibilities of education will be examined on "Focus," Monday, at 7:30 p.m. on KOCE-TV, Channel 50.

The first "Education" program will feature the results of an education survey conducted in Orange County.

"In general, our poll found a wide desparity between the public view of education and the view held by most education experts," said program host Paul Cabbell.

CABBELL will also interview radical educator Jerry Farber, a professor of English at San Diego State University and author of "Student as Nigger." The question of where the power in education actually lies with teachers, administrators or students will be discussed by Farber.

Jan Flory, a reporter for "Education," will present a film report on three types of alternative schools—free schools, open classroom schools and fundamental schools.

Classes of '53, '76 scrutinized, analyzed

"Same Pomp, Different Circumstances," an NBC News special examining two graduation classes from the same Redwood City, Calif. high school — the Class of '76 and the Class of '53 — and how they differ in terms of values, perceptions, goals and behavior, will be presented Wednesday, July 28 (10-11 p.m.), on NBC TV, Ch. 4.

In comparing today's 17-year-olds with yesterday's — who have turned 40 — the program will show how our society changes. It will deal meaningfully with questions that trouble virtually everyone: Where are we going? What's happening to our values?

Producer Mike Gavin, himself a member of the '53 class of Sequoia High School, keyed the program to an examination of two generations who will share their high school experiences and reminisce about growing up American style.

"We did not attempt to profile each member of the classes," Gavin said, "but selected representatives from several subgroups that are as identifiable today as they were in 1953. They say you can't go home again — but I was a member of the class of '53 at Sequoia High and have a special feeling where its members are concerned."

STUDYING THE CLASS of '76, Gavin and his crew filmed on- and off-campus stories ranging from individual profiles and interviews to activities such as this year's graduation ceremonies and the dance.

Gavin filmed mini-profiles of selected '53 graduates, and NBC brought almost the entire class together June 25 to film it at a gala reunion party.

To show how today's graduates differ from those of '53, Gavin said several basic issues were explored:

"We compared how they felt about their jobs and career objectives; the value of their respective educations; marriage and divorce; the new morality in sex and business; their drinking habits; how they related to the drug scene; their religious beliefs; how they felt about their parents and children; and how they felt about America and its leaders."

The special will feature also vintage film of major events from the 1940s to the present, stills and home movies of the class of '53 and music from the generations.

The BIBLE Says

IS THERE NO STANDARD OF AUTHORITY?

Recently the Independent Press-Telegram's editor "repented" of having ever printed any letters or articles stating that Jehovah's Witnesses (so called) or Mormons were not Christians. In fact, Mr. Clutter has given his sanction to every person who even claims to be religious. However, I am not as concerned with what Mr. Clutter has to say as I am with what God has to say. But, his article did bring to mind a number of questions that I would like for each of our readers to consider.

1. Is there no standard of authority in religion? Your answer I am sure would be, "Yes, there is a standard. The Bible."

2. Since the Bible is our standard of authority, where could Mr. Clutter, or any other person, read in the Bible that you may believe whatever you wish to believe regarding salvation and worship? If one cannot read from the Bible (and especially the New Testament which we are living under today) that which he is teaching and practicing in religion, there is but one other alternative. It is from man and not from God. If we are following the teachings of man and not God, then we should consider what God had to say about that.

"This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me. But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men" (Matthew 15:8-9). That's what Jesus said about teaching the commandments of men. I'll take Jesus instead of the IPT editor. Again, the apostle Paul said in Gal. 1:8 "But though we, or an angel from heaven, (which is what the Mormons claim, JTS) preach any other gospel unto than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." Also, John said in II John 1:9, "Whosoever goeth onward and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son." And finally, read Revelation 22:18-19 regarding adding to and taking from the Word of God.

If two people differ on the length of something, how do we settle the matter? Measure it with a yardstick. If we differ on religious matters how will we settle it? By using God's yardstick — The Bible. The Bible, not man, is right.

Glad you asked that!

COMEDIAN Groucho Marx — one question was a stumper.

THE LATE Winston Churchill — not a happy teen-ager.

VETERAN actor Van Johnson — pendulum returning to family films in his opinion.

"Kojak ain't no hero," Telly Savalas says, reverting to the slang of his youth on the teeming streets of New York's East Side. "He don't like to run up the stairs and chase the bad guy. He's going to approach violence and he's going to use his intelligence. He's going to use his cunning in order to avoid an ugly, violent situation. As a last resort, he's going to use his fists or a weapon. I like that. That kind of responsibility I understand.

"I don't like 'heroes' even when they represent the good side. Kojak is a guy, 'Hey, man, you know, let's try to avoid it.' He'll walk away twice. Maybe not three times. But Telly, will too. I don't like heroes. I don't like guys who are quick — and I don't like portrayals that kids are quick to emulate.

"When I got into the series," Telly continues, "I didn't think that television needed another super cop. I thought they needed a guy, though, who knew the name of the little people, who would kick a hooker in the fanny and send her home instead of lock her up. Just tell the truth. That documentary approach, I think, is what made Kojak a success. His acceptance with law enforcement officers all over the world leads me to believe that he is a true representative of law enforcement everywhere.

"I kiss my brother. I kiss anybody. I say: 'Here, I love you. Okay? We've had tragic experiences together. Here, we've reached a mature stage in our life. Let's kiss and reestablish with a physical gesture, at least, that we love each other.' Can't do it with a handshake. Some people can — I can't . . .

"I have an uncle who's been a psychiatrist for 50 years. Once he was head of the psychiatric division of Bellevue. He told me the only defense he ever had against the logic of madness was love! I'm going to write, direct and star in a movie about a psychiatrist, specifically my uncle the psychiatrist," he told Jeanne Wolf. "Without the use of vulgarity, without any shock appeal, I'm going to make a movie like 'The Exorcist' look like 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.'"

With all his success and fame, is Telly an insecure man? No. He's not insecure, just realistic. "Don't depend on anything," is his credo. "Don't secure the future, just play with the present. Because life has a way of changing everything all around. And be prepared for that!"

Q: Was "Professor" Irwin Corey kidding about the 600-pound woman who lost more than 500 pounds on a diet? — Marilyn Friedman, Miami Beach, Fla.

A: Yes. What the kooky comic said, straightfaced, was: "I know a woman who dropped from 600 down to 80 pounds. Including the coffin they carried her off in!"

Q: What kind of teen-ager was Winston Churchill? — M.L.W., Milwaukee.

A: "In retrospect," he once said, "those years formed not only the least agreeable, but the only barren and unhappy period of my life . . . A time of discomfort, restrictions, worries and purposeless monotony."

Q: What does the former "boy next door," Van Johnson, think about Hollywood's return to the filming of love stories? — Antoinette S., Springfield, Mass.

A: Veteran Van's view makes sense: "The pendulum had to swing back sooner or later to the good old-fashioned love story, the good old musical," he says. "I think people are getting awfully tired of those bare behinds and those four-letter words."

Q: Didn't actress Susan George write and record a song based on her broken romance with singer Jack Jones? — Ms. Cathy Bowlen, Pittsburgh.

A: Yes, "Save Me for a Rainy Day." "I thought about Jack and me as I wrote it," Susan recalls. "It was such a happy time, I wanted to be with him always." But, though the flame has flickered, it hasn't burned out. "Perhaps," she told a reporter, "we will go back together. There hasn't been anyone since we parted." When asked why she hadn't made any films lately, Miss George explained: "I'm waiting for a role that will put me in pretty clothes. In the last 10 films I've made, I've either been nude, pregnant or raped. I was beginning to develop such a complex I was afraid to go out of the house alone."

Q: Has Groucho Marx ever revealed which question on his long-running quiz show ("You Bet Your Life") he repeated most frequently? — Bob Strong, Brooklyn.

A: Yes. The question he must have asked a hundred times was: "Who's buried in Grant's Tomb?" The correct answer is nobody's buried in Grant's Tomb. People are not buried in tombs — at least not in the sense of being planted six feet under. They are entombed above ground!

ACTOR Telly Savalas — waxes eloquent about Kojak series and his role in it.

ZANY COMIC Irwin Corey — setting record straight on "fat" joke.

Scant praise for summer rash of new movies

rex reed

Vacation time is near, the kids are home from school, folks are heading for the resorts, the Bicentennial is in progress, crowds are occupied with other leisure pursuits and less in need of a break from dull routine. It's the worst time imaginable for a flood of new movies.

But Hollywood is releasing them anyway, in a desperate attempt to fumble for the nation's attention in the summer heat. This is going to be a terrible summer for movies, but if you're trapped in the urban traffic or watching the sewage pile up on the American beaches, you might be interested in some of the new movies fighting for attention:

"Buffalo Bill and the Indians" is the latest product from the factory of Robert Altman, a director who turns out movies faster than gerbils procreate. I haven't been much of an Altman fan, but I found a great deal to admire in this rowdy, Wild West show that re-creates beautifully, with sober attention and detail, a time and a place that formed a national conscience.

Altman has more on his mind than a remake of "Annie Get Your Gun," although this movie about the same characters is often just as entertaining, even without the Irving Berlin songs and Betty Hutton. He uses the show business conceit of the Wild West show to illustrate the ways in which the American public has always been fed a pack of lies instead of badly needed truths about the events that shaped our history.

"America's National Family" is what Buffalo Bill's show called itself. Altman then proceeds to show us what that family was like.

Just as we've fallen for the conditioned lies of our politicians (sugar placebos that led to Vietnam, Watergate and the current chaos that causes many to feel repulsed by the Bicentennial and laugh cynically at the formalities of the forthcoming Presidential election), we've also fallen like a load of bricks for the lies handed down by show business.

BUFFALO BILL Cody is revealed as a drunken old imbecile who spouted meaningless homilies like, "The last thing a man wants to do is what he does." The movie is filled with such riddles, passing as philosophy from the cracker barrel, and they sound alarmingly like the stuff we've been hearing for the past 20 years from our politicians.

Also, Cody is a phony, a total fraud, a womanizer and a lecher, and a profane, foul-mouthed bigot — filled with preening vanity in public, afraid of birds in private. He was the product of press agents and the dime-novel biographer who invented him and then turned him into a national hero.

I am reasonably sure Cody was the bogus hypocrite Altman and his co-screenwriter Alan Rudolph have made him seem in this movie, but then along comes Paul Newman in a white wig to play the role.

Newman is something of a national hero as well, but as everyone knows, he's the total opposite of Cody. He's a family man, a kind and decent citizen, the pillar of his community, a beloved husband and father, a carrier of torches for liberal causes, a champion of the underprivileged, a man who votes liberal and even wrote campaign speeches for Eugene McCarthy.

Newman wants to broaden his horizons by playing anti-heroes the way Hollywood's newcomers are winning new fans playing maniacs. He's a fine actor, but we are always aware he's acting. It almost wrecks the picture.

The Wild West show was the forgery that massaged the ego of a lot of money-grubbing phonies and perpetuated the spreading of lies about how the West was won. Along comes Sitting Bull, who rarely speaks but tells the history of courage and truth with the lines in his face.

Annie Oakley's conscience is a rare show of humanity at a time when rudeness and stupidity were interpreted as manly perception, but Sitting Bull is mainly used in the show as a further attempt to promote racism and fabricate cheap show business lies about the supremacy of the white man in the Indian campaigns.

Sitting Bull won't lie down and play dead. It almost drives Cody to a nervous breakdown. In the end, there's a fantasy meeting between the dead Indian and the still-victorious star Cody in which Newman tells the truth about what happened for the benefit of the movie audience.

The scene comes too late and deadens the movie while simultaneously assuming the pretentious reach of Shaw's final confrontation between the Dauphin and the ghost of Joan of Arc.

Altman doesn't seem to know how to end the movie, so it just fades off into more shooting and stampeding displays of cowboys and Indians. But the message is clear and so is the warning. Something of the truth has been stripped away from the myths that sabotaged it through the years.

"Buffalo Bill and the Indians" is a very untidy film — the sky is yellow, the people are yellow, the ground is yellow, the actors all look like they're suffering from malaria, the whole thing is too long — yet it has an impact. Burt Lancaster, Geraldine Chaplin, Joel Grey, Kevin McCarthy, Harvey Keitel are all fine as the people who either created the monster or helped shaped his legend for the falsified history books.

Altman has made a different kind of movie and handed us a new, complicated way of looking at movies in general. His films don't always work, but when they do, they last longer than the lies they expose and the consciences they haunt.

PAUL NEWMAN is Buffalo Bill Cody in Robert Altman's new movie about the Wild West, which is one of the summer films reviewed by Rex Reed.

"LOGAN'S RUN" takes place in the 23rd century, where the world is hermetically sealed in a plastic pleasure dome where computers tell time, birth babies, control the weather and keep the peace. There's only one catch. Everyone dies at the age of 30.

Michael York plays a policeman who wants to live beyond 30, so he tries to escape. Chased by X-ray guns through underground pipelines, tunnels, aquariums and frozen cold storage grottoes, he finally emerges to find himself in Washington, D. C., where the Lincoln Memorial is covered with vines and the only man left in the world is Peter Ustinov, an ancient hermit who talks like Mr. Magoo and roams the ruins of the U.S. Senate with a population of howling cats.

"Logan's Run" is long on special effects, and short on logic, and it isn't helped by wooden performances. But there are enough futuristic space suits, robots and laser beams to keep even the most demanding science fiction fans happy.

It isn't clear at the end, when the citizens of the future meet the remnants of the past, if history will repeat itself, but I did spot one extra in the crowd who looked alarmingly like Richard Nixon.

"THE BIG BUS" is the latest in Hollywood's suicidal attempt to parody its own movies. "Murder By Death" was a parody, or spoof, of detective haunted house movies. "Blazing Saddles" was a sendup of westerns. "The Big Bus" is a parody of disaster flicks like "The Hindenburg," "The Poseidon Adventure" and "Airport."

It's not a very good parody, either. Movie stars in all the seats is no longer enough.

At that moment

Done...

Who thought of it first is beyond knowing. It had been the dream of so many so long: a railroad stretching across the land from sea to sea; a continent at last united; a nation's destiny made truly manifest with a bond of steel. With the Civil War ended, the dream could become a promise.

Starting from Sacramento, Calif., the Central Pacific, with a labor force of 6,000 Chinese immigrants, pushed eastward through the white-crowned Sierras, the parched desert. Starting from Omaha, Neb., the Union Pacific with its force of adventurous, brawling Irishmen, pushed westward across the boundless prairies, the torturous Rockies. After five years of great striving, of sweating and cursing and dying, the tracks met . . .

Monday, May 10, 1869, is bright and chilly at a place in the high wilderness north of Great Salt Lake designated Promontory Point, Utah. A skim of ice covers puddles and a stiff wind tears at a small American flag atop a telegraph pole near a gap in the tracks where the last two rails will be placed. Nearby, 14 tent saloons advertise potables with names as lusty as their kick — Red Cloud, Blue Run, Red Jacket. Business is brisk. A few settlers straggle in on horseback. Three companies of U.S. Infantry, en route to San Francisco, show up with a band. All is ready.

Just before noon, shrill whistles, one from the east, one from the west, announce that the trains are approaching: on the western track, the Central Pacific's locomotive, the Jupiter, with its funnel stack; on the eastern track, the Union Pacific's locomotive No. 119. They stop. A polished laurel tie is put in place with holes pre-drilled to receive two spikes, one of California gold, the other of Nevada silver. The silver spike is fixed so that when it is tapped in place it will close a telegraph circuit and a single word will flash across wires from coast to coast: "Done."

A team of Irish railhands swings one rail across the waiting ties; a team of Chinese, in clean blue jackets, swings the other. They slam iron spikes in place to hold the rails to the ties — all except one, the laurel tie. From the western train, Central Pacific director Leland Stanford strides forward with a silver-plated sledge hammer; from the eastern train steps Union Pacific vice president Thomas C. Durant. Both make brief speeches. A minister offers a prayer. Stanford and Durant stand over the laurel tie, smile, take up their sledges and drive home the silver and the gold spikes. Done.

After the spike driving ceremony, a photographer, Andrew J. Russell, asked the two engineers of the railroads to step out front and shake hands. Samuel S. Montague of the Central Pacific and Grenville M. Dodge of the Union Pacific posed, hands clasped, and a moment in history was frozen on Russell's fragile glass negative. After the photo, champagne flowed, along with the Red Jacket and Blue Run, and inevitably, souvenir hunters carved up no fewer than six railroad ties for keepsake slivers. The laurel tie, along with the ceremonial spikes, had been safely removed.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Bicentennial year goes on. And on. And on.

carolyn mcdowell

SAW PAUL CHASTAIN the other day. Paul has several titles on several Bicentennial Committees, locally and in Los Angeles. I asked him if he was glad it (the Bicentennial) was all over. He informed me in no uncertain terms that the celebration has just begun. In fact, it will probably go on until 1988 (or was it '89?)

He must have been right because the Assistance League chose a Bicentennial theme for its annual Medallion Tea honoring the debutantes of 1976.

The girls, daughters and granddaughters of League members, were presented with engraved gold medallions by their mothers in a setting addorned with white stock, blue bachelor buttons and red carnations.

Nancy Lough, Mother-Deb chairlady, introduced the girls and their mothers to guests at League House.

Mothers and their daughters were Barbara Bettison and Cynthia Ann, Gayle Harris and Lynn Brandom, Kathy Cleveland and Bobette, Dorothy Kayajanian and Linda, Melva Miller and Melissa, Lou Palmer and Sandra and Gay Steuber and Tonya Jo.

Betty Wulfsberg was in charge of tea arrangements. Her helpers were Claire Ludlum, Pat Lynch, Jane McFadden, Pat Wilkinson, Mary Alice Braly, Pat Brenner and Marie DeNoyelles.

Also Betty Fraser, Beverly Gardner, Carol Hagen, Marilyn Kimble, Lillian McDowell, Marge Miller, Mary Lou Nicolai, Judy Romeyn, Laverne Sanderson, Evelyn Sullivan and Penny Thorup.

Pre-ball parties (the presentation ball is July 24) have kept the debs busy all summer.

Kick off party for the season was a salad luncheon at the home of Dutch and Syl Miller hosted by 1975 debs in honor of 1976 debs.

Next on the list was a beach party in Huntington Beach for debs and stags.

Gay Steuber's home was the setting for the traditional waltz night. Flo Brooks was on hand to teach dads and debs the waltz which will begin the dancing at the ball.

Then the gals and stags jumped into blue jeans and straw hats for an old fashioned hay ride.

It was bathing suit time back at the Steubers for a pool party.

The debs will get down to serious business this week with rehearsal in the Grand Salon aboard Her Majesty followed by dinner at International City Club. Corky Jenkins is in charge of arrangements for the evening.

Escorts to various events and at the ball are Scott Nason, Larry Oleson, Joseph Molina, Alex Mente, Michael Peters, Bradley Wardman and Patrick Davis.

POLY HIGH SCHOOL Class of 1966 needs help in a hurry.

They have planned a reunion for the Monte Carlo Room of the Newporter Inn Aug. 21.

BUT they are missing 700 grads.

If you are among the missing, hurry and get your name to Jerry Swanson, 3918 Country Club Drive, 90807. Deadline is Aug. 7.

Other committee members are Jan Heggeness Swanson, Linda Randall Sheline, Rich DeCoudres, Jon Severson, Jennifer Lee, Judy Shutts DeCoudres, Jill Davis Landis, Chuck Moore, Dora Jalomo Rivera, Kathy Hausman Browning, Sue Linscott Westberg and Patty Oehlman Coleman.

A HAIL AND FAREWELL President's Party was enjoyed by members and wives of Long Beach Rotary. The Hail was for incoming President Bill George, there with his wife, Mary Eva. The Farewell was to Jack Dalton retiring president and his wife, Helen.

Pre-party-party took place at the home of Don and Shirley Coscarelli where 170 guests adjusted attitudes before moving on to the Golden Sails Inn for dinner, dancing and a novel skit.

At center stage were the old and about-to-be-presidents. The script called for Jack to give Bill all kinds of do's and don'ts for the upcoming term.

Then the two exchanged pins. Instead of presenting a gavel, Rotarians of Our Town pass along a diamond president's pin.

Custom was started several years ago by then-president, Harry Aggers.

In charge of arrangements for the party were Dr. George Gehring and wife, Joan, and Phil Lockwood and Jean.

THINGS YOU MIGHT never know if you didn't read Socially Speaking...or haven't been to Tokyo recently.

Mary Gray went there with Don and Helen Hodges of Newport Beach.

They were not only mystified but horrified when the customs people subjected them to — you should pardon the expression — body searches.

The travelers got the impression that officials were looking for guns being smuggled in to the country. Can't you just picture gals smuggling guns in bras or girdles?

The rest of their journey was trouble free. They took in Taiwan, Singapore and a cruise to Indonesia among other exotic places in the mysterious East.

KEITH AND BETH Utterback spent their European vacation concentrating on Switzerland, Germany, romantic Vienna and the Alps.

Only mishap of their trip was a missed connection in New York which caused a panic because Paul and Jean Williamson were to greet them at LAX. The plane got in here just before dawn.

VERNE AND CORKEY Jenkins and Howard and Maxine Riggins flew to Canada for the maiden voyage of the Cunard Line's Adventurer.

DR. ART AND RUTH Evelev dined on filet mignon at 8:30 a.m. Gourmet meal was served on a jet flight to Canada where they took the Inland Passage cruise.

The Evelevs crossed paths (gangplanks?) with other Long Beachers Dr. Don and Mary Cruse and Dr. Bob and Martha Schumacher.

Women are asking

'My shoulders slump, blades are sharp as wings, collarbones jut out leaving cup-like hollows. Help!'

By REBA & BONNIE CHURCHILL

Shoulder and collarbone figure faults are exposed in today's fashions. Just check the new evening wear for fall and you'll discover more strapless designs than ever before.

Fortunately, the physical conditioner we interviewed admitted, "Help is only an exercise away. For more shoulder symmetry, wrap a bath towel under the shoulder blades, cross it at the chest, and grasp the ends of the terry. Take a deep breath, simultaneously squaring shoulders and pushing hands against body. Repeat four times.

"This routine warms the circulation to more vigorous action. Next, sit with back and hips against a wall. Extend arms in a 'hold up' position. Let elbows remain close to the waist, and back of hands level with shoulders.

"Gradually extend arms up the wall until they are in a full stretch. Return to original pose. Raise and lower hands 10 times.

"Bony collarbones seem to 'fill out' when an exercise pattern is practiced. However, always get your doctor's okay before beginning any workouts."

As the conditioner explained, "One of my favorite exercises begins by standing tall (facing a wall). Body should be an arm's width away, palms positioned flat against surface. Hands are at shoulder level with fingers pointing toward each other. Lean forward, as if trying to touch shoulders to hands. Rehearse 10 times. Remember to keep back straight and chin elevated. Your mirror should show the improvement."

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

Tax U.N. pension

jacob smith

DEAR MR. SMITH: Is my pension from the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund subject to taxation? I have been paying income tax on this pension since I retired from the service of the United Nations because I have been told that it is considered just like any private pension plan, except for the portion contributed by me during the time I was working for the organization. — C.S.R.

There is a federal income tax exemption for compensation from the United Nations, but only if the employee is not a U.S. citizen, and has not waived this immunity. In 1956, IRS issued a formal ruling stating that this exemption does not extend to former employees who receive retirement pensions.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I was a retired widower, but remarried in 1974. We live in a community property state. My wife is employed and earns about $16,000 per year. Prior to my marriage, I was entitled to the Retirement Income Credit; after my marriage, according to IRS Publication 524, one-half my wife's salary is considered my earned income and therefore I am no longer entitled to Retirement Income Credit. Is this based on IRS regulation, ruling, or a court decision?

If one-half of my wife's earnings are considered my earned income, should not the Social Security taxes paid on it be credited to my Social Security account? If not, how do they justify different treatment by departments of the same government? — S.S.

The 50/50 splitting of community salaries, and Social Security benefits for figuring the retirement income credit, is based chiefly on a formal Treasury Department regulation, although there are also many court decisions and rulings on the fine points. In some situations this splitting can be helpful.

The rule is based on the concept that one-half of your wife's salary belongs to you. Now, if in your particular state, and with your facts, you are not legally entitled to any part of your wife's salary, then you should make no entry for "earned income received." Of course, if you are 72 or over, you likewise make no entry.

DEAR MR. SMITH: In 1964 I purchased a small commercial property for rental purposes. Before I was permitted to rent the building, the City required me to deed the front 20 feet of the lot to the City, and to construct "frontage improvements" (i.e. paved roadway, sidewalks, curbs and gutters). These I did. In the 10 years that the property has been rented I have fully depreciated, for income tax purposes, the value of the frontage improvements. I have never, however, claimed as a deduction, the value of the 20 feet of lot area which I deeded to the city. May I do so now? — W.M.

The severance of your property 10 years ago, as you describe it, did not entitle you to a deduction at that time, and certainly not now. The tax basis of your property still includes the 20 feet deeded to the city, and you will obtain the benefit of the total tax basis when you sell the property.

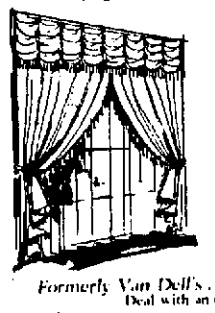

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice To The Taxlorn," P.O. Box 49081, Tucson, Ar. 85717, with a self-addressed stamped envelope, for information that may help you. Your identity will not be disclosed.

AT WIT'S END

It's a question of answers

erma bombeck

Do you know what the trouble is with families today? No one answers anyone. Every time someone asks a question, the person responds with another question.

A reader in Chenoa, Ill., noticed it too. He said the other day his 16-year-old daughter yelled from upstairs, "Has anyone seen my new sweater?"

He yelled back, "You mean the one that cost $20?"

Sister replied, "You mean the one you won't let me wear?"

Brother responded, "You mean the stupid one that makes you look fat?"

Grandma responded, "You mean the one with the low neck?"

Mom grumbled, "You mean the one that has to be washed by hand in cold water?"

Everyone was talking about the same sweater, but no one ever really answered the question.

IF ANYONE gave me a straight answer, I'd drop dead!

Talking to my son is like a quiz show.

"How late did you come in?"

"How late do you think it was?"

"Was it later than midnight?"

"Did I say that?"

"Aren't you going to answer me?"

"With food in my mouth?"

"Is your mouth any other way?"

"Why do you always yell at me?"

"You don't need it?"

"Why can't we just talk?"

"We're not talking? What are we doing? Hatching eggs, maybe?"

"ARE YOU going to use your car today?"

"Do I need permission from you to use my own car?"

"Will you be back by three?"

"Why?"

"You should have to ask?"

"Am I expected to remember everything? So where are you taking the car?"

"If you must know, I was going to the barber shop and surprise you."

"What kind of a question is that? You want me to drop dead, right?"

"You're asking?"

I smiled. "That's better."

Will Moyers fill Schorr's void at CBS?

'Can you succeed in TV and lead a sane life...?'

By KAY GARDELLA
New York News

HOLLYWOOD— When Bill Moyers deserted public broadcasting for CBS News last June to become anchorman and chief reporter for "CBS Reports" he was not expecting to be thrown into the political arena to provide analysis on both conventions with Eric Sevareid.

"I'm pleased to instantly become a part of the CBS News team but that is not my strength," he said. "I've not done instant journalism since I've been in the business. I'm not that good at it. I think my strength is longer programs and reflective journalism. That's why I elected to join CBS over other alternatives. I'm anxious to produce "CBS Reports,' which is the chief reason I joined the network."

TALK WAS that Moyers would fill the void left by Daniel Schorr. Although he's been backed by CBS, Schorr is still personna non grata at the network's Washington Bureau after leaking the Pike Committee report on the CIA. His suspension from CBS News reportedly will be permanent after all legal matters are resolved.

"True, they talked about that but it was never confirmed," said Moyers, a thoughtful man who speaks deliberately with a decided Texas accent. "Sevareid and I will be sharing commentary, analysis, interpretation and reflection. This was Eric's idea. He suggested it after we paired up for the Democratic primaries in California. CBS was eager for me to do it so I will took time off from 'CBS Reports' long for the Democrats in New York and I'll do the same for the Republicans in Kansas City."

BILL MOYERS

Moyers is satisfied that "CBS Reports" is as close to what he's been doing in public broadcasting as any vehicle in commercial television. His "Bill Moyers' Journals" even garnered praise from the widow of the late Edward R. Murrow, one of Moyers' two boyhood heroes when he was growing up in Texas. The other was Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution.

"JANET MURROW has written me often to say that my 'Journal' was closer to whe work of her husband's on television than anything else."

His affection and admiration for Murrow is one of many things that makes him sentimental toward CBS and helped swing the decision to join the network. "I've a long history with CBS," said Moyers. He explained:

"I've known Dick Salant and Bill Small (two news executives) for a long time. I've also known Bill Paley (chairman of the board) for a long time. Arthur Taylor and I have known each other. I've been on the board of a company, Hart-Hanks Newspapers Inc.,— that owns some CBS stations. I'm a very good friend of Frank Stanton. Even the Texas station owned by the late LBJ — KTVC — where I first worked had good relations with CBS. So that's what I mean about being sentimental toward the network."

Moyers said he's severed all business ties to take on his news assignment. He's currently hashing out ideas with the series producers for future "CBS Reports" subjects. One phase that intrigues him is Jimmy Carter's "Twice Born."

HE HOPES to be able to treat it in some documentary fashion. "There are 40 million Evangelical Christians in the country and what they all have in common is the phenomena, the experience Carter describes as 'twice born.'"

"We also talked about Rhodesia, South Africa, bioethics— medical techniques and technology that give rise to ethical and moral considerations— genetics engineering, human behavior modification and the portrait of a candidate who wins the election in November."

Moyers said that one of the orders to his producers is "keep them guessing." Said he: "I don't think you'll find any 'CBS Reports' that will look alike. Style and technique should change depending upon the subject matter. You should never try to impose upon an issue or subject or personality the straight jacket of a preconceived format. Let the story tell itself. Let the person emerge. You have to let the information develop; you must shape the vehicle to the message you're trying to deliver."

WHAT WORRIES Moyers now is this: "Can you succeed in television and lead a sane life? I orphaned my children and widowed my wife when I was in the White House," said the former press secretary to LBJ. "I don't intend to do it again."

Music upstages sentimental date

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Bruce and Rhonda Polay will celebrate their second wedding anniversary Monday night with music — rehearsing with the Lakewood Philharmonia for the second Starlight Serenade in Recreation Park.

When the free concert opens Tuesday at 8 p.m., Bruce will be on the conductor's podium. Rhonda, a soprano, will be soloist.

And to make the Serenade even more of a family affair, Rhonda's father, Rolland W. Sandberg, will direct the Wilson High School Brass Ensemble in the finale, Tchaikovsky's lively, stirring "1812 Overture."

Sandberg is instrumental director at Wilson High. Bruce holds an equivalent position at Polytechnic High.

Bruce will conduct the Philharmonia, now in its sixth season, in Aaron Copland's "An Outdoor Overture," a most suitable choice for the opener of the program, one in the summer series sponsored by Long Beach Symphony Association. Next, the orchestra will play the 1919 version of Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite."

Rhonda will sing Faure's "Pavanne" and "Dover Beach" by American composer Samuel Barber.

THE COLLABORATION between Bruce and Rhonda actually began some years ago when both were in Hoover Junior High. Bruce, now 27, is two years older than Rhonda and even then was a leader. He was experimenting with commercial shows and improvisation and already knew that he wanted a career in music.

"Rhonda had a crush on me," he says candidly, "but I didn't know who she was."

His piano teacher, Mrs. Darlene Hughes of Lynwood, saw in the youngster a "real gift to improvise." A few years later, her prodigy had a difficult decision to make: go on to a promising career in musical comedy or choose classical training. He chose the latter but his love of contemporary music is very much alive.

There's a family note here, too. Mrs. Hughes taught Bruce's mother in Cozad, Neb., and today it is Mrs. Hughes's grand piano that Bruce owns and plays.

It was in Ong, Neb., that Rhonda's father was born; she is a native of Hastings, Neb. Eventually, both the Polay and Sandberg families came to Long Beach where Bruce and Rhonda met at Hoover Junior High.

By the time Rhonda entered Lakewood High in 1967, Bruce was a senior and even more involved in campus and musical activities. He soon became aware of the pretty sophomore but, "I didn't know her father from the man in the moon."

BEFORE LONG, he was dropping in after school at the Sandbergs' home. "My mother-in-law is a saint. She always had cookies and milk out and made all of us welcome."

Mrs. Sandberg is Hawaiian and Rhonda has a rich heritage — she is Swedish, Hawaiian, Chinese, Spanish and Portuguese.

Soon the sophomore and the senior were a twosome, drawn together, among other things, by their love of music. They went together for seven years before their marriage, years when Bruce earned his degree at USC and Rhonda graduated from Long Beach State University.

"Her father really was cautious," Bruce remembers. "He's a very strong Swede and I really had to convince him to let me take Rhonda to a fraternity dance at USC."

He speaks of his father-in-law with personal and professional admiration. "He has 200 band members, the brass ensemble, a jazz combo and other groups at Wilson. That high school is noted throughout Southern California for its strong musical program."

At Polytechnic High, Bruce works with his 100-member band, a 65-piece orchestra and smaller groups. His love of his students and joy in his job are boundless.

"THE STRONGEST thing about Poly is the students themselves. The ethnic diversity of the student body is one of the most beautiful things I've ever seen. Many are islanders. The kids and their talents are incredibly diverse."

When Bruce went to Poly, the school was looking for creative teachers. It was the kind of situation the young man wanted. "Educationally, it works best for me to see the kids as peers. Sometimes we'll be lounging out on the lawn talking things over when a staff member will come by and say, 'All right now, it's time to get back to class.'

He's justly proud of the fact that Poly's orchestra was the only Southern California high school orchestra invited to play for the California Music Educators Association at its recent convention in Los Angeles.

"At Millikan and Wilson, about 95 per cent of the kids in the orchestras take private lessons. At Poly, fewer than 10 per cent do. In music, I have a lot of gifted kids. The big question is, 'How can we help them?'

"When a family is illiterate, it's really something to have a kid graduate from high school with a diploma. I keep in touch with my students as much as I can; they go, of course, where there are jobs."

Poly ranks high in academic achievement, Bruce says. "This year, Poly students won $1.4 million in scholarships for academic excellence; almost half of the students had B grade averages. They won 89 state scholarships, based strictly on academic rating. There were National Merit Scholarships, others from TWA, some in marine biology. So many kids go into so many areas!"

MEANTIME, Rhonda's separate career is flourishing. Organist at First United Methodist Church of Lakewood for the past seven years, she also is accompanist at Long Beach State University. She has had two works published by Walton, Inc., an arrangement of "Silent Night" and an original composition, "Cut From the Same Cloth," for mixed chorus. Both she and her husband will have their work performed this month at the American Choral Directors Association Bicentennial Convention in Interlochen, Mich.

And both are involved with the Lakewood Philharmonia which will play the Starlight Serenade Tuesday.

This orchestra, an outgrowth and expansion of the smaller Lakewood Chamber Orchestra, is regarded by musicians as an exciting group, competent in classical music and also interested in innovative, original ideas.

Bruce makes a point of combining groups to see how various components work together. For instance, he involves the Lakewood Artist Guild with the Philharmonia.

"If we're serious, we must support all the arts. And we must get school officials to realize that its society's obligation to give young people a chance to explore the arts. In general, officials are untouchable in their attitude about the arts in relationship to schools. The thrust is academic, although we support athletics, too. We must give more emphasis to the arts in general.

"This is something I believe in. I'm in the fight for the arts!"

BRUCE POLAY, his wife Rhonda, and her father Rolland W. Sandberg study score to be played Tuesday night by the Lakewood Philharmonia at Starlight Serenade in Recreation Park. Bruce will conduct, Rhonda will be soprano soloist, Sandberg will direct finale.

LBSU gallery seeks art by Anna A. Hills

The art galleries at Long Beach State University need your help.

In celebration of International Women's Year, the gallery staff is mounting a retrospective exhibition of work by pioneer California Impressionist Anna A. Hills, co-founder of the Laguna Beach Art Association.

Some of the artist's work is available, but the staff is convinced that much more is in private collections. If you have such paintings, please send information about them to The Art Galleries, Long Beach State University, 1250 Bellflower Blvd., Long Beach 90840. The staff would like to know about them for documentation purposes.

AT THE THIRD annual Seal Beach Art Show next Sunday, there will be paintings, graphics, crafts, photography, sculpture and children's art. More than 50 artists will exhibit their work from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Eisenhower Park, Ocean Avenue and Main Street. Julia Poirier, Phyllis Aaron and Don Hadley will judge the show, giving each winner a trophy. At 11 a.m., Mayor Tom Blackman and Councilman Frank Laszlo will announce awards.

TWO LONG BEACH artists have been juried into the San Diego Watercolor Society's Golden State Exhibition. They are Sandra Beebe and Betty Anne Kirkpatrick, who signs her work BASK. Jurors for the show, which will be on view through July 25, are Rex Brandt, Millard Sheets and Lenard Kester. Beebe also had a woven painting accepted in the 22nd annual All California Exhibition at Laguna Beach Museum. And BASK has had a painting accepted by the Rocky Mountain National Watercolor Exhibition in Golden, Colo. This show, open to all artists in the United States, was juried by Chen Chi of New York and Tom Hill of Tucson, Ariz. It will hang Aug. 15 through Sept. 19.

Russian maestro will conduct

Two items of interest from Hollywood Bowl: Russian maestro Gennady Rozhdestvensky will conduct the Los Angeles Philharmonic Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, and bus fare to the Bowl has been boosted again.

First, the concerts. This will be Rozhdestvensky's Bowl debut, following his appearances with the Philharmonic at the Music Center last February.

The Tuesday program will be all-Prokofieff, beginning with the cantata "Alexander Nevsky" with mezzo Florence Quivar and the Los Angeles Master Chorale. Viktoria Postnikova (Mrs. Rozhdestvensky) will be soloist for the "Piano Concerto No. 1" and "Scythian Suite."

Thursday, Romanian violinist Silvia Marcovici, who performed at the Bowl in 1972, will play Bruch's "Concerto No. 1" and the orchestra will perform Beethoven's Overture, "Leonore No. 3" and "Symphony No. 3" by Saint-Saens — the "Organ" Symphony.

Saturday's program will be devoted to Russian favorites with one of America's favorite pianists, Van Cliburn, playing one of the world's favorite piano concertos, Rachmaninoff's Second. Rozhdestvensky will conduct "Scheherazade" by Rimsky-Korsakoff and Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla" by Glinka.

All three concerts will begin at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are on sale at the box office and agencies. Seating for Saturday's program is limited; only bench seating is available.

ABOUT THE BUS fare: Originally, fares were increased on RTD Hollywood Bowl Park and Ride service at the beginning of July, raising the cost each way from 25 cents to 35 cents.

Then at a later meeting July 6, the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors decided that the fare should be raised to 50 cents. This increase is now in effect. The service is in operation every Bowl performance night.

THE PHILHARMONIC, on the other hand, is offering the public a free series of chamber concerts, the Philharmonic Serenades. These were introduced last summer and the response was so enthusiastic that the programs will be given again this year beginning Monday at 8:30 p.m.

They will take place in the former Pilgrimage Theater in Hollywood, renamed the John Anson Ford Theater.

Under the direction of Sidney Harth, the Los Angeles Philharmonic's principal concert master and associate conductor, the programs will feature varied ensembles drawn from the orchestra, and two guest pianists.

After Monday's initial concert, serenades are scheduled Aug. 2, 16 and 30.

The opening bill will include "Ricercare" by Andrea Gabrieli; "Canzona" by Giovanni Gabrieli; "Organ Fugue in D-minor" by Bach; "Trio for Brass Instruments" by Bassett; "Sonata for Violin and Cello" by Ravel; and "Trio in C-major for Violin, Piano and Cello, Op. 87" by Brahms. Sidney Harth, violinist, Ronald Leonard, cellist, and Zita Carno, pianist, will perform this work.

ACS warns against sun

By RONALD KOTULAK
Knight News Service

Some widely held myths about sunbathing are helping to increase the dangers of skin cancer and prematurely aging skin, warns the American Cancer Society.

Pointing out that "we have become a nation of sunworshippers," the ACS said that most sunbathers

health

are not aware that overexposure causes permanent damage.

"While we seek a tan to make us look young and vibrant, the sun is hard at work making us look old — giving us wrinkles and a tough, leathery look," said the society.

But the biggest risk of too much sun is skin cancer. Nearly all of the 300,000 new cases of skin cancer each year are caused by overexposure to the sun's ultra violet rays, said the ACS.

Fortunately, skin cancer is highly curable. But premature aging of the skin cannot be reversed. Some sunbathers pay a heavy price when they reach their 40s and have skin that looks like it belongs to someone in their 50s or 60s.

ATTEMPTING to clear up some of the most prevalent myths about sunbathing, the ACS advises that:

— There basically are very few health benefits from sunning.

— A cloudy day or staying under water will not protect you. Seventy to 80 per cent of the ultra-violet rays penetrate the clouds and they can cause a burn up to three feet deep in water.

— The shade of a beach umbrella does not offer full protection. The sun's rays can be reflected at you from sand, water, or any hard surface.

— A T-shirt does not offer protection. Once it gets wet it lets in about 50 per cent of the ultra-violet rays.

To avoid serious sun damage, stay out of the sun during the worst period between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., said the ACS. If that seems too restrictive, sunbathe for only 15 minutes during the danger hours.

Sunscreens are effective in reducing the amount of sun your skin absorbs. The most effective sunscreens on the market now contain the chemical called PABA (para-amino-benzoic acid). Sunblocks, such as zinc oxide, allow no tanning.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Hormones aid in shock

Large doses of cortisone-like hormones protect patients against massive bacterial infection and resulting septic shock, a form of circulatory collapse.

Dr. William Schumer, chairman of the department of surgery at Chicago Medical School, tells of a study conducted at the Veterans Administration Hospital at Downey, Ill.

The study involved 171 patients admitted to the hospital with septic shock over a period of several years. The death rate among those who received a cortisone-like drug was only 10 per cent. It was almost four times as high (38 per cent) among those not treated with these drugs.

And a study of the medical records of an additional 328 patients treated at another VA hospital for

ben zinser

septic shock shows that among those not treated with cortisone-like drugs, nearly three times as many died as among treated patients.

Although antibiotics have proven to be a valuable weapon against bacterial infections, they alone do not protect this type of patient as well as the combination of antibiotics and a cortisone-like drug.

Dr. Schumer says that during severe infection, body fluids leak into the tissues. As a result, the blood volume decreases to a dangerous low level, and circulation is impaired. The result is shock which often kills even as an antibiotic is fighting the infection.

During shock, the body protects its vital organs by pooling what blood remains in the brain, lungs, heart and kidneys. This is true whether the loss in blood volume is due to massive hemorrhage, as in a wound, or by massive poisoning caused by infection.

But the other organs and body tissues, without a blood supply, lack energy, oxygen and nutrients. Also, they cannot dispose of their accumulating wastes. The slow starvation and suffocation of these body tissues finally causes death.

The primary source of energy for the body's cells is sugar, produced by the liver. During septic shock, sugar production is halted. This is how the cortisone-like hormone can help: Given in a single, huge dose, it helps the liver resume its sugar production to restore the energy supply.

Dr. Schumer used two cortisone-like drugs: dexamethasone and methylprednisolone.

"We're seeing more cases of septic shock now than before," the doctor says. "And the victims are usually children under 10 or adults over 50."

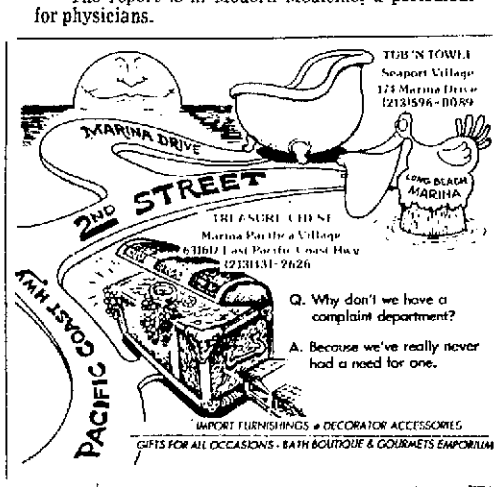

Restore vision

Specially built plastic eyeglasses are partially compensating for visual field losses in 35 victims of brain injury, including stroke.

The glasses contain a small plastic mirror attached to the bridge. The glasses have helped restore side images lost as a result of a condition known as "half blindness." The mirror reflects images from the missing visual fields as an overlay in the side part of the wearer's remaining vision.

The glasses were designed by Dr. Thomas W. Nooney Jr., associate professor of ophthalmology at Medical College of Virginia.

The report is in Modern Medicine, a periodical for physicians.

Success more than talent

dr. walt menninger

What makes Johnny run? How do you motivate people to excel and live up to their potential? These questions face people in roles of supervision and direction; they also face parents. Recently I heard two people talk about the subject who have been remarkably successful at it: Bobby Knight and Barry Switzer.

They are both successful coaches — Knight's Indiana University basketball team went undefeated and won the 1976 national championship of the NCAA, having lost only one game the year before; Switzer's Oklahoma University football team was named the mythical national champion by wire service polls last winter and has a three-year record of 31 wins, 1 loss, 1 tie and two national championships.

They are outspoken individuals who are keenly sensitive to the challenge of taking youngsters with talent and molding them into a smooth-working and effective team. They shared some thoughts about how they do it with the National Press Photographers Association meeting in Atlanta.

WHAT CAN ONE learn from them? First, it is obvious that successful accomplishment is not just a function of talent in players. As in many other endeavors, the leader plays a critical role. In their case, it's clear that the coaching makes a difference.

What makes a good coach? He has a sensitivity to the concerns of the people he supervises. A youthful perspective, noted Switzer.

Good coaches try to understand the needs of their players. Yet, they also have a clear idea of the job to be done, and they don't try to pass the buck or escape responsibility for making decisions.

Switzer tries to help his youngsters set goals and purposes in life, to build a foundation which will carry on beyond his playing days. But he decries the common expectation that you can get something for nothing and go a long way just on talent. Success takes hard work!

Knight believes his task, in a similar way, is to help his players understand what they have to do to succeed. But he doesn't define success as winning; rather he emphasizes success as living up to your potential, being as good as you can be, regardless of the opponent or the rewards.

One might characterize Knight's approach as a variation of so-called management-by-objective. He defines a number of objectives for his players in each game, but he does not list the final score or the outcome of the game as an objective. Rather he refers to various elements of a player's performance during the game.

SINCE TALENT is fairly equally spread these days in athletics, Knight feels that upsets come about basically because of a difference in the mental and psychological preparation for a contest. The last thing he wants to talk about is winning; rather he feels if you play to your potential in every game, you don't have to worry — you are not likely to be upset by a lesser team. And you can be satisfied if you've done your best, even if you lose.

Knight agreed with Switzer that success requires work and commitment. He recounted the parable of the successful salesman who "taketh with him two angels, Inspiration and Perspiration; and he worketh to beat hell!"

While both these men have now become part of winning traditions — Switzer inherited one, Knight has developed one where it didn't previously exist — they each know what they want; and they have a definite plan for approaching their tasks.

They are both experts in what they are doing and exude their competence and confidence. Even if one is not particularly interested in athletics, there is much to learn from these men who are unusually successful at their calling.

however, the fountain has a definite and useful purpose."

The architects also took into account the fact that the visually handicapped exert a great deal of energy just getting from one place to another, and the frequent rest stops were an integral part of the planning, Mrs. Coleman said.

A curved driveway offset from Vermont Avenue allows for safe off-loading of passengers. Wide sliding glass doors make entry easy. A reception area, manned by sighted volunteers and a visually handicapped switchboard operator, is located just a few steps inside the main entrance.

BESIDES CREATING an environment which minimizes the anxieties of the blind, the new construction has made it possible for Braille Institute to increase its free-of-charge services to the estimated 20,000 visually handicapped men, women and children in the Los Angeles area.

According to Mrs. Coleman, more space has made possible the expansion of the Braille Library and the addition of sound-proofed music rooms make it possible for students who don't own their own instruments to practice between classes.

There are also enlarged handicraft and sewing rooms, a completely equipped woodshop and an up-to-date apartment where blind men and relearn home management skills.

An industrial-size kitchen, which was part of phase four of the building program, will make it possible to serve students hot noon meals as soon as the final phase of the construction is completed.

Also part of the new Sight Center is a volunteer services center which provides space for reading and tape recording rooms and houses the Institutes 1,400 volunteers. There are 10 volunteers for every sighted staff member, Mrs. Coleman said. "I don't think we could survive without them."

Use care washing lusterware

Q. "What is the best way to clean antique lusterware? I am really afraid to wash my old luster pieces. They look so fragile." — Cynthia, Levittown, Pa.

A. True, better to be a bit cautious than a bit sadder. More than one homemaker has had the unfortunate experience of washing the glaze right off antique luster by rubbing it too strenuously. Luster is best washed in lukewarm water, with a mild soap or detergent. A minimum of rubbing will not endanger that lovely old decoration. Your grandchildren will appreciate your cautious attitude when they have your lovely luster collection to treasure and enjoy.

Q. "Did you ever hear of alligator's teeth jewelry? I discovered a necklace from this reptile and am quite astonished. Tell me, please, when were fashionable ladies wearing such outlandish accessories?" — B. P., Atlantic City, N.J.

A. A fad of the 1870s and 1880s. This rather awesome jewelry was made from, would you believe, alligator's teeth. Such teeth adorned necklaces, buttons, brooches, eardrops and other exotic treasures. Where did they ever find all those alligator teeth? The next time you're visiting the zoo, wait around for an alligator to yawn — those missing teeth are probably just another item in Aunt Tillie's trinket box.

Q. "I found some Theodore Haviland china marked "Made in America." Although I'm a novice about antiques, I realize that Haviland was made in France. How can you explain this boo-boo? — Mrs. M. V., Philadelphia, Pa.

A. The Haviland family have been actively producing fine wares since the 1840s. The bulk of their wares were imported from the factories in the Limoges district of France. However, during the 1940s, under the guidance of William David Haviland, a business was started in America. This is the ware marked Theodore Haviland, made in America. You have uncovered such a piece.

Q. "I am determined to find a Centennial Exhibition Hall Bottle. My collection of antique bottles will not be considered complete without one of these specimens. Do you know their history?" — R. G., Trenton, N. J.

A. Sound the happy hunting horn, you're off in search of a fascinating bottle. Robert P. Smith of Philadelphia patented the design on April 11, 1876. The clear glass bottle with a greenish hue was made by Whitall, Tatum & Company of New Jersey. The Centennial Exhibition Hall is represented on this sought-after rarity. Remember, sir, if you encounter an example, hesitate. In the antique biz, bargaining is beautiful!

The workshop

Once upon a time, a French furniture designer hit upon the bright idea of making a chair seat long enough so that your legs stretched out off the floor. From that simple invention, thousands of comfortable "chaise lounges" (literally, "long chairs") have been designed to help weary souls laze away the day.

The one we've come up with is sturdy, handsome, and best of all, a snap to build. With the full-size patterns, all you do is trace, cut out and assemble, and you're on your way to years of laziness. Sturdy wheels make it mobile, and an adjustable back lets you choose your own level of comfort. A full list of materials lets you know just what you'll need. An added feature is that no special tools are required.

To obtain the Outdoor Chaise, Pattern No. 81, send $1.50 (includes first class postage and handling). To obtain our special Lawn and Garden packet (9 patterns including window boxes, awnings and many more lawn projects) send $4 by check, cash or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent Press Telegram, Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, CA. 91409.

inspecting his peanut warehouse.

Sizing up the potential opposition, Rafshoon said: "With Ford, the issue of him not taking control of the government and being considered a bumbler will be there implicitly.

"With Reagan, some of his rash statements, and perceptions people have about him, will have to be brought in."

Carter won 18 out of 30 primaries without any of his commercials ever attacking any of his opponents by name. Asked if that would not change during the General Election, Rafshoon smiled and said, "We really won't have to tell people by name who our opponent is."

Rafshoon also promised, in his upcoming election presentations, "a little more solid delineation of what a Carter presidency would be." Of all the charges that have been leveled against their tiger, the Carter campaigners are most sensitive to the accusation that he is vague on exactly what he would do if elected.

ONE GREAT PROBLEM that Rafshoon will no longer face is a chronic shortage of cash that afflicted all the Democratic candidates during the primaries.

During the primaries, Rafshoon said Carter spent $2.2 million on media advertising in 38 different states. Another $750,000 was spent on production and printing.

But scraping up money was a constant hassle, with the Carter campaign often spending only half as much in a primary or caucus state as it would have liked. "A federal allotment of $22 million for the fall campaign will end all that."

Like Carter's other top staffers, Rafshoon works without the salve of flattery from the candidate. Carter is a perfectionist notoriously sparing in his compliments.

After Carter got off on the right foot during the Iowa caucuses in January, Rafshoon suggested that his advertising helped push him out front of all the other aspirants. But Carter only replied, "Uncommitted came in first and he didn't have any media."

THE FORMULA

Remove ink stains from hands

The ballpoint pen has largely replaced the fountain pen as a writing tool. While fluid ink is still produced in vast quantities its use is now primarily in the printing industry.

Along with the decline of fluid writing ink, the blotter has also largely disappeared. So when a pen point picks up lint from the paper, another source for removing it needs to be found. In many cases this turns out to be our fingers. If you encounter this as I do—here's an easy inexpensive way to remove the stains from hands.

Into three tablespoons of ISOPROPYL ALCOHOL, mix one tablespoon GLYCERIN. To use, dip cloth in solution and rub away the spot. Store in glass or plastic container. NOTE: Isopropyl alcohol is mildly toxic and flammable.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Life devoted to children's health

Good Housekeeping magazine in its issue of May, 1974, cited him as "One of nine top physicians in the country."

Today's chef of the week, Harry W. Orme, M.D. has served since 1967 as medical director of the Earl and Loraine Miller Children's Hospital Medical Center.

The university-affiliated private medical center operates on an annual budget in excess of $6 million, and incorporates regional, public and private child health care agencies. Offering one of the world's largest and most modern neonatal centers, it has brought together a medical staff of more than 500 private primary physicians and specialists and a house staff of pediatric interns, residents and fellows.

Orme also is clinical professor of pediatrics at University of California, Irvine. He was formerly clinical assistant professor of Pediatric Cardiology at UCLA and an assistant professor of pediatrics at University of Minnesota.

Born in Wheat Ridge, Colo., he was graduated from high school there, and then enrolled at Syracuse University, Syracuse, N.Y. He continued his education at University of Illinois, Champaign, Ill., before going to the University of Minnesota, from which he earned his B.S. degree, and M.D. degree from its School of Medicine.

Orme interned at U of Minnesota Hospital, and served two years as captain, Medical Corps, U.S. Air Force Medical Department, Adak, Alaska. He then returned to Minnesota for a clinical fellowship in pediatrics.

ORME'S NEXT MOVE was to Long Beach in 1952, where he served two years as staff pediatrician at Harriman Jones Clinic. Minnesota then called again, and he returned, serving as assistant professor of pediatrics at U of Minnesota and as director of pediatrics, Anoka Hospital, St. Paul, Minn.

Long Beach was lucky again in 1957. Orme returned and entered private pediatric cardiology practice. In 1965, he and his wife, Bonnie, a registered nurse, traveled to Lahore, West Pakistan, where, as consultant in pediatric cardiology and hospital administration to United Christian Hospital, he developed that country's first heart surgery program.

His memberships in scientific and scholarly societies include the Long Beach Pediatric Society and

mildred flanary

the Certified American Board of Pediatric Cardiology. A member of both the California and Long Beach Heart Associations, Orme is a fellow — American Academy of Pediatrics and of the American College of Cardiology.

Recently elected to the executive committee of the American Academy of Pediatrics, Southern California Chapter, Orme is president, Long Beach Heart Association; board of trustees, Women's Hospital Medical Center of Long Beach. He also is a member of the board of directors, Memorial Hospital Medical Center of Long Beach-University of California, Irvine, Center for Health Education, and board of trustees, Earl and Loraine Miller Children's Hospital Medical Center.

Orme has also been a consultant in pediatric cardiology to California Crippled Children's Services since 1960, and a consultant, pediatric cardiology, Naval Regional Medical Center, Long Beach, since 1967.

HE HAS AUTHORED numerous articles on congenital heart diseases in children, and presented a large number of scientific papers and exhibits at national and international medical meetings. Orme's current objectives are oriented to improving delivery of health care to children and medical education in the United States and foreign countries.

Bonnie Orme is active in the Assistance League. They have a son, Steven, who recently graduated from UC, Davis, as director of veterinary medicine, and will intern at West Los Angeles Animal Hospital this coming year. He and his wife, Denise, have been married three years. The Ormes' daughter, Sarah, has completed two years at USC School of Music as a flute major.

Orme says, "The past four years we have spent as much time as possible in Palm Springs at our condominium. We've traveled extensively with two round the world trips, stopping both times at Pakistan."

Bonnie says, "One of Harry's favorite pastimes is napping under a special tree in Palm Springs. In fact, the neighbors got together and had a sign put on it — 'Orme's Tree' ".

He also enjoys cooking, and has never been known to measure an ingredient. As for his recipe today, it is one of his favorite desserts which came from their first trip to Pakistan. It's called Malil Rhamatullah Khan's Pear Pudding. You really don't need to be able to pronounce it to enjoy it!

HARRY W. ORME, M.D.

MALIK RHAMATULLAH KHAN'S PEAR PUDDING

- 1 large can pears
- 1½ cups flour
- 1½ cups sugar
- 1½ teaspoons soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon ginger
- ¼ teaspoon cloves
- 2 eggs
- ¾ cup pear juice
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- ¾ cup brown sugar
- 3 tablespoons butter
- ½ cup nuts, chopped

Make a batter of the flour, sugar, soda, salt, ginger, cloves, eggs, pear juice and vanilla. Slice pears into this batter. Place in 9x12 inch pan. Mix together brown sugar, butter and nuts; sprinkle over top.

Bake in mederate oven, 350 degrees, about 50 minutes. Serve with whipped cream when it is warm or cool.

Americans have cliches for all seasons

ALTHOUGH PRESIDENTIAL campaigns frequently generate many new cliches, 1976 has "not been a vintage year," Paros admitted. "About the best we've got is Jimmy Carter's 'I would not knowingly lie to you,' which has the earmarks of a classic, and 'ethnic purity,' which probably will join Daniel Moynihan's 'benign neglect' as a phrase near and dear to the hearts and minds of black people.

"When the chips are down, though, we really have to turn to the media for political cliches," he added. "Look at how the media handles a primary. It starts out with an 'attractive candidate,' who is not very different from 'the very good-looking young ballplayer.' He 'throws his hat into the ring,' into what is 'an already crowded field.'

"At some point, somebody 'mentions him prominently,' and then there are a 'series of major tests' which are 'anybody's contest,' 'too close to call,' 'real horse races,' and 'down to the wire,' until our friend emerges as 'the front runner' and 'gains the psychological advantage.' He's got 'momentum' or 'the edge,' and he's deemed 'a viable candidate,' which I guess is akin to being barmitzvahed. He's got the Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval.

"After that, 'everybody gets on the bandwagon,' and he finally 'gains the nod' regardless of the 'lengthening shadows in the wings,' 'the smoke-filled rooms,' and 'the dark horses left at the starting gates.'"

CLICHES ARE THE bread-and-butter of the Fourth Estate, Paros said, but this year the press has had trouble expressing itself in terms of sex.

"What with Elizabeth Ray and Rep. Wilbur Hayes' (D., Ohio) hanky-panky, the best the press had is: 'They were having personal relationships with one another,' or 'She granted him sexual favors.' The press is having trouble when it comes to talking about you-know-what."

Paros, who lives in Rhode Island, is married and has two daughters. By studying cliches, he believes, we can get a better insight into the kind of people we really are.

"We are what we say," he explained.

The commonplaces of American speech, he said, underscore our willingness to accept authority, our respect for hard work, and our faith in education and the American dream. In a darker vein, we also are exposed as a nation that romanticizes war and is fascinated by violence.

Cliches originate as a reflection of what we think, he said, but eventually can become deterrents to new and critical thought.

"Cliches can make you lazy, make you not want to stretch your imagination. Instead of reaching down inside ourselves for the clearest way to say something, too many times we take the easy way out. Communication is impaired."

OK, America, let's get over this hump and tell it like it really is. A little hard work never hurt anyone, and progress is, after all, our most important product.

Solution to puzzle is on L/S-8

Summer's hot; films are not

The plot involves a nuclear-powered bus making its first nonstop run from New York to Denver. Sort of a Concorde on wheels. It is launched like a rocket, a bomb goes off, the gadgets don't work, and a gang of enemy agents tries to wreck both the bus and the crew.

Joe Bologna is a bus driver accused of eating 110 passengers during a former disaster when rations ran out in the desert. Mr. Bologna defensively insists he only ate one foot.

Stockard Channing is a daffy stewardess (on buses, I guess you'd call her a bustess). She is a very capable comedienne and might just someday be a star if Hollywood ever discovers what to do with her.

Ruth Gordon is an ancient housewife who is running away from home. Sally Kellerman is a bubble-brained divorcee who is celebrating her new divorce by taking a trip with her ex-husband. Lynn Redgrave, Jose Ferrer, Bob Dishy and Larry Hagman are other lovable lunatics along for the ride. All of them create comic personalities from blank paper.

As a result, the movie limps along on false energy, the situations never rise above the status of a TV sitcom pilot that didn't sell, and "The Big Bus" dies of engine trouble.

"THE TENANT" is a murky pudding starring, written and directed by Roman Polanski, in a style uncomfortably borrowed from Hitchcock with dull and baffling results. The point of the film seems to be a pouty warning to France, where Polish-born Polanski has recently taken up residence, that this iconoclastic director intends to preserve his sense of alienation at all costs.

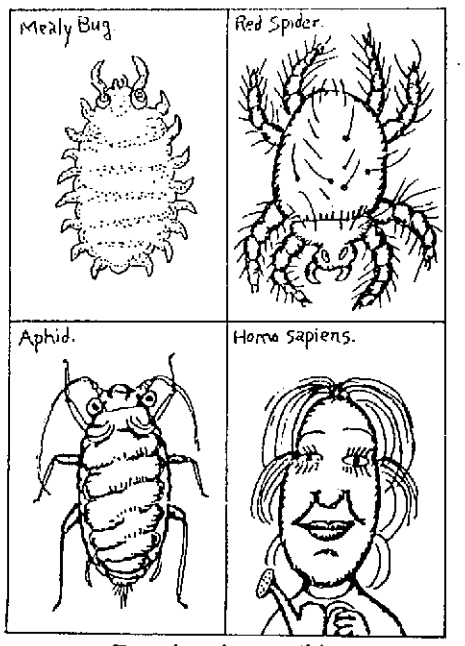

That is why he cast himself as the victimized, awkward immigrant who rents a depressing little flat in Paris only to discover the former tenant committed suicide by jumping through the window. Paranoia builds as the landlord (Melvyn Douglas) threatens him, the nasty concierge (Shelley Winters) ignores even his simplest request, and he is harassed by a host of predatory neighbors.

There's witty observation in the direction, as the petty irritants faced by the foreigners in the Parisian milieu of dark, lonely hotels and cafes are revealed. But then the film rather rudely turns to Grand Guignol as the paranoia turns to insanity, and a lot of talent gets wasted in the process.

The Americans playing French villains are fine, but it's a one-man show. Or maybe I should say a one-woman show.

Polanski starts wearing the previous tenant's lipstick, fingernail polish, silk stockings, false eyelashes, high heels and wigs, heading predictably for the same window. The first fall only breaks his bones, so he drags himself up the stairs and jumps again. The screen fills with blood and the theater fills with laughter, because by this time nobody cares.

The audience has been yelling "Jump!" since the film began. "The Tenant" is one Roman Polanski thriller that outlasts its own thrills.

Enemies of green things

Mother Earth:

By LYNN & JOEL RAPP

DEAR MOTHER EARTH: Having just read one of your "success" stories, I was inspired to tell you about ours. We had a beautiful spider plant in our living room which was doing very nicely until it was accidentally knocked off the table.

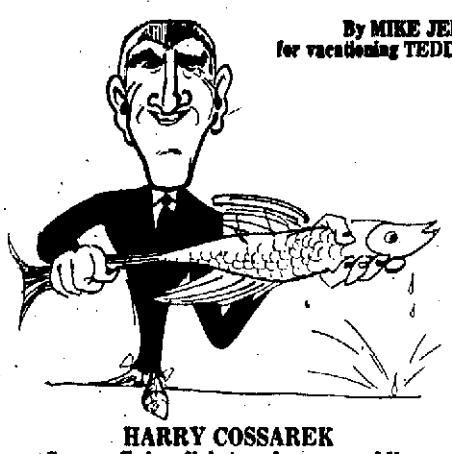

The fall was so bad that the plant was completely crushed, except for one tiny little hunk. We decided to plant it in our patio to see what would happen. About two weeks later it was still alive, so we transferred it into a pot, and, would you believe, that, too, was knocked off the table! This time we thought it had no hope of surviving, but just in case, we planted it again in the patio earth.

Well, it grew again, and now, having learned our lesson, our Spider hangs proudly from a tree-limb, about four times its original size, with baby shoots galore. That plant has really shown us a lesson in the will to live! — D. & J. C.

HARRY COSSAREK
Serves flying fish to a hungry public

By MIKE JELF
for vacationing TEDD THOMEY

FISH TRAVEL in schools, as everyone learns early in life.

A fact most children don't learn in school, however, is that some fish travel in flying schools.

Unfortunately for the fish, they're out cold when they fly. They aren't able to enjoy the scenery as they're sped by airplane from the North Atlantic and the Sea of Cortez to the Prince of Whales Restaurant, 6790 Long Beach Blvd.

(Actually, of course, they're only flown as far as the airport, and driven the rest of the way to the restaurant. We see no reason to be pedantic, though.)

Owner Harry Cossarek sees to it that Atlantic haddock is flown in fresh regularly, as are Canadian halibut and Maryland oysters.

With seafood as the restaurant's reason for being in business, it's perhaps not surprising that Mr. Cossarek takes such pains to secure first-rate denizens of the deep.

The practice seems to reflect sound business sense, in light of the fact the restaurant is one of very few in Southern California that has been in business since 1929.

Though closed Monday, the restaurant offers lunch and dinner menus the rest of the week from 11:30 a.m. to 8:45 p.m. on weekdays and from 11:30 a.m. to 8:15 p.m. weekends.

The restaurant features a Scottish decor, reflecting the Caledonian origins of the owners.

Touches from tartan place mats to a highland dance mural on the wall reflect the Celtic influence, as does the selection of fine foreign beers.

One can scarecly look any place in the Prince of Whales without finding something Scottish looking back at him, from a red Lion rampant to a bit of tartan on the back of the menu.

In addition to standard American brands, the Prince of Whales offers Mackeson stout from Britain, Foster's Lager from Austalia, and Zealander Half and Half from New Zealand.

The Mackeson is a fine stout. It's sweeter and a bit less pungent that Guinness (what brew isn't?), and its head foams up with a tan uniformity that's a positive pleasure to watch.

Zealander Half and Half is a more subtly flavored half and half than will suit many tastes. (For those unaccustomed to this type of concoction, however, it might at first appear to be stronger in flavor than is quite right.)

The price is naturally quite a bit higher than for American beers, but any aficionado of the brewer's art will find the experiences well worth the price.

Cocktails and non-alcoholic beverages also are available.

Less liquid means of sustenance include the Atlantic haddock at $2.75, which we found quite tasty and filling.

Other menu items include the Canadian halibut at $3.25, shrimp cocktail at $2.50, a lobster lunch plate at $4.95, Maryland oysters at $2.95 and clam chowder at $1.35 for a 12-ounce tureen or 70 cents per cup.

Staff member Betty Dasher says the restaurant does a family business, and most of her customers are regulars, who talk freely with her about the day-to-day events that affect their lives.

Betty, who manages the restaurant two days a week, says she wouldn't work anyplace else.

A veteran of six years at the Prince of Whales, she says she would never go back to her job in a department store.

"That's all housewives shopping," she said. They're tired, irritated, and the surroundings are quite drab.

At the restaurant, she says, she hasn't taken a vacation since she's been there, though she's entitled to a specified amount of time off each year.

"I'm afraid somebody would horn in on my job," she says.

When she saw an advertisment in the newspaper six years ago telling of a vacancy at the Prince of Whales, she jumped at the opportunity to work there.

"I love it," she says.

A QUARTER CENTURY ago developers carved Lakewood out of bean fields and set a pattern that's spread across the rest of suburbia, for good or ill.

The Lakewood pattern includes a commercial center surrounded by homes, whose residents patronize the commercial center.

As might be expected, the Lakewood center has a number of restaurants to serve the shopping center employes lunch and householders dinner. One of the more popular of these is Love's, 5300 Lakewood Blvd. (at Candlewood).

Manager Stephen Stiefel sees to it that the food is hot and the service is as quick and courteous as possible in the frenzied lunch hours.

His day includes everything from visits to the corporate offices to seeing that food orders come through to fixing the taps on the beer kegs when they malfunction.

Stiefel says business at his seven-day-a-week stand has always been brisk since he took his post seven years ago, though there may be seasonal fluctuations.

He also makes no bones about the bill of fare. The food is good quality, so business is good, he says.

In addition to a long list of sandwiches and hot dishes, the restaurant is graced with a cocktail bar which also serves beer and wine.

For those with massive appetites, the menu includes a rack of barbecue ribs at $7.25, a rack of pork or ham at $3.25 and a half chicken at $2.70.

Beef short ribs and barbecue beef are available for $3.50 each, and chicken and ribs can be had for $4.30.

Popular with the luncheon crowd are Love's sandwiches, priced from $1.75 to $2. Varieties include pork, ham and beef.

For those who missed Bastille day, there are French dip sandwiches priced from $1.90 to $2.25, with varieties of pork, ham, ground beef and beef.

For those who want more than a sandwich for lunch, there are luncheon plates from $2 to $2.65.

The luncheon plates include chicken, deep-fried fish and ground beef steak at the low end of the price range, pork and ham at $2.15 each, shrimp at $2.25, beef short ribs at $2.35, beef at $2.55, and pork ribs at $2.65.

Under the category of "hearty luncheons" are the chicken and ribs combination plate at $3.85, half a barbecued chicken at $2.75.

For those who've already eaten too well and too long, there are the "waist slimmers" plates.

Also on the menu are the melted cheese sandwich at $1.35, the tunafish sandwich at $1.45, and the ever-popular dinner salad at 95 cents.

Love's atmosphere and decor are attractive without being stuffy, a description which seems to apply as well to the waitresses and to the kind lady behind the bar who served the white wine when we visited Love's.

As long as suburbia has bartenders like that, we know it can't be too bad.

DEAR ABBY

Early to bed not wise

abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm afraid I blew it. I am a 47-year old widow with three children, and I'm good-looking but not too smart about men.

I met this beautiful, eligible bachelor and we were attracted to each other instantly. He asked me out, and on the first date, in a weak moment, I went to bed with him.

Now I could kick myself because he promised to call me soon, but it's been three days and I haven't heard from him. He said he had to go out of town on business, so maybe that's where he is.

Should I call him? Do you think he lost respect for me? If he does call again, should I play hard to get? Or do you think he'll expect me to hop into bed with him because I was a pushover on the first date?

How should I handle this? He acted like he really liked me, and he is the kind of man I want to marry. — PUSHOVER

DEAR PUSHOVER: Don't call him. If he calls you, explain that you got "carried away" and now regret it. (It's true.) If you blew it with this man, take your lumps and learn from the experience. A man may want a pushover for a date, but not for a wife.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance said he wanted to present me with "a stone" that had been in his family for a long time, so naturally I was all excited when he handed me a small ring box.

Imagine how I felt when I opened it and found an ugly little gray stone which he laughingly identified as a "gallstone" — one of many that had been surgically removed from his mother!

What do you think about a clown like this? — NOT LAUGHING

DEAR NOT: His mother may have had the gallstones, but he's got the GALL.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WONDERING IN SAN ANTONIO": A blood test does not always prove who the baby's father IS, but it proves conclusively who the baby's father ISN'T.

WAVES note 34th year

The 34th anniversary of the Navy WAVES will be celebrated at a reunion luncheon and Bicentennial observance July 31 at Allen Center, Long Beach Naval Support Activity.

All women who served in the Navy may attend the event, which is sponsored by the Co-Mar WAVES Council, Navy League of the United States.

Frances Z. Heppe of Stanton and Barbara Reid of Huntington Beach are overall chairwomen.

ira corn on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn:
Are bridge tournaments conducted for monetary stakes or is it all for fun and glory?

On Dole
Baltimore

Answer: Cash prizes are specifically prohibited in any tournaments sanctioned by the ACBL. The players primarily play for the fun and the glory of winning master points with each ACBL player ranked according to the number of master points he has won. Pride in improving skill is also a significant factor.

Speaking of money, the highest gross income ever achieved in a single year by a private citizen is the estimated $105,000,000 made in 1927 by Chicago gangster Al Capone. At the time, Capone's business card listed him as "second hand furniture dealer."

Dear Mr. Corn:
What happens if a defender plays a card prematurely when it was his partner's turn to play?

Quick Shot
Stephenville, Tex.

Answer: This offense understandably carries a very stiff penalty. Declarer may require offender's partner to play:

(a) His highest card of the suit led, or
(b) His lowest card of the suit led, or
(c) A card of another suit, specified by declarer.

Dear Mr. Corn:
Declarer leads a spade from his hand but the lead was in dummy. I claimed the spade is a penalty card, but I was overruled. Do I have anybody on my side?

Appeals Review,
San Antonio

Answer: When a declarer leads out of turn, the illegal information transmitted to dummy can do his side no good, and only the defenders can benefit. The defenders can accept the lead or require the lead from dummy.

On the opposite side of the coin, when a defender leads out of turn, his partner might be able to use the authorized information and the defenders suffer the penalities of a penalty card. Sorry, but the laws are not on your side.

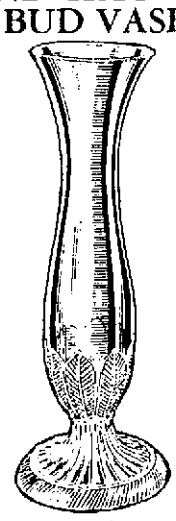

Dear Mr. Corn:
Not vulnerable, what opening bid would you suggest with:

♠ Q J 10 9 8 7 4 3 2
♣ 5

Poor House,
Scarsdale, N.Y.

Answer: Four spades. The nonvulnerable preempt promises to take within three tricks of the bid and the seven spade winners are right out of the text book.

'Rescue at Entebbe' due by Universal Pictures

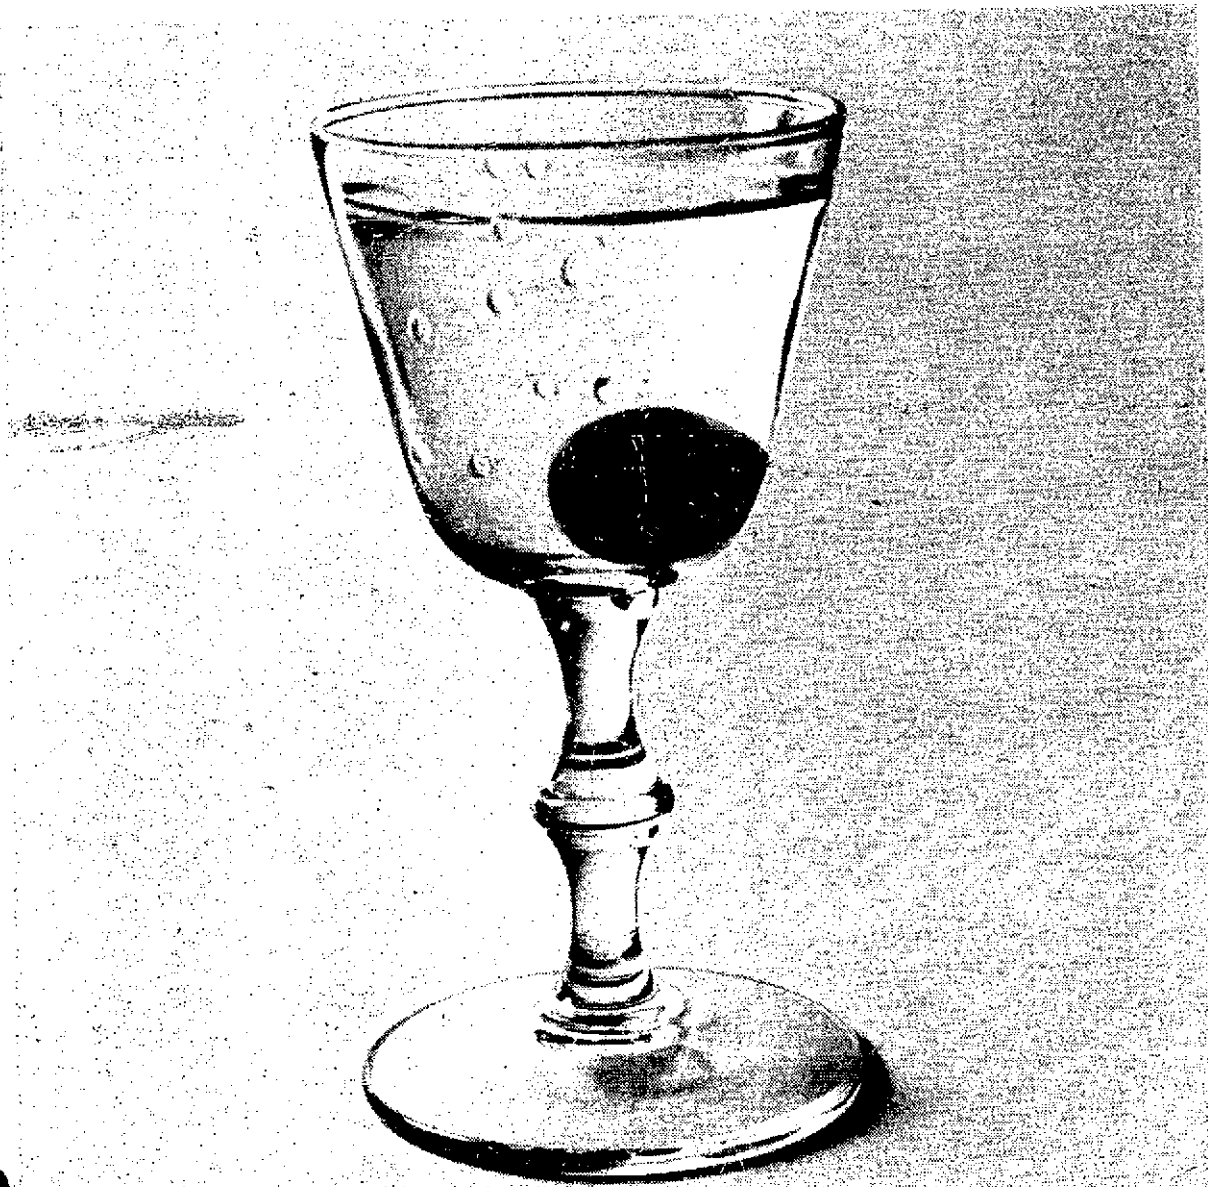

"Rescue at Entebbe," the spectacular story of the rescue of 103 hijacked hostages from Entebbe Airport in Uganda July 3-4, will be dramatized into a major motion picture by Academy Award winning director George Roy Hill as a Pan Arts presentation, it was announced by Universal Pictures.

The project was in development by Hill and Pan Arts, for Universal, moments after news was learned of the incredible rescue by the brilliant and daring Israeli Commandos.

Arrangements were finalized before the July 4 weekend concluded.

Hill won his "Oscar" for directing Universal's "The Sting," which took a total of seven Academy Awards including Best Picture. Hill also won the Directors Guild Award for Most Outstanding Directorial Achievement for directing "The Sting."

He is now completing postproduction work for Universal on "Slap Shot," which stars Paul Newman. Hill also directed "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," "The Great Waldo Pepper," "Slaughterhouse-Five," "The World of Henry Orient," "Hawaii."

THIS DRINK COULD COST YOU AN ARM AND A LEG.

That's what it cost a fine young actor, recently. And he wasn't drinking.

There's a chance it's also going to cost someone else plenty; the bar that served the drinks to the driver who hit the actor.

The court called it comparative negligence and awarded the actor a $1.9 million judgement.

But you're involved too, because there's a proposed law that says you may be responsible if someone gets in an accident after you've served him one too many in your own home!

This week, watch "The Million Dollar Martini," an Eyewitness Closeup with reporter Ann Martin. And find out why next time you pour one for the road, it better be coffee.

THE "EASY START" CHARCOAL LIGHTER LIGHTS CHARCOAL FAST!

NO LIGHTER FUEL NEEDED. . .

To the serious outdoor chef we offer a product that makes dangerous, expensive lighter fluid obsolete — a product that ends preparatory barbecue frustration forever — a product that works so well you will be amazed!

Stand STAINLESS STEEL "EASY START" in any grill, crumple two sheets newspaper in bottom, add charcoal and light paper. You will have searing hot coals in 10-12 minutes EVERY TIME. Then pull "EASY STARTS" removeable handle and WHITE HOT COALS will spread evenly over grill. It's just that easy. . you're ready to cook.

NO MORE CHEMICAL TASTE IN FOOD. NO MORE HAZARDS TO CHILDREN AND PETS. NO MORE FLARE UPS. NO MORE POKING HALF HOT CHARCOAL TO GET AN EVENLY LIT BED OF COALS. MUCH LESS CHARCOAL REQUIRED IN COOKING.

STAINLESS STEEL "EASY LIGHT" $11.95

Long form shows seen in future

By VAL ADAMS
New York News

NEW YORK— What will be the broad trends in TV programming 10 years from now? NBC has predicted that by 1985 half of the entertainment schedule "will consist of long-form programs," more made-for-TV films, mini-series and special events.

NBC also forecast that the notion of a new TV season, which usually occurs in September, will gradually fade away. Premieres of various shows will be scattered throughout the year.

Mention of the so-called "long-form programs" was a reference to a show that might be presented over a period of a few weeks, maybe three, four, five or six, depending on the property.

"LONGER forms in specials or shorter series have the advantage of attracting top actors, writers, producers and directors unwilling to commit to a continuing series," said the NBC soothsayers. "Television will be able to compete with theatrical motion pictures for literary rights by expanding the play hours of mini-series beyond the standard two hours."

NBC forecast that the day is not far off when television can no longer rely on theatrical motion pictures and must increase its production of TV movies.

"There will be new impetus to made-for-TV films," said NBC, "since the existing inventory of suitable motion pictures virtually depleted and new production is not likely to keep pace with television's past rate of usage."

The NBC projections were presented at the just-ended annual meeting of network affiliates in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. The chief soothsayers were William Rubens, vice president of research and corporate planning, and Alfred Ordover, vice president of corporate planning.

AMONG other things, Rubens and Ordover forecast that there will be an increasing demand for news and information on TV. A trend by viewers toward "conspicious cultivation" of names in the news, current events and cultural activities, they said, will lead viewers "more and more to news programs and talk and interview shows."

An expansion of early evening network news from its present 30-minutes to an hour is what NBC, also ABC and CBS, have long wanted to do. Another speaker at the affiliates meeting was Richard C. Wald, president of NBC News, who discussed the subject.

Should you buy before you sell, or sell before you buy?

Our GUARANTEED PURCHASE PLAN eliminates the risk of owning 2 houses at the same time.

Our PLAN puts YOU in the position of a CASH BUYER!

Frequently, the purchase of a home must coincide with the sale of the buyer's previous home. This often results in a contingency sale or seller refusing to sell under these conditions. The seller never really knows whether his home is sold or not, until the contingency is removed.

Walker & Lee's Guaranteed Purchase Plan was designed to solve this dilemma. We'll guarantee — in writing — to sell your home within a stipulated period of time, at full appraised value. We'll carefully itemize all costs of sale, so you'll know in advance the exact amount of your net equity. If we don't sell your home before the time period is up, we'll buy it — at the price guaranteed — and you'll have cash. You can select from any home available, without making a contingency offer. AND YOU'LL NEVER HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT OWNING TWO HOMES AND MAKING TWO PAYMENTS.

HOMES FOR SALE

Should you buy before you sell, or sell before you buy?

Our GUARANTEED PURCHASE PLAN eliminates the risk of owning 2 houses at the same time.

Our PLAN puts YOU in the position of a CASH BUYER!

Frequently, the purchase of a home must coincide with the sale of the buyer's previous home. This often results in a contingency sale or seller refusing to sell under these conditions. The seller never really knows whether his home is sold or not, until the contingency is removed.

Walker & Lee's Guaranteed Purchase Plan was designed to solve this dilemma. We'll guarantee — in writing — to sell your home within a stipulated period of time, at full appraised value. We'll carefully itemize all costs of sale, so you'll know in advance the exact amount of your net equity. If we don't sell your home before the time period is up, we'll buy it — at the price guaranteed — and you'll have cash. You can select from any home available, without making a contingency offer. AND YOU'LL NEVER HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT OWNING TWO HOMES AND MAKING TWO PAYMENTS.

Our GUARANTEED PURCHASE PLAN eliminates the risk of owning 2 houses at the same time.

Our PLAN puts YOU in the position of a CASH BUYER!

Frequently, the purchase of a home must coincide with the sale of the buyer's previous home. This often results in a contingency sale or seller refusing to sell under these conditions. The seller never really knows whether his home is sold or not, until the contingency is removed.

Walker & Lee's Guaranteed Purchase Plan was designed to solve this dilemma. We'll guarantee — in writing — to sell your home within a stipulated period of time, at full appraised value. We'll carefully itemize all costs of sale, so you'll know in advance the exact amount of your net equity. If we don't sell your home before the time period is up, we'll buy it — at the price guaranteed — and you'll have cash. You can select from any home available, without making a contingency offer. AND YOU'LL NEVER HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT OWNING TWO HOMES AND MAKING TWO PAYMENTS.

Should you buy before you sell, or sell before you buy?

Our GUARANTEED PURCHASE PLAN eliminates the risk of owning 2 houses at the same time.

Our PLAN puts YOU in the position of a CASH BUYER!

Frequently, the purchase of a home must coincide with the sale of the buyer's previous home. This often results in a contingency sale or seller refusing to sell under these conditions. The seller never really knows whether his home is sold or not, until the contingency is removed.

Walker & Lee's Guaranteed Purchase Plan was designed to solve this dilemma. We'll guarantee — in writing — to sell your home within a stipulated period of time, at full appraised value. We'll carefully itemize all costs of sale, so you'll know in advance the exact amount of your net equity. If we don't sell your home before the time period is up, we'll buy it — at the price guaranteed — and you'll have cash. You can select from any home available, without making a contingency offer. AND YOU'LL NEVER HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT OWNING TWO HOMES AND MAKING TWO PAYMENTS.

Games open—at cost of $1.5 billion

By RED SMITH
New York Times Service

MONTREAL — For the first time since the ancient Olympic Games were revived 80 years ago to encourage brotherhood among nations, country after country quit the global carnival in anger Saturday.

Nevertheless, Queen Elizabeth II of Britain formally opened the XXI Games on schedule and a capacity crowd of 70,000 in a huge, unfinished stadium cheered the gaudy spectacle arranged at an unprecedented cost of $1.5 billion.

For an hour and 10 minutes, Her Majesty stood erect with white-gloved hands folded across her pink skirt while athletes from 94 lands paraded past. Twenty-five other teams, with approximately 600 competitors, stayed away in political and social protest.

Then the Queen spoke, first in French and then in English, the prescribed 16 words:

"I declare open the Olympic Games of Montreal celebrating the XXI Olympiad of the modern era."

Folk Dancers celebrated the occasion; there were the customary speeches by Lord Killanin of Ireland, president of the International Olympic Committee, and Roger Rousseau, head of Montreal's Organizing Committee; cannon boomed; a flock of perhaps two dozen pigeons rose in ragged flight, and at long last the Olympic torch completed an electronic journey from the plains of Olympia.

The lighting of the flame is always the climax of the quadrennial opening ritual, and this time the torch's arrival in the stadium represented another first — a co-educational delivery of the fire. In the past, a single male runner has done the service, but Saturday the torch was borne by Stephane Prefontaine, a 15-year-old student in Montreal's Brebeuf College, and Sandra Henderson, 16, a tidy little gymnast who is in the 11th grade in Toronto.

The flame they carried had been lit by the rays of the sun and delivered by relay runners to Athens, where it was converted into electric impulses that were transmitted to Ottawa by satellite. There they activated a laser beam that rekindled the fire and once more relay runners took charge, turning it over to Stephane and Sandra outside the stadium.

Clutching the big torch together, they did half a lap around the track, climed to a temporary platform in the infield and lit a fire in a long-stemmed giant saucer there. Before competition begins today the flame will be moved to a tall urn just outside the running track to burn until the clambake ends on Aug. 1.

Spectators paid up to $40 for a seat in the three-tiered oval stands — unless they got tickets from scalpers and paid more — and they cheered boisterously as the marvellously colored pageant unfolded, yet there was a somber undertone through this day of sunshine and clouds. Since 1896, when Baron Pierre de Coubertin recreated the festivals of ancient Greece, the Olympics have seldom been altogether free of friction, but the bitter quarrels accompanying this renewal could create lasting harm to the notion that peoples who play together can live together in peace.

The defections were unscheduled, but the ceremonies followed a timetable as rigid as the royal succession. It was precisely 3 p.m. when a fanfare of trumpets signaled the arrival of Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh. Except for white gloves and pearls, the Queen was turned out entirely in flamingo pink, with green-stemmed doodads on her brimless pink hat.

The band played "O, Canada," and a rattle of applause raced around the massed stands. Over the public-address system came an announcement that Greece, the country where the Olympics originated, would lead the parade, as always. The announcement was to have included the exact number of countries here, but nobody knew what the number was. It was changed to "the parade of all the participating nations."

Then the Queen arose in the red-carpeted royal box and stood with gloved hands folded in front of her, while the multi-colored ranks marched and marched and marched and marched in review. Monarchies can be hard on royal feet.

Minding its manners, Greece dipped its flag politely passing the royal box, but after that it was catch-as-catch-can with respect to the formalities. (The United States should, traditionally, "dip to no earthly king," but might if an unearthly ruler were to surface.)

What happened is usually described, by authorities in these matters, as "a riot of color." The Saudi Arabians strode by costumed like Rudolph Valentino in "The Sheik." The Bulgarian flag-bearer, one Alexendre Tomov, was a stalwart brute who held the staff at arm's length in one massive fist.

The Cameroon's delegates wore ballooning blue kaftans with the cuffs of white pants showing be-

African nations stage boycott and the movement may grow

MONTREAL — Twenty-three African nations and one from Asia boycotted the opening ceremonies of the Olympics Games Saturday in a growing racial dispute that could extend through this competition and beyond.

Most of the absent countries, if not all, are expected to remain out of the Games unless an understanding can be reached on the question of future international competition with South Africa. Negotiations described by a highly placed source as "extremely delicate" were taking place Saturday night in an effort to solve the dispute.

If a settlement is not reached, the boycott could expand as the Games proceed. The issue is the presence in the Games of New Zealand, whose government has permitted sports relations with South Africa despite that country's racial separation policy and recent race riots.

It appeared that at least some African countries were out of the Games for good, regardless of the outcome of the talks with New Zealand. This group inclued Kenya, Tanzania, Nigeria and Zambia.

THE AFRICAN boycott Saturday consisted of 17 predominantly black nations, five Arab countries sympathetic to the cause and one Asian nation, Sri Lanka, formerly Ceylon. Also missing from the parade at Olympic Stadium, for a different reason, was Nationalist China, which withdrew rather than march under the unwanted designation of Taiwan.

Asked Saturday night if his country's protest would be continued, a spokesman for the Egyptian delegation said, "maybe not. We hope not. But we have wait and see."

"This protest is not limited to the opening ceremony or even the Olympic Games," another source said. "It will continue."

Support from other Arab, Asian and Caribbean countries also was believed to be developing.

Top Olympic officials from New Zealand conferred Saturday with several of the African leaders in an apparent effort to reach a reconciliation. But the talks were too late to prevent at least some of the countries from refusing to march in the opening parade.

"It's unfortunate this decision had to be made at the 11th hour," said Isaac Lugonzo, chairman of Kenya's National Sports Council. "But we cannot sacrifice principle for the sake of getting gold."

Kenya, with a delegation of 132, had several gold medal prospects among its 32 track and field athletes. Lugonzo, who flew here from Kenya Friday night, said flatly: "We will not align ourselves with a country that has sports ties with South Africa."

The withdrawals mean the Games would proceed without such athletes as John Akii-Bua of Uganda, the defending champion in the 400-meter hurdles; Mike Boit of Kenya, a favorite in the 800; Ethiopia's distance specialists Tua Eshetu and Miruts Yifter; Nigeria's 400-meter challengers, Dele Udo and Felix Amadiyi; and Tanzania's 1,500-meter ace Filbert Bayi who was supposed to face New Zealand's John Walker in one of the feature events of the Games.

Amost every men's track event from the 400 meters up had a possible medal winner from Africa. Besides Udo and Amadiyi in the 400, Stephen Chepkwony and Charles Asati of Kenya and Claver Kamanya of Tanzania were serious threats.

ETHIOPIA'S Eshetu won the steeplechase tuneup race last week and his team's Yohannes Mohammed had very strong times during the year. Boit and Sam Kipkurkat of Kenya were strong in the 800 and Boit was also a threat in the 1,500 with fellow Kenyan Wilson Waigwa and Haibu Ebba of Ethiopia.

The issue of black Africa vs. white-ruled South Africa, with New Zealand, completely overshadowed the departure of Nationalist China, which withdrew from the games Friday rather than officially call itself Taiwan. A handful of Taiwanese delegates checked out of their hotel almost unnoticed shortly before noon.

Much of the day's political drama took place in the Queen Elizabeth Hotel, where the International Olympic Committee held a morning session before going by bus at 1 p.m. to the main stadium for the opening ceremony.

At a noontime press briefing, Monique Berlioux of the IOC brushed off the African question with the comment that only one country, to her knowledge, had formally left Olympic Village. The reference was to Nigeria, which flew its team home Friday night on an airliner diverted from London.

Rhoden hurls, bats Dodgers over Chicago

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

Walter Alston planned to celebrate his 2,000th career victory Saturday night much the same way he celebrated the first 1,999.

"I'll have a good meal, go to bed and be on time for tomorrow's game," the 64-year-old Alston said after becoming only the sixth manager to win 2,000 games.

He reached the milestone as unbeaten Rick Rhoden was winning his ninth in a row this year, a come-from-behind 5-4 triumph over the Chicago Cubs before 37,642 Dodger Stadium fans, the Dodgers' fourth successive victory, seventh in their last nine and seventh in a row over the lowly Cubbies.

"I can recall only about a half-dozen of those 2,000 being laughers," Alston said as the Dodgers remained five games back of the Cincinnati Reds in the National League West.

"I'd trade a thousand of 'em for about 60 more wins this year and then maybe we'll have a good shot. That was our 50th win. I don't know how many it's going to take...109, 110, maybe more...but it's certainly going to take over 100 to beat the Reds."

After the first inning Saturday it appeared Alston's 2,000th win would have to come another day.

The Cubs jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first inning against the 23-year-old Rhoden on Rick Monday's 17th homer, coming on the first pitch of the game, and Steve Swisher's bases-loaded, three-run double.

But the Cubs' pitching being what it is—in a word, grim—the lead lasted less than four innings.

Rhoden himself put the Dodgers over the top with a two-run single in the fourth, his second hit of the game and 15th of the season.

The tall righthander found the groove after the shaky first inning, permitted the Cubs just three hits the rest of the way and struck out seven, high for his career. In his second full season in the majors he's 9-0.

What about 20 wins?

"I haven't thought too much about that," he said. "With a five-man rotation like we have it'll be pretty hard. I'll probably only have 15 or 16 more starts.

"All I'm interested in is winning enough for us to win the division. We're playing well now; as well as we've played all year."

The Dodgers started back against Steve Stone in the second with doubles by Steve Garvey and Dusty Baker for their first run.

In the third they scored two more runs with Rhoden's single triggering the rally. Dave Lopes followed with a double and Bill Buckner's scoring fly ball scored Rhoden. Reggie Smith then singled home Lopes.

The Dodgers loaded the bases with no outs in the fourth when Garvey, who had three of the Dodgers' nine hits, and Bill Russell opened with singles and Baker was hit by a pitch.

The South rises in Shrine, 28-20

By KEN PIVERNETZ
Staff Writer

The South took advantage of five interceptions and a half dozen North fumbles to win the 25th Shrine Game Saturday night, 28-20, at the Rose Bowl.

Despite the number of turnovers, a crowd of 37,842 got its money's worth offensively as the two all-star high school football teams totalled 764 yards.

The South was sparked by St. Paul quarterback Craig Johnston, who passed for 163 yards and one touchdown, plus Poly's Artie Hargrove, who led the Rebels in rushing with 93 yards on 13 carries.

The South scored twice in the first 10 minutes, then used that cushion and a third quarter 40-yard interception return by Louie Campos of San Pedro to snap a three-year drought against the North since the game was switched to an all-Southern California matchup.

Campos, a 210-pound defensive tackle, grabbed off a wobbly pass by San Fernando's Kenny Moore with 34 seconds remaining in the third period and rambled the distance to give his team a 21-14 lead. Moore was pressured by Ken Miller of Bell before he released the ball.

The South proceeded to put the game away the next time it had possession, driving 51 yards in 10 plays, Johnston capping the march by throwing six yards on fourth down to Vic Rakhshani of Edison.

Johnston was particularly effective in the first half when he threw for 150 of his eventual 163 yards.

Moore, bound for USC, scored twice for the North on runs of 51 and one yards.

Hargrove got his TD when he capped an 82-yard drive with the opening kickoff, scoring over right tackle from the one. Johnston completed four passes in the drive which consumed nearly six and one-half minutes.

Carson's Van Wiese set up the second south TD less than three minutes later, recovering a fumble at midfield.

Samoa Samoa immediately made the most of his first appearance at quarterback for the South, taking only three plays to get his team on the scoreboard.

Reds blitz Expos

CINCINNATI (AP) — Joe Morgan and George Foster drilled consecutive home runs in the the first inning, powering the Cincinnati Reds to a 4-1 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday night as rookie righthander Santo Alcala improved his record to 8-2.

Morgan slammed a three-run homer and Foster followed with a solo shot to key a four-run outburst off Woodie Fryman (8-7).

Alcala scattered five hits, including a solo homer by Andy Thornton in the second inning, as the Reds wrapped up their season series against the Expos by winning nine of 12 games.

The loss left Fryman with a 2-12 career mark against Cincinnati.

Alcala, who made the Reds' spring roster because his minor league options had expired this year, struck out seven Expos and walked four, while posting his second complete game of the season.

Royals win, but Hassler doesn't, 2-1

KANSAS CITY (AP) — George Brett, the American League's leading hitter, belted a Luis Tiant pitch into the right field bullpen leading off the ninth-inning Saturday, giving the Kansas City Royals a 2-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Tiant (10-7) held the Royals to six hits until Brett, batting .365, came through with his fifth homer of the year. Mark Littell relieved Andy Hassler at the start of the sixth inning and struck out five while running his record to 6-3.

The Royals, leaders in the American League West, scratched out one run off Tiant in the fourth when Amos Otis singled and scored on John Mayberry's double. Boston tied it in the sixth on two walks and a single by Rick Burleson.

Brett raised his major league-leading batting average to .366.

"The more we play, the better we think we are," Brett said of his Royal teammates who increased their lead to 10 games over Texas.

Brett leads the league in hits, 128; total bases, 176; slugging percentage, .501; and triples, nine. He says he could hit more homers if he was inclined to do so.

"I like to use the whole field," he said. "I don't go for homers. I try to hit the ball where it's pitched."

Hassler pitched well enough to win but, by getting no decision, remains periously close to one of sports' most embarrassing records.

His 17 consecutive losses, dating back to April 29, 1975, are just two short of the American League record. He had a 1-0 lead when he left in the sixth inning with a slight muscle pull.

If Littell had shut out the Sox the rest of the way, Hassler would have received the win. But he didn't.

Tanana wins 11th as Angels roll, 7-3

BALTIMORE (AP) — Bruce Bochte, Dave Chalk and Tommy Davis each drove in two runs, leading the Angels to a 7-3 victory Saturday night which snaped a five-game losing streak and ended Baltimore's winning streak at six.

An infield out by Bochte and Chalk's single accounted for two runs in the second inning, and both drove in runs with singles in the fourth for a 4-0 lead.

The Angels, who had lost eight in a row to the Orioles, tallied three more in the fifth on two bunt singles, three stolen bases, an RBI single by Bobby Bonds and a two-run safety by Davis.

Frank Tanana (11-6) benefited from an 11-hit attack in the first 4 1-3 innings against loser Rudy May (6-7) and Ross Grimsley. Rookie Fred Holdsworth, Baltimore's third pitcher, retired 14 in a row in his major league debut.

Lee May hit his 15th home run in the fourth for Baltimore after the Angels allowed Reggie Jackson's pop fly to fall for a single. Jackson doubled home a run in the fifth.

Hits by Davis and Ron Jackson launched the first rally against May, who has yet to win for Baltimore since being acquired a month ago from the New York Yankees in a 10-player deal.

With two out in the fourth, Dan Briggs doubled and scored on Bochte's single. Bochte took second on the throw to the plate and Chalk's RBI single finished May.

Dave Collins and Jerry Remy beat out bunts to open the Angel fifth and moved up on a double steal. Bonds singled to score Collins, stole second and Davis followed with hs two-run single.

Tanana, 6-2 lifetime against Baltimore, hurled his third consecutive complete game. The lefthander, who ranks second to teammate Nolan Ryan among major league strikeout leaders, fanned six to run his total to 136 while spacing eight hits.

The Angels will send another southpaw, Sid Monge, against the Orioles today in an attempt to earn a split of the four-game set. Monge, 4-3, will be opposed by Dave Pagan, 2-3, and KTLA, Ch. 5, will provide a telecast at 11 a.m., PDT.

Following the Baltimore series, the Angels move on to Milwaukee for a twi-night doubleheader Monday against the Brewers. Another single game with Milwaukee follows Tuesday night before the Angels end the trip at Cleveland Wednesday and Thursday.

Error helps A's, 3-0

DETROIT (AP) — Oakland scored two runs on throwing errors by Detroit catcher Bruce Kimm and rookie Mike Norris fired a no-hitter for 5 2-3 innings and wound up with his third victory as the A's blanked the Tigers 3-0 Saturday night.

Although walking six batters and hitting another, Norris didn't give up a hit until a two-out double by Willie Horton in the sixth inning. Norris (3-2) gave up a single in the seventh and was relieved in the eighth by Rollie Fingers after giving up a leadoff single to Ron LeFlore.

Oakland scored in the opening inning off Vern Ruhle (5-6) when Claudell Washington walked, Don Baylor singled and Kimm threw wildly to third on a double steal, allowing Washington to score.

Indians' Waits blanks Twins, 4-0

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Rick Waits pitched his first major league shutout, a four-hitter Saturday night, sparking the Cleveland Indians to a 4-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

The 24-year-old southpaw struck out eight, walked four and was helped by three double plays. Waits (3-4) faced only four batters over the minimum while going the distance for the first time this season.

Cleveland scored its first two runs without an RBI. The Indians scored in the first inning on a double play ground ball and added an unearned run in the fourth off losing pitcher Pete Redfern (2-6).

Rick Manning tripled in Frank Duffy in the Indians' ninth and scored on a shallow fly ball to right field when outfielder Dan Ford uncorked a wild throw to the plate.

Duffy had three singles to lead the Indians' 11-hit attack.

Minnesota recorded three double plays in a game watched by 22,290 fans on OldTimers Night.

The Indians loaded the bases in the first inning with no outs on two walks by Redfern and a Duffy single. However, they scored only one as Rico Carty bounced into a double play and George Hendrick grounded to short.

Cleveland added an unearned run in the fourth when Carty scored on a throwing error by Smalley.

Yankees win fifth in row

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Graig Nettles pounded three hits, including a double and a homer, and drove in three runs as the New York Yankees beat Texas 7-5 Saturday night for their fifth consecutive victory and the Rangers' 10th consecutive defeat.

Nettles doubled to climax a two-run first inning, singled and later scored in the third and hit his 13th homer with a man on in the fifth. The Yankee third baseman also had two RBI in New York's 3-0 win Friday night.

Nettles homer down the right field line came off Texas reliever Mike Bacsik, who replaced starter and loser Steve Barr (2-5) in the second inning.

Dock Ellis (11-4) pitched 6 1-3 innings of five-hit ball to notch the victory, his seventh in a row after four successive losses. Dick Tidrow picked up his third save in four-games by retiring Jeff Burroughs with the bases loaded in the seventh.

He was racked for four runs in the ninth on four hits, including a three-run homer by Mike Hargrove, his fifth of the year, and a run-scoring triple by Roy Howell.

Thurman Munson, the All-Star catcher making a rare appearance in the outfield, singled home Mickey Rivers in both the first and second innings as New York scored in four of the first five innings to take a commanding 6-0 lead.

The victory boosted New York's East Division lead to 12 games over second-place Baltimore.

Montefusco stifles Phils

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — John Montefusco pitched a five-hitter and Larry Herndon hit a tw-run single Saturday, leading the San Francisco Giants to a 4-1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Herndon's single came with the bases loaded in the second inning against Philadelphia starter Tom Underwood (5-2) and gave the Giants a 3-0 lead. Montefusco (8-8) struck out five batters without a walk.

The Phillies' only run came in the sixth on Dave Cash's infield single and Larry Bowa's triple.

Singles by Bobby Murcer, Ken Reitz and Chris Speier in the second produced San Francisco's first run. Another infield hit by Reitz scored Gary Matthews in the third.

The Phillies had gone scoreless for 17 consecutive innings before getting their run off Montefusco.

The performance by Ed Halicki, who shut out Philadelphia on Friday, gave the San Francisco pitching staff its first complete-game victories of the season.

Montefusco faced the minimum of 12 batters through the firt four innings. The Giants completed double plays behind him in both the fourth and fifth innings.

Montefusco had been belted by the Phillies in two previous starts, yielding eight runs in 11 innings.

Andujar outduels Seaver

NEW YORK (AP) — Cesar Cedeno smacked a solo homer, his 15th of the season, with two out in the first inning, and Houston rookie Joaquin Andujar outdueled Tom Seaver as the Astros beat the New York Mets, 1-0.

Cedeno's drive hit just above the orange line on the brick wall adjacent to the visiting team's bullpen in left field.

The loss lowered Seaver's record to 9-6 and was his first after four consecutive wins. Seaver last lost on June 9.

Andujar, now 6-5, allowed only two runners to get past first base as he set the Mets down on five hits.

Besides Cedeno, only one other Astro got as far as second base against Seaver, who pitched a three-hitter for eight innings.

Shua tops Lakewood

John White lost his no-hitter and shutout in the final inning Saturday at Millikan High but still held on to the victory as the Shua Rockets bested Lakewood, 3-1, in American Legion play.

Mark Wedel paced the Shua offense with a pair of hits and one RBI.

Gilbert Mendoza hurled a five-hitter while collecting two hits and three RBI in San Pedro's 9-2 win over Carson at Harbor JC. Mendoza fanned five and walked two in going the distance.

Terrence Carney and Phil Todd combined on a two-hitter to lead Alamitos Bay past the N.L.B. Panthers, 4-1, at Blair Field.

Carney had a no-hitter with one out in the fifth inning before a double, single and a pair of walks with two out forced him out of the game. Todd came on to record the third out and blank the Panthers the rest of the way.

Jim Wendell was 3-for-4 and scored twice to lead the Alamitos attack.

Motor Patrol picked up a forfeit victory over Peterson in a second Blair field contest.

OWNERS EXPECTED TO RATIFY PACT

Associated Press

Owners of the 24 major league baseball teams are expected to ratify a four-year contract Monday—with the players following suit later in the week—leaving the National Football League as the only major sports league whose players are not under contract.

Neither baseball nor players' union officials see any major roadblocks.

"I believe, as the commissioner has already said, he feels optimistic it will be ratified," a spokesman in commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office said.

"But the only real positive answer in terms of what's going to happen is to hang on until Monday," he said. "Until then, it's really hard to say."

Marvin Miller, executive director of the baseball players union, said he had talked to about a dozen players since the owners' meeting last week but mostly to answer questions.

Henderson's HR lifts Braves over Pirates

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ken Henderson hit a three-run homer and Atlanta pitcher Dick Ruthven snapped Pittsburgh's four-game win streak by scattering 10 hits to lead the Braves past Pittsburgh 10-2 Saturday.

It was the first win for Ruthven (11-8) in three decisions this season against Pittsburgh.

Henderson started the rout in the first inning when he hit one of Bruce Kison's fastballs off the foul pole screen in left field with Rowland Office and Willie Montanez aboard on a single and a walk.

The Braves scored two unearned runs in the second, a single run in the third and four more in a four-hit fifth inning which included doubles by Darrel Chaney and Biff Pocoroba.

Ruthven's bid for a shutout was ended in the eighth when Frank Taveras beat out and infield single, went to second on a balk, stole third and scored on a double by Rennie Stennett. Stennett came home on Willie Stargell's single.

Henderson's homer, his eighth of the season, came with two out after Office singled and Kison walked Montanez on a 3-2 pitch.

Denny in 4-hitter; Padres fall again

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Righthander John Denny hurled a four-hitter Saurday to spark the St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-1 National League victory over the San Diego Padres.

Denny struck out three and walked two en route to his fourth complete game as he improved his record to 5-4.

Second baseman Mike Tyson led a 13-hit Cardinal attack against five Padres pitchers with four singles and an RBI.

The loss was the seventh in a row for the Padres, marking their longest losing streak of the season.

Denny held San Diego scoreless until two were out in the ninth.

Hegan, Colborn pace Brewers over Chisox

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Hegan drove in three runs with a two-run homer and a sacrifice fly and Jim Colborn shackled Chicago on seven hits Saturday night to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 9-2 victory over the White Sox.

Hegan slugged his second homer of the year in the sixth inning after Darrell Porter had walked.

Sixto Lezcano's two-run double keyed a three-run second inning that put the Brewers ahead after Jorge Orta had homered to give the White Sox a 1-0 lead.

Rich Gossage (5-8) was the loser, giving up six runs in six innings.

Colborn, 6-10, allowed four hits in the first three innings before retiring 11 batters in a row until Brian Downing broke the spell in the seventh with a single.

The Brewers added two more runs in the eighth on Hegan's sacrifice fly and a run-scoring single by Yount. They completed the scoring when Porter drove in a run with a triple in the ninth.

Jorge Orta put the White Sox ahead in the first inning with his 11th homer, but the Brewers took the lead with three runs in the top of the second, with Lezcano driving in the last two.

Tim Shaw: Only one shot at gold and glory

By DAVE WIELENGA
Staff Writer

MONTREAL — A few months ago Tim Shaw could have legitimately considered changing his name — to Tim Shah.

The blond 18-year-old from Long Beach virtually ruled the world in the art of freestyle swimming with world records at distances of 200, 400 and 1,500 meters.

During last month's United States Olympic Trials at the Long Beach Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool, the spelling could have been changed again — this time to Tim Pshaw.

The former Wilson High wonder was suddenly beset with a pair of maladies that were cruel in their untimeliness. A shoulder injury and a mysterious case of anemia not only forced him to surrender the last of his world marks but pushed him precariously close to missing the Olympic team entirely.

People with over-eager memories of 1972 had already picked out Shaw's new name for the XXI Olympiad — he was to be christened another Mark Spitz. Instead of a shot at a pocket full of golds, however, Shaw's Olympic hopes now rest solely in the 400-meter freestyle.

The Sullivan Award winner would be happier with a bit more activity.

"It's harder when you're entered in only one event," he said, "because you know that when you jump in the pool it's your only chance.

"Coach (James) Counsilman doesn't want me to go into it cold on Thursday so he's having me swim one of the legs in the 800-meter relay preliminary the day before. Also, that will give one of our guys a little more rest for the relay final Wednesday night."

Yet Shaw is not lamenting his situation, only dissapointed that he could not perform up to his usual level during the Olympic Trials.

"I'm not dissapointed in myself because I wasn't expecting anything," he said. "At the trials guys always come out of the woodwork and turn in great marks. It wasn't going to be easy to make the team in any case."

Now that he has reached Montreal, his goal is obvious.

"To win," Shaw stated quickly. "I'm going to swim for first place. Everyone should do that. No one should swim for second."

According to qualifying times, victory should not prove especially elusive in Shaw's preliminary race Thursday morning. A Hungarian, Zoltan Wladar, carries a clocking of 3:59.30 but that is almost five seconds slower than Shaw's qualifying effort of 3:53.50 in which he chased teammate Brian Goodell to the world record.

The final on Thursday evening will be another matter but at least Shaw knows where his competition lies.

"The Americans," he said. "Goodell (3:53.00) and Casey Converse (3:53.70) are the guys to beat. Steve Holland (3:57.10) of Australia might also be in there."

However, Shaw refused to predict what kind of time will be necessary to win.

"The time doesn't matter. World records don't matter either, especially in the Olympics. World records can be achieved on any day, at any time. You can win an Olympic gold medal only once every four years."

Despite his determination, Shaw remains a question mark. Has his anemia had any lingering effects? What kind of emotional toll has been taken by his recent hardships? And isn't an Olympiad a treacherous place to attempt a comeback?

"There is no problem with anemia," Shaw insisted. "It's been completely cured with a series of iron shots. I've been swimming well and feeling good.

"I don't think I'm making a comeback," he continued. "I got second place to a world record time in the Olympic Trials so I don't have to make a comeback."

Shaw did admit to experiencing some doubts in himself during his illness, doubts that prompted thoughts of retirement.

"This year it came very close to not being fun anymore," he said. "I was sick and I didn't know it so I worked harder and harder but kept going slower. I couldn't understand it. I thought about quitting after the Olympics because I'll never continue swimming when it is no longer fun."

Now, however, the Long Beach State sophomore-to-be is even entertaining thoughts of the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

"I would like to compete in either swimming or water polo," he said, "but I'll just have to do my best and wait and see what happens."

That is also Shaw's plan for his races Thursday.

"It's the most anyone can ask," he said.

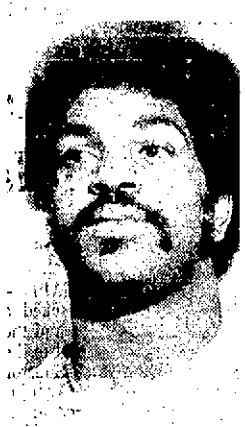

France recalls life with Woody, talks of future

Doug France twice quit the Ohio State football team during the 1973 season because he thought Woody Hayes wasn't being fair to him. Today he is heir-apparent to retired Charlie Cowan as starting Ram offensive tackle.

The primary virtue of the 6-5, 275-pounder during the bad times and the good was confidence. The Dayton, Ohio, native exudes more confidence than Jimmy Carter.

"Taking Charlie Cowan's spot, I know everyone's gonna be looking at me," said Doug during the first week of Ram drills at Fullerton. "Last year when I replaced Charlie when he was hurt, the coaches knew he'd be back. Now it's different.

"People will be trying to press me for the job, but they've gotta work for it because I'm gonna be pressing, too. But this time I've got the lead.

DOUG FRANCE

"I don't think Charlie would have left if he didn't know I was ready for his job."

THREE SETS of people are responsible for France's confidence—Ralph Staub, his Ohio State line coach ("some coaches can't and don't communicate, but he did and really helped me"), his wife, Laura ("she understands my moods"), and his parents.

"Without my parents I probably wouldn't be at the level I am today," claimed Doug. "I quit Ohio State in my junior year, but they talked me into going back. In spring practice I was the starting tackle, but when I returned for fall practice I was second-string tight end.

"I thought that was unfair because I knew I was good enough to be a starter, so I quit before the season even started.

"But when I returned, the situation got worse, so I quit again. I got on a bicycle and headed for Canada. My parents talked me into returning a second time, but Woody Hayes said something that made an impression on me, too.

"He said, 'It's not what you're running from, but what you're running to, that's important.' He was right, but I was second string all season, both at tackle and tight end. Looking back, I guess I opened my mouth too much."

FRANCE HAS mixed feelings about Woody.

"Woody is strictly a football coach, nothing else," sighed Doug. "He has no time for anything but football. After games, he'd lock himself in a room and look at films, and we wouldn't see him until practice Monday.

"We thought after a game that he could talk with us and see how we were doing. I thought we should have seen him more. Out of fear, we thought we weren't supposed to talk with him.

"He does a lot for people, though. Like walking on the campus and stopping a fight, or calling Nixon and saying he's on Nixon's side when nobody else is.

"He's got so many good points, but so many bad ones, too. He's something else."

WHY, THEN, did France go to Ohio State?

"My parents liked Woody. They really liked him! He lets parents know that he'll make their kids go back to college if they don't get a degree in four years. He lets them know their son will get an education, no matter what. Parents think he's neat.

"He came to my house and to my high school, and THAT impressed me. I didn't feel the same after I got to Ohio State, but Woody sure gets you started great.

"In a few years I'd really like to go back and talk to him. I'm too young now. He respects older people who have done something, but he doesn't listen to kids."

THE 23-YEAR-OLD France was an all-Big 10 tight end his senior year, but he's glad the Rams assigned him to the interior line.

"I'd rather play where I am," said Doug, who bought a house in Westminster for Laura and their daughter, Kristin, nine months. "I didn't catch enough passes at tight end, anyway. I was the biggest tight end in football, so all they let me do was block.

"As a tight end, I felt my name should always be in the paper. As offensive tackle, I know it won't be in the paper much. In fact, my wife is trying to fill a scrapbook and she's having trouble.

"I knew the Rams had Bob Klein, too, so they didn't need me at tight end. It's a better thing for me to battle inside.

"I always wanted to be a fullback, though. I really enjoyed that position as a sophomore in high school when I was 6-5 and 230. I powered over people. I admire ball carriers and I love to see them in film highlights. It's neat watching the backs run with the ball."

DID FRANCE learn anything from Cowan?

"A whole lot," was the reply. "We talked a lot and I learned also just by watching Charlie. The way he finessed people was something. It'd be a completely different ball game for me today without Charlie's help.

"I have to do my job step by step, though. I know I can't be up there with Charlie right now because you can't get 15 years in one year.

"Good attitude and performances by Dennis Harrah (Joe Scibelli's heir-apparent) and myself will help the whole team. Players on other teams will say, 'Those two young guys are doing their job,' and they won't think that the Rams have been weakened because Cowan and Scibelli are gone."

FRANCE FEELS he's off to a better start in camp this year than last season.

"I started off too slow last year. I was working every play at three- quarter speed. I tried to pace myself. But now I've started faster and am going 110 per cent on every play.

"I came into camp a little heavy (287), but I'm down to 280 and will be 275. I'm eating only salads, and that's doing it. (Note: For what it's worth, the Ram media guide lists Doug's weight at 260.)

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

"But I'm ready to step into the starting lineup regularly. I feel the coaches are confident about me, too, or else they wouldn't have let Charlie retire."

BRAINS, NOT brawn entirely, is the big difference Doug sees between college and pro ball.

"At Ohio State we ran over people. You can't do that in the pros. There's more to it than that. All we did at Ohio State was run the ball down the opponents' throats. You have to think in the pros."

France has a commendable, though mind-staggering, goal: To change the United States!

"It's a big goal and I know by the time it is reached that I'll be 85 or 90 years old, or dead," conceded Doug. "But I want to get kids when they're young and teach them right from wrong, and how people can live together.

"We raised whites on one side of the street and blacks on the other side. Now that we're communicating, we're still not getting along.

"We pick a president, then tear him down. That's not right.

"If I get people to feel that they're good and can communicate with each other, the whole world will be better. Being a good person is more important than being a big star."

The Rams are confident they have both in Doug France.

Montreal

CHINA FLAG 'SCHEME' IS REJECTED

MONTREAL (AP) — A scheme to smuggle a Republic of China flag into the Olympic Stadium and carry it in Saturday's opening ceremony was scrapped at the last minute.

A source close to the Nationalist Chinese Delegation, which has left Montreal, said five men, two of them Americans, had offered $100,000 if two Chinese agreed to the plan. The plan was rejected as being too political, said the source, who asked that his name not be used.

"They would have been wearing American uniforms and they would have been carrying the Chinese flag on a umbrellatype pole," said the source.

" They would have been at the back of the U.S. delegation and once they got into the stadium they would have slowed down until there was a gap and then they would have shot the flag up the pole."

The source said the plan was developed by persons unconnected to the Taiwan delegation.

Fear, complacency stalk swim squad

MONTREAL (AP)—The American men will be fighting complacency and the American women will be fighting fear as the two halves of the United States' swimming team find themselves in different power positions at the 21st Olympic games.

The swimming competition begins today with heats and semifinals in the women's 100-meter freestyle, the men's 100-meter backstroke and heats and finals in the men's 200-meter butterfly and the women's 400-meter medley relay.

On paper and in the minds of most nations, the American men are the dominating force with a good opportunity to improve their performance of 1972, when they won nine gold medals, seven in events swum by Mark Spitz. The women, however, find themselves in the position of the underdogs for the first time since the late 1950s.

The American men have six world record holders on the team, including Brian Goodell and John Hencken, who each have a pair of world marks. The American women, winners of eight gold medals at Munich, only have one world record holder, Shirley Babashoff, who will be competing in five individual events and two relays.

THE EAST German women, who have never won an Olympic gold medal in swimming, stand a good chance of winning nearly all of them this time. They hold world records in 12 of the 13 Olympic events and are led by super sprinter Kornelia Ender, qualifying to compete in three individual events and two relays.

Miss Ender is so versatile and good that she will not be competing in the backstroke, an event in which she held the world record at 100 meters earlier this year.

One American woman admitted that several swimmers on the team fear the East Germans, but U.S. coach Jack Nelson won't concede anything.

"On paper, East Germany comes in as top dog," he said. "But races aren't decided on paper. They're decided between the blocks.

"Undoubtedly, this is the greatest women's swimming team in the history of the United States."

Olympic shooters are up in arms

MONTREAL (AP) — Olympic shooters are up in arms because they say they are being treated more like potential assassins than athletes.

"We are having two kinds of games here—Olympic Games and police games," complains Dr. Jules Sobrian of Omemee, Ontario, a general practitioner who specializes in rapid fire pistol for the Canadian team.

Doc Counsilman, coach of the U.S. men's team, feels the same way about his entourage.

"I feel this is probably the best international team we've ever had," he said. "We have a potential winner in every event. In the past, we've had superstars. Now we have much greater depth. There isn't even a single event in which we won't be contenders.

"I anticipate the men will win half the gold medals and lots of silver and bronze, too."

THE WORLD records that survive this blitz by the American men and the East German women will be the exception, rather than the rule. Counsilman said he expects every men's mark to fall, except Mark Spitz' standard in the 100-meter butterfly.

Spitz set the 100 butterfly record at Munich, one of four world records he established in individual races. He also swam on three record-setting relay teams.

No one willl win seven gold medals here, although Miss Babashoff, a 19-year-old student at Golden West College, will swim in seven events. Miss Ender will be in five events and backstroke king John Naber probably five.

But the domination of the Olympic Games is not likely to come from one man or one woman. It will come from two teams: The American men and the East German women.

Earl McCullouch: Rams give him second chance

RICH ROBERTS

"I've got another chance to start over again, and with a different outlook. There's no way I'd be back out here if I didn't think I could do it." — Earl McCullouch.

Many performers have lost by playing it safe, later to rue the day. Others have won by disdaining caution.

But what of the competitors who failed for trying too hard? There must be room somewhere in sport's hall of fame for the glorious failures, the flops of gung ho.

Maybe Joe Frazier shouldn't have tried to trade punches with George Foreman, a bigger, younger and stronger fighter. But wasn't Joe's effort magnificent?

Sixty-four years later, race fans still speak of Ralph DePalma futilly pushing his crippled race car toward the finish line at Indianapolis.

Aside from the carnival aroma, give Evel Knievel credit for allowing himself to be shot into the bottom of a canyon aboard a two-wheeled rocket he called a motorcycle.

If you attended the 1968 U.S. Olympic track and field trials in the Coliseum, you must remember Earl McCullouch, who at the time was the world's best hurdler.

RUMORS WERE about that Earl the Pearl, also a football star at Long Beach's Poly High, City College and USC, would sign a pro football contract with the Detroit Lions if he didn't qualify. The Lions had drafted him on the first round six months earlier. There was speculation that McCullouch would sign even if he did qualify, forfeiting a trip to Mexico City.

"I was determined that day to break the world record," says Earl. "I never liked running on that track, but I was trying to make up my mind whether to sign and I knew it might be my last race.

"I came out of the blocks real well, and I guess I was running so fast that when I came up on the eighth hurdle I caught it with my spikes as I was coming up."

McCullouch looked like a man who had stumbled into a bicycle in the dark. He didn't quite fall down, but by the time he recovered his balance the field had caught up—from about 10 yards behind—and he jogged in last.

"With the winning time 13.6, I think I would have run 13-flat that day," Earl says. "But I thought, being close to signing, if this is the way to go out, then I'm going out."

EARL DID SIGN then, of course, and became the National Football League's rookie of the year by catching 40 passes for the Lions.

But eight years later, those 40 receptions are still a career high, and so his athletic career has circled back to the Rams' training camp at Cal State Fullerton.

Released by the Lions after the strike in 1974, dropped after a three-game stint with New Orleans and unredeemed by a partial season as a player-coach with the Portland Thunder of the defunct World Football League, McCullouch is striving mightily to fight his way back from injury at the shaky age of 30. As always, he's giving it his best shot.

"I tore a quad muscle up in Portland last season," he says, tenderly rubbing a leg. "I went to George Gish, a physical therapist in Long Beach, and he worked me strenuously this past off-season.

"We got my leg feeling pretty good so I said, 'Well, I might as well go give it a try.' A month ago I worked out with the Rams and I was running real well."

CHUCK KNOX and assistant Lee Bennett, the receivers coach, both were with McCullouch at Detroit, along with trainer Gary Tuthill:

Earl says, "Tuthill was telling me this week, 'Hey, for an old man you still run pretty good.' "

Norm Pollom, the Rams' longtime scout who is now director of personnel, recalls giving McCullouch the 40-yard test at USC.

"I never clocked anybody as fast as Earl McCullouch," Pollom says. "I timed him in 4.4—and don't believe all those 4.3s and other 4.4s you hear about. I remember it well because O.J. (Simpson) came over and said he could run that fast. I said, 'Okay, let's see.' I got him three straight times in 4.5."

McCullouch smiles.

"I remember that day. Of course, 4.4 was back when I'd just got through working out for track. But my speed right now is not bad. I'm probably running 4.5 or 4.55—right in there.

"Even though I'm 30, I feel I've never had a chance to play the way I'm capable of playing. Now I've got another chance to start over again, and with a different outlook. There's no way I'd back out here if I didn't think I could do it.

"Like I told Chuck, 'I'm gonna give you my all.' When you get older, your muscles get sore and it takes you longer to recover than when you're 22 or 23. But I feel it's in the mind, too."

EARL BELIEVES his 30-year-old head might give him an edge over all those flashy rookies with the 20-year-old legs.

"If you've got experience on your side you react subconsciously to certain situations. When you're first coming in, you're trying to grasp things—plus, I feel I've still got a lot of speed left."

McCullouch does not believe he is conning himself, as he was when he attempted a hurdling comback with the professional ITA two years ago.

"I'd been working out and I felt good," he says, "but when you're off for six years without going over a hurdle you just can't come back that fast."

He ran one race—or part of a race—in a meet at the L.A. Sports Arena.

"I tried to run just on instinct," he says. "I felt good for two or three hurdles, I was in the lead . . . but then my form got kind of ragged."

McCULLOUCH'S BID with the Rams is a far more serious venture.

"I'm not in the best financial situation," he admits. "I lost money in the stock market—so many people have—and I've spent money unwisely. Sometimes you don't listen to advice or you don't see the picture. Again, experience is the best teacher."

But he does have other prized assets.

"Three beautiful children and a beautiful wife, Peggy. We just moved back to Long Beach. I lived out in Westminster for about six months and got a chance to do most of my thinking. I'm going to be around the city now and hope to stay there and find something to do in the off-season.

"Being back out here is good. Things weren't so good back in Detroit . . . the cold weather, and I didn't see us going anywhere."

The Lions have finished second in the NFC Central the last seven seasons.

"I love to win," Earl says. "I come from winning schools—Poly, LBCC, USC. It's imbedded in me. I know it's going to be tough. I'll be sore, I'll get tired and I'll be hurtin'.

"But I'm not slacking up at all. I've come to play."

Activity brisk in village despite fences, firearms

N.Y. Times Service

MONTREAL — In its mod architecture, the Olympic Village resembles four stairways to the stars. Its pretty hostesses in candy-striped blouses try to project that image with their cheery "Bonjour" to everyone. But here in "V.O.," short for Village Olympique, reality is only a glance away.

On the lawn inside the 10-foot wire fence that surrounds its 45 acres, Canadian soldiers in green uniforms patrol in pairs with carbines slung over their shoulders. At the entrances, residents and visitors with dog-tag identification check in through airport-type security.

The memory of the massacre of the Israelis at Munich has created the largest military operation in Canada since the Korean conflict. On a map in the Village's police headquarters, the positions of various policemen and soldiers are marked by yellow, blue, red and green pins.

Many of those pins were shifted to positions inside and outside the Olympic Stadium Saturday for the opening ceremonies.

The security is obviously necessary. Politics also has provoked several nations to depart. But for more than 8,000 athletes and officials who are lodged here, the Olympic Village appears to hum with the "joie de vivre" that appears on the Province of Quebec travel posters. On the walkways, the athletes are in sweat suits of all colors. They seem to be in a perpetual hurry — to go to a workout, to eat, to nap, even to loaf.

On a grassy rise, a dark-haired Spaniard is playing a guitar. Off by herself, a golden-haired Swedish girl is sunbathing. Others splash in the indoor pool that avoids sunburn.

ON HIS WAY TO LUNCH, Quinn Buckner, the Indiana University playmaker who is the captain of the U.S. basketball team, is talking about how the United States hopes to regain the gold medal. He has been the captain of his team in high school, college and now the Olympics.

"Will you be the Milwaukee Bucks' captain too?" he is asked.

"They haven't mentioned it yet," Buckner says, smiling. In the free 24-hour cafeteria, a hostess in a green T-shirt directs athletes to the shortest line in the 12 service areas. On the lunch menu Saturday was tomato bouillon, cream of mushroom soup, assorted hors d'oeuvres such as herring in tomato sauce, grilled minced steak, roast chicken leg, fishcakes with egg sauce, lasagna, lamb stew, butterscotch pudding and fresh strawberries.

"We serve 40,000 meals a day," Jean-Francois Seaher, the food production manager, is saying. "We can serve 7,000 an hour."

About 18,000 pounds of food are consumed each day. It is prepared by 150 cooks. But there are no special meals.

"We sent out the menus to all the countries a long time ago and they approved them," Seaher says. "About the only thing we do different is that the rice is cooked with bottled spring water, not tap water. And we have a special spaghetti from Italy that we will serve twice. But we serve it to everybody. If we make something, it is for everybody, not one. About the only complaint we have had so far is that the food is too good, that they are eating too much"

NOT FAR AWAY is the clinic with 40 hospital beds. This is also the site of the doping control center for the athletes.

"We are testing for steroids," says Adrian Alix, a McGill University medical student, "But we have found no violations yet."

In the basement, there are free do-it-yourself laundry rooms, each with 40 washing machines and four ironing boards. While the machines churn, a huge Bulgarian, perhaps a weight lifter, is ironing his sweat suit. Next to him a tiny Panamian, perhaps a boxer, is ironing a pair of shorts.

"But some of them put their wash in the machine and do not return until the next day," the attendant, Noelline Bellemare, is saying. "That is very bad."

Also in the basement area are the offices of the various delegations. In the Soviet office, marked "USSR" near the open door, a framed portrait of Lenin stares down from above the red flag with a gold hammer and sickle. On another wall are two posters for the Moscow Olympics in 1980, already awarded to the Soviet capital. Iran hopes to be awarded the 1984 Olympics, but in the Iranian offices, a dark-haired receptionist smiles.

"We have no literature," she says. "It is not ours yet."

"I thought you might be campaigning," a man suggests. "We are a monarchy," she said. "We do not campaign."

ON THE 20 FLOORS of the high rise, the athletes are lodged in 980 apartments. On the balconies, clothes are drying in the sun. There are 12 bunks in the largest apartments, five in the smallest. It's cramped, with no real privacy. As a result, the athletes don't spend much time in their rooms.

On the patio of the Soviets' floor, two table hockey games sit alone in the sun. Half a dozen athletes are inside, watching a video cassette of a Charlie Chaplin movie. In the cinema downstairs, there is a different movie every evening. "Breakout Pass" with Charles Bronson was there Friday night. In the open-air theater, Gordon Lightfoot was there Saturday, the Canadian Ballet today.

The buildings are not co-ed. Females are lodged in Building A, the males in Buildings B, C and D.

"The girls can go into the boys' residences," Pierre Durivage, the hospitality director, is saying, "but the boys can't go into the girls' building. With only 2,000 girls and 6,000 boys, it's the only practical way to handle traffic. We haven't had a wedding here yet, but we're hoping for one."

Bonjour.

neath the skirt. Colombia's team cut flashy figures in off-white Palm Beach suits and shirts of shattering red.

Individuals in the parade were immediately recognizable — Gaston Roelants, the marathon runner, carried the Belgian flag; Mike Sands, the sprinter from the New York Pioneer Club, led the party from the Bahamas; immediately behind that group came Barbados, led by Lorna Forde, who runs for the Atoms Track Club of Brooklyn.

The Cuban flagman was Teofilio Stevenson, defending heavy-weight champion, who won a Gold Medal in 1972 by destroying the American redhead, Duane Bobick.

At these global clambakes, each nation is saluted with greater or less enthusiasm depending largely on the number of its nationals in the stands. The United States, naturally, was welcomed noisily, though their position in the alphabetical parade may have surprised some spectators lacking the gift of tongues.

In bilingual Quebec Province, our team is Etats Unis, marching in between Espagne (Spain) and the Fiji Islands. The latter had a team of one, a man in sports shirt and slacks whose banner was toted by a red-haired woman.

Africans offer mixed feelings about exodus

MONTREAL (AP) — African athletes took their countries' decisions to pull out of the Olympics Saturday mainly with resignation born of a fear of reprisal, but one said: "I'm disgusted. The whole thing hasn't a bit of logic."

Kenyans in bright red track suits, Ethiopians in their green warmup jackets, Ghanaians in dashikis wrote post cards, drank soft drinks and winced for the most part when reporters asked how they felt about their teams leaving the Games, or contemplating their departure.

But Philip Ndoo, a 30-year-old Kenyan marathon runner, spoke with rare frankness. He said his government's decision to pull out was announced in dead quiet by the team manager, John Kasyoka, just five hours before the opening ceremony.

A FRIEND of Ndoo's covered his identification badge when a reporter looked at it for his name, but Ndoo said, "I'll speak."

"You know," he said, "Africans would not get up at such a meeting and make a statement like 'I'm staying.' But that does not keep us from being disappointed. This time it is particularly hard because there is no logic in the decision.

"The African countries say New Zealand must pull out because they played South Africa in rugby. But so did at least 22 other countries — France, Britain, etc., and nobody is complaining."

Ndoo went on: "There is never any logic in politics. I'm disgusted, but I go along with our government's decision. I suppose you could say the government and the people of Kenya sent me here, and I could never have come myself. But my sacrifice and sweat was not enough. I'm an individual, not the majority. But it was an individual who was going to beat Frank Shorter."

One other African, Dr. Bedara Diouf, the Senegal team physician, spoke out against the pullouts. "I don't see what you could reproach the New Zealanders for. They did what everyone else did. And they played rugby — not even an Olympic sport," he said.

THE OFFICIAL line supporting the pullouts was enunciated by Wilson Abel Ndessabka, minister of sports of the People's Republic of the Congo, one of Black Africa's most radical states.

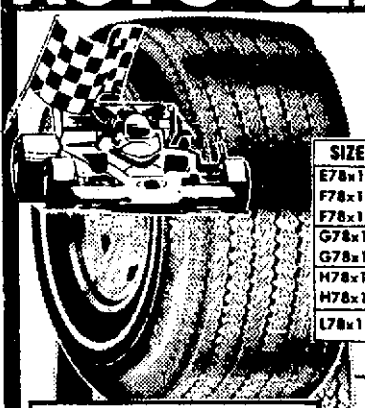

"We've lost nothing in this," he said, "except millions in preparation costs. It's the state that trained the athletes. And we are not losers because these people will be well prepared for our Inter-African Games in September. No one is disappointed. Perhaps the Canadians are unhappy. But we are smiling."

Graham keeps 4-stroke lead

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP)— Steady David Graham, the transplanted Australian, fired a one-under-par 70 Saturday for a three-round total of 12-under 201 and a four-stroke lead in the $300,000 Westchester Classic.

The 30-year-old Graham, a winner in this country only at Cleveland in 1972, shared the lead in the first round of this 72-hole test after an eight-under 63, and took a four-stroke lead after 36 holes with a three-under 68.

The slim Graham, a golf club designer who now resides in Hollywood, Fla., carded three birdies and two bogeys in his Saturday round over the 6,803-yard, par-71 Westchester Country Club course. He leads Mike Wynn of Crittendon, Va., who has earned $1,966 this year and is seriously considering giving up the tour if he doesn't do better.

The 31-year-old Wynn, whose best finish since joining the pro tour in 1972 was 12th at Houston last year, hung in with a one-under par 70, including three birdies and two bogeys.

Wynn, who has made only five cuts in 21 tournaments entered, shot a first-round 64 to trail by a stroke, and a par-71 Friday for a 36-hole total of 135 that tied him with Carlton White and Larry Ziegler. His 70 Saturday left him at eight-under par 205.

Stacy fires 67 to tie Rankin

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) —Hollis Stacy, firing a 67, the best round of the tournament, moved into a tie for the lead with Judy Rankin after Saturday's second round of play in the $70,000 Columbus LPGA Classic at Riviera County Club.

Miss Stacy added the 32-35—67 to her opening round of 71 for a two-day total of 138, six strokes under par on the 6,200-yard layout. The Hilton Head, S.C., golfer had five birdies—four of them in succession—and no bogeys in the round, beating par on Nos. 2, 7, 8, 9 and 10.

Mrs. Rankin, the tour's top money winner and the first-round leader, carded a 35-35—70 to go with her opening round of 68. She wasn't pleased with her front nine, where she scored her lone bogey of the day, but said she felt more comfortable on the back side.

She made a 10-foot birdie putt on No. 3 but lost that stroke when she took a bogey on No. 6 after hitting into a sand trap.

EXACTA KEY HORSE—Victorian Prince in seventh.

Swaps Stakes victor Majestic Light, rags-to-riches runner Madera Sun and major stakes winners An Act and L'Heueruex are part of one of the strongest sophomore fields assembled this year that contests the $100,000-added Cinema Handicap today at Hollywood Park.

The Cinema, which gains hundred-grander status for the first time in the race's 30-year history, to be conducted at 1⅛-mile on the lakeside turf course, could turn out to be a duel between a "prince" and a "pauper."

The prince, Majestic Light, was bred to be a winner and has looked the part. The pauper, Madera Sun, was sold last year for $1,000 and, as late as November, ran 27 lengths behind the winner of an $8,000 claiming race at Caliente.

But when the field of 10 3-year-olds goes to the post today, Majestic Light and Madera Sun are expected to share the wagering spotlight.

Majestic Light will be ridden by the meet's leading rider, Sandy Hawley, and will carry 121 pounds. Laffit Pincay, pressing Hawley for the top spot in the jockey standings, will be aboard Madera Sun, who will carry 119.

A son of 1969 Kentucky Derby winner Majestic Prince, Majestic Light flew in from the East to post an impressive victory in the $165,450 Swaps Stakes on the Hollypark main track.

Madera Sun, a gelded offspring of Montparnasse II, eventually posted his maiden victory in Tijuana, won a claiming race at Santa Anita, then finished third against a better field in an allowance race.

He followed with a triumph in the Sutter Stakes at Golden Gate, then won the Will Rogers Handicap on the Hollypark turf, defeating a group that included the highly-regarded An Act.

An Act, winner of the Santa Anita Derby to be ridden by Marco Castaneda, has been freshened since an unplaced effort in the Ohio Derby at Thistledown.

L'Heureux won the Coronado Handicap on the Hollypark grass in April and will be ridden by Don Pierce.

Rounding out the field are entrymates Double Discount and Alphy Boy, Delta Junction, Today 'N Tomorrow, Byndoerm and Dr. Krohn.

PRECEDING today's Cinema 'Cap was another hundred-grander, the $103,975 Hollywood Lassies Stakes, the title-deciding event for 2-year-old fillies, held before a crowd of 33,542 Saturday.

Wavy Waves, a talented daughter of Crozier making her third start of the season, remained undefeated, unleashing a burst of speed in the final three-eighths of a mile that carried her to a 3½-length triumph over Lullaby, who was five lengths in front of Any Time Girl.

Douglas Jets breeze, 10-2, in Mack game

The Douglas Jets pounded out 10 hits and used big innings in the first and seventh to gain a 12-2 Connie Mack victory over Mary Star in the first game of a Blair Field doubleheader Saturday night.

Rick Diffine and Scott Spehar each had three hits and two RBI, with Diffine also scoring three times. Winning pitcher Herb Fauland collected two RBI to go with his five-hitter.

In the nightcap, Paul Homrig had two hits and an RBI and Mark Hughey scored twice as the Harbor Bruins clubbed Lakewood, 7-1.

Wreidt Boats edged Motor Patrol, 4-3, at Cerritos College.

Mike Harris scored the eventual winning run in the fourth inning. Harris singled, stole second and third, and came home on Darryl Klein's basehit.

The drive started when Andy Gray of Narbonne, who like Samoa will attend Long Beach City College, dashed 14 yards.

Samoa followed with a pass to Fred Ford of St. John Bosco for 15 yards and another first down at the 20.

Samoa then faked Hargrove into the middle and kept the ball, rolling left end and taking off a la Sam Cunninghaam to dive over a North defender from the three and into the end zone.

Nitehawks and Barons win twice

The Long Beach Nitehawks ran their Western Softball Congress record to 30-2 Saturday night with a doubleheader victory over the Lakewood Jets, 4-3 and 6-1, at Mayfair Park.

Jerry Flory hit two home runs and Nick Hopkins one to spark the first-game victory behind the four-hit pitching of John Henderson.

Veteran Don Sarno hurled the second-game victory, replacing Bob Todd, who has a broken right hand and wrist. Don Sears homered for the Nitehawks, who play at Culver City in a twin bill today (2 p.m.)

The Jets play the Lakewood Barons in a doubleheader at Mayfair Park tonight at 7.

The Barons took a pair from South El Monte Saturday night, 6-1 and 1-0.

The first game was deadlocked, 1-1, through nine innings, before Rene Wright drove in a run and Merle Modrell socked a three-run homer.

Roger Teskes hurled a two-hitter in the nightcap, striking out nine, and Frank Van Patten had the winning RBI.

Pony Stars win

Randy Robinson hurled the last seven innings and struck out 16 to lead the Long Beach Pony League All-Stars past their Paramount counterparts, 4-3, in 10 innings, in a tournament at Hollifield Park in Norwalk Saturday night.

DODGERS—

Stone fanned Steve Yeager but Rhoden, batting .366 for the year, lined a single to left to score two runs and the Dodgers were on top to stay.

Rhoden admitted that he wasn't aware that he pitched Alston into the select 2,000-win club.

"I didn't know it until it was flashed on the message board after the game," he said.

But he wasn't alone.

Alston didn't know it either until just a few days, ago.

"I didn't know it until the writers said something about it," he confessed.

"I'm just fortunate to have been in baseball this long to arrive at something like this.

"But like I said, I'd like to take a few of those wins and add 'em to the standings this year. That's where they'll do the most good right now."

How they scored

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Believe it or not, this story is true

You might call this the tallest fish yarn of the year and also label me as a liar, but there is proof positive that a Hawthorne angler, Fred Oakley, caught a limit of kelp bass in the surf off one of the beaches in the Malibu area. The 10 fish weighed 95 pounds! How about that for a fish story?

Bill Beebe, outdoor editor of The Santa Monica Outlook, passed the information to me the other night when five outdoor writers broke bread with high Department of Fish and Game officials at the Airporter Inn in Irvine. Bill knows Oakley well and insists that he is an angler who can beat anybody in a surf-fishing contest.

Oakley didn't reveal the exact location to Bill, and Bill didn't ask, but it is widely known that there are some strands north from North Monica toward Oxnard that are great potential fishing beaches. Also there are good kelp beds in the same sectors, which, of course, make great havens for kelp bass and other species of fish.

Bill said that Oakley did it this way:

He caught some grunion that were running that night and used them for bait immediately. Almost every cast brought a strike and out of all those strikes, the Hawthorne angler emerged with that tremendous limit of fish. Oakley uses a 12-foot rod and makes tremendously long casts beyond the breaking surf line. The bass are not surf fish, but often they are close inshore especially when grunion are running.

WHILE DISCUSSING kepl bass, it might be well to mention that "kelp" and "calico" names are synonymous. Landing operators who call in the FISHIN' FACTS each evening always call them calicos.

Actually, there are five members of the bass family in California black sea bass, striped bass, kelp bass, sand bass and spotted bass. Years ago, we had occasion to mention black sea bass almost every week, but now we hear of one only when a long-range boat returns from far-off Mexican waters or on rare occasions, when a small one is caught around the Channel Islands.

Stripers are rare in southern waters even though plants have been made in Newport Bay and also at Anaheim Landing. Kelp bass are more frequently referred to as calicos than by any other name. Sand bass, a close relative and often mistaken for kelp bass, is called sugar bass and ground bass, and sometimes calicos.

The spotted bass occurs in smaller numbers and Newport Bay and Mission Bay at San Diego could be called "home" for the species, a close cousin of both the kelp and sand bass.

Both the sand and kelp bass catches this year have been greater than usual and Long Beach anglers who don't like long ocean trips can be thankful for the two species. There is nothing better for the table than broiled or delicately fried fillets of bass. And they are fun to catch.

OUTDOOR MINIS—Randy Vande Brake, 11521 Lindale St., Norwalk, is just 11 years old, but he has deposited $100 in his savings account for catching a tagged rainbow trout in Silver Lake on the June Lake Loop. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Vande Brake. The fish was one of several tagged rainbows that were placed in the four lakes of the Loop. Randy now has a chance to win the $1,000 jackpot at the end of the season. The fish weighed two pounds and fell for a piece of floating cheese on a No. 14 hook.

Chuck Garrison, another of the outdoor writers attending the DFG meeting the other night, told me that a 74-pound yellowfin tuna found his way into Dana Harbor around the first of this month, frolicked around for days eating huge squid and then finally was harpooned on July 8 by Bruce Brown, owneroperator of a commercial boat Chupu. "Charlie," as the fish was named, was barbecued at the Dana Wharf Fish Market and eaten by many fish market patrons. Sorry, Charlie!

Three new terminal tackle kits have been announced by Weber. That brings the number of do-it-yourself kits to six. If you have a yen to create flies, poppers, jigs, ice flies, spoons and spinners, Weber has the kit for you. The kits offer a real challenge to those anglers who like to devise something new—"a sure thing that will catch the big ones."

The Long Beach Casting Club will have a winter class on all kinds of flies that will be open to the public. The weekly class, however, is usually confined confined to flies.

Foyt locks up Michigan pole

Associated Press

A.J. Foyt won the pole position Saturday for the Indianapolis-car division of the 7th Twin 200s auto race at Michigan International Speedway.

Foyt, defending race champion, pushed his Gilmore Coyote-Foyt to the day's best lap speed of 198.238 mph, a little more than six-mph off the track record set by Gordon Johncock three years ago.

Johncock, in a Sinmast Wildcat prepared by George Bignotti, clocked the second fastest speed—196.122 mph—and starts on the outside of the first row in the $168,250 race.

Al Unser, winner of the Schaefer 500 at Pocono, Pa., two weeks ago, qualified his revolutionary Parnelli-Cosworth at 195.759 mph, good for the inside pole of the second row next to Wally Dallenbach, who clocked 193.496 mph.

Woman driver Janet Guthrie starts on the outside of row six with a speed of 186.480 mph in her Vollstedt-Offy—faster than 10 other male drivers in the race. Her time set a new closed course record for women at the track.

Today's 200-mile Indy car feature will be combined with a 200-mile U.S. Auto Club stock car race.

WORLD driving champion Niki Lauda of Austria edged out James Hunt of England Saturday for the No. 1 starting spot for today's British Grand Prix Formula One road race at Brands Hatch.

Lauda turned a lap of one minute, 19.35 seconds (118.4 mph) in his Ferrari during the final qualifying session.

Hunt, in a Marlboro McLaren, was only a stopwatch tick behind, posting a time of 1:19.41, and remains a marginal favorite to overhaul the Austrian in the race.

Hunt won the French Grand Prix two weeks ago, and is tied with Frenchman Patrick Depailler for second place in the world driver's championship with 26 points. Lauda leads with four victories and 52 points.

The second row for today's race is composed of Mario Andretti in a John Player Special Lotus 77 and Depailler in one of the radical six-wheel Tyrrells. Lauda's Ferrari teammate Clay Regazzoni qualified fifth fastest, followed by the surprise of the meet so far, New Zealander Chris Amon in the lone Mo Nunn-prepared Ensign.

Twenty-six cars will start today's race, which will be for 76 laps and 199.6 miles.

Navy softball begins Monday

Five teams will battle for two district berths in the 11th District, Northern Area, Navy softball tournament this week at Long Beach Support Activity.

The No. 1 and 2 teams will enter the 10-team district finals July 26-30, also on the Support Activity diamonds. Monday's pairings:

5 p.m.- USS Paul Revere vs. Port Hueneme Seabees; Pt. Mugu NAS vs. China Lake Weapons Station.— Los Alamitos NAS will not play until Tuesday in the double elimination play.

Aztecs take on Minutemen

Can George Best make it eight game-winng goals in as many home victories this season for the Los Angeles Aztecs?

That will be the question at 2:30 today at El Camino College when the Aztecs take on the Boston Minutemen in a North American Soccer League match.

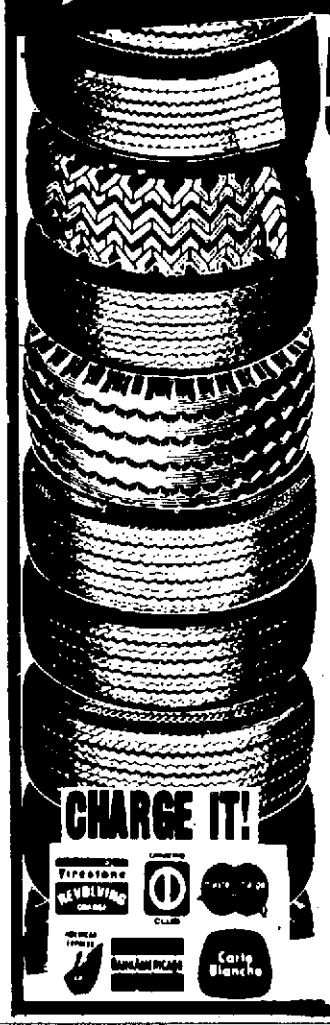

Best's five-yard goal less than five minutes into overtime last Saturday night gave the Aztecs a 2-1 win over St. Louis for their seventh home win of the year. It was nothing new for the NASL's second leading scorer.

He also tallied the game-winning goal in the Aztecs' six previous trumphs at El Camino this season.

Swaps Stakes victor Majestic Light, rags-to-riches runner Madera Sun and major stakes winners An Act and L'Heueruex are part of one of the strongest sophomore fields assembled this year that contests the $100,000-added Cinema Handicap today at Hollywood Park.

The Cinema, which gains hundred-grander status for the first time in the race's 30-year history, to be conducted at 1⅛-mile on the lakeside turf course, could turn out to be a duel between a "prince" and a "pauper."

The prince, Majestic Light, was bred to be a winner and has looked the part. The pauper, Madera Sun, was sold last year for $1,000 and, as late as November, ran 27 lengths behind the winner of an $8,000 claiming race at Caliente.

But when the field of 10 3-year-olds goes to the post today, Majestic Light and Madera Sun are expected to share the wagering spotlight.

Majestic Light will be ridden by the meet's leading rider, Sandy Hawley, and will carry 121 pounds. Laffit Pincay, pressing Hawley for the top spot in the jockey standings, will be aboard Madera Sun, who will carry 119.

A son of 1969 Kentucky Derby winner Majestic Prince, Majestic Light flew in from the East to post an impressive victory in the $165,450 Swaps Stakes on the Hollypark main track.

Madera Sun, a gelded offspring of Montparnasse II, eventually posted his maiden victory in Tijuana, won a claiming race at Santa Anita, then finished third against a better field in an allowance race.

He followed with a triumph in the Sutter Stakes at Golden Gate, then won the Will Rogers Handicap on the Hollypark turf, defeating a group that included the highly-regarded An Act.

An Act, winner of the Santa Anita Derby to be ridden by Marco Castaneda, has been freshened since an unplaced effort in the Ohio Derby at Thistledown.

L'Heureux won the Coronado Handicap on the Hollypark grass in April and will be ridden by Don Pierce.

Rounding out the field are entrymates Double Discount and Alphy Boy, Delta Junction, Today 'N Tomorrow, Byndoerm and Dr. Krohn.

PRECEDING today's Cinema 'Cap was another hundred-grander, the $103,975 Hollywood Lassies Stakes, the title-deciding event for 2-year-old fillies, held before a crowd of 33,542 Saturday.

Wavy Waves, a talented daughter of Crozier making her third start of the season, remained undefeated, unleashing a burst of speed in the final three-eighths of a mile that carried her to a 3½-length triumph over Lullaby, who was five lengths in front of Any Time Girl.

Douglas Jets breeze, 10-2, in Mack game

The Douglas Jets pounded out 10 hits and used big innings in the first and seventh to gain a 12-2 Connie Mack victory over Mary Star in the first game of a Blair Field doubleheader Saturday night.

Rick Diffine and Scott Spehar each had three hits and two RBI, with Diffine also scoring three times. Winning pitcher Herb Fauland collected two RBI to go with his five-hitter.

In the nightcap, Paul Homrig had two hits and an RBI and Mark Hughey scored twice as the Harbor Bruins clubbed Lakewood, 7-1.

Wreidt Boats edged Motor Patrol, 4-3, at Cerritos College.

Mike Harris scored the eventual winning run in the fourth inning. Harris singled, stole second and third, and came home on Darryl Klein's basehit.

The Long Beach Nitehawks ran their Western Softball Congress record to 30-2 Saturday night with a doubleheader victory over the Lakewood Jets, 4-3 and 6-1, at Mayfair Park.

Jerry Flory hit two home runs and Nick Hopkins one to spark the first-game victory behind the four-hit pitching of John Henderson.

The Jets play the Lakewood Barons in a doubleheader at Mayfair Park tonight at 7.

The Barons took a pair from South El Monte Saturday night, 6-1 and 1-0.

The first game was deadlocked, 1-1, through nine innings, before Rene Wright drove in a run and Merle Modrell socked a three-run homer.

Roger Teskes hurled a two-hitter in the nightcap, striking out nine, and Frank Van Patten had the winning RBI.

Pony Stars win

DODGERS—

Stone fanned Steve Yeager but Rhoden, batting .366 for the year, lined a single to left to score two runs and the Dodgers were on top to stay.

Rhoden admitted that he wasn't aware that he pitched Alston into the select 2,000-win club.

"I didn't know it until it was flashed on the message board after the game," he said.

But he wasn't alone.

Alston didn't know it either until just a few days ago.

"I didn't know it until the writers said something about it," he confessed.

"I'm just fortunate to have been in baseball this long to arrive at something like this.

"But like I said, I'd like to take a few of those wins and add 'em to the standings this year. That's where they'll do the most good right now."

How they scored

CUBS FIRST
Monday homered to right, his 17th. Cardenal flied to center. Madlock got an infield single to third. Morales blooped a single to right. LaCock walked, loading the bases. Trillo flied to short right. DODGERS SECOND

DODGERS THIRD

Kiss and Tell in Washington
[SEE INTELLIGENCE REPORT]

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Believe it or not, this story is true

You might call this the tallest fish yarn of the year and also label me as a liar, but there is proof positive that a Hawthorne angler, Fred Oakley, caught a limit of kelp bass in the surf off one of the beaches in the Malibu area. The 10 fish weighed 95 pounds! How about that for a fish story?

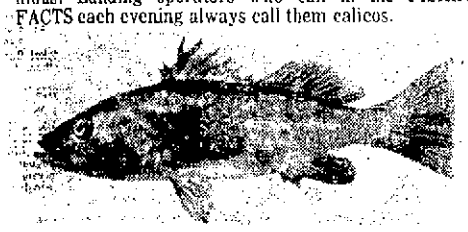

Bill Beebe, outdoor editor of The Santa Monica Outlook, passed the information to me the other night when five outdoor writers broke bread with high Department of Fish and Game officials at the Airporter Inn in Irvine. Bill knows Oakley well and insists that he is an angler who can beat anybody in a surf-fishing contest.

Oakley didn't reveal the exact location to Bill, and Bill didn't ask, but it is widely known that there are some strands north from North Monica toward Oxnard that are great potential fishing beaches. Also there are good kelp beds in the same sectors, which, of course, make great havens for kelp bass and other species of fish.

Bill said that Oakley did it this way:

He caught some grunion that were running that night and used them for bait immediately. Almost every cast brought a strike and out of all those strikes, the Hawthorne angler emerged with that tremendous limit of fish. Oakley uses a 12-foot rod and makes tremendously long casts beyond the breaking surf line. The bass are not surf fish, but often they are close inshore especially when grunion are running.

WHILE DISCUSSING kelp bass, it might be well to mention that "kelp" and "calico" names are synonymous. Landing operators who call in the FISHIN' FACTS each evening always call them calicos.

Actually, there are five members of the bass family in California black sea bass, striped bass, kelp bass, sand bass and spotted bass. Years ago, we had occasion to mention black sea bass almost every week, but now we hear of one only when a long-range boat returns from far-off Mexican waters or on rare occasions, when a small one is caught around the Channel Islands.

Stripers are rare in southern waters even though plants have been made in Newport Bay and also at Anaheim Landing. Kelp bass are more frequently referred to as calicos than by any other name. Sand bass, a close relative and often mistaken for kelp bass, is called sugar bass and ground bass, and sometimes calicos.

The spotted bass occurs in smaller numbers and Newport Bay and Mission Bay at San Diego could be called "home" for the species, a close cousin of both the kelp and sand bass.

Both the sand and kelp bass catches this year have been greater than usual and Long Beach anglers who don't like long ocean trips can be thankful for the two species. There is nothing better for the table than broiled or delicately fried fillets of bass. And they are fun to catch.

OUTDOOR MINIS—Randy Vande Brake, 11521 Lindale St., Norwalk, is just 11 years old, but he has deposited $100 in his savings account for catching a tagged rainbow trout in Silver Lake on the June Lake Loop. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Vande Brake. The fish was one of several tagged rainbows that were placed in the four lakes of the Loop. Randy now has a chance to win the $1,000 jackpot at the end of the season. The fish weighed two pounds and fell for a piece of floating cheese on a No. hook.

C. Garrison, another of the outdoor writers at the DFG meeting the other night, told me that a 74-p. d yellowfin tuna found his way into Dana Harbor around the first of this month, frolicked around for days eating huge squid and then finally was harpooned on July 8 by Bruce Brown, owneroperator of a commercial boat Chupu. "Charlie," as the fish was named, was barbecued at the Dana Wharf Fish Market and eaten by many fish market patrons. Sorry, Charlie!

Three new terminal tackle kits have been announced by Weber. That brings the number of do-it-yourself kits to six. If you have a yen to create flies, poppers, jigs, ice flies, spoons and spinners, Weber has the kit for you. The kits offer a real challenge to those anglers who like to devise something new—"a sure thing that will catch the big ones."

The Long Beach Casting Club will have a winter class on all kinds of flies that will be open to the public. The weekly class, however, is usually confined confined to flies.

Foyt locks up Michigan pole

Associated Press

A.J. Foyt won the pole position Saturday for the Indianapolis-car division of the 7th Twin 200s auto race at Michigan International Speedway.

Foyt, defending race champion, pushed his Gilmore Coyote-Foyt to the day's best lap speed of 198.238 mph, a little more than six-mph off the track record set by Gordon Johncock three years ago.

Johncock, in a Sinmast Wildcat prepared by George Bignotti, clocked the second fastest speed—196.122 mph—and starts on the outside of the first row in the $168,250 race.

Al Unser, winner of the Schaefer 500 at Pocono, Pa., two weeks ago, qualified his revolutionary Parnelli-Cosworth at 195.759 mph, good for the inside pole of the second row next to Wally Dallenbach, who clocked 193.496 mph.

Woman driver Janet Guthrie starts on the outside of row six with a speed of 186.480 mph in her Vollstedt-Offy—faster than 10 other male drivers in the race. Her time set a new closed course record for women at the track.

Today's 200-mile Indy car feature will be combined with a 200-mile U.S. Auto Club stock car race.

WORLD driving champion Niki Lauda of Austria edged out James Hunt of England Saturday for the No. 1 starting spot for today's British Grand Prix Formula One road race at Brands Hatch.

Lauda turned a lap of one minute, 19.35 seconds (118.4 mph) in his Ferrari during the final qualifying session.

Hunt, in a Marlboro McLaren, was only a stopwatch tick behind, posting a time of 1:19.41, and remains a marginal favorite to overhaul the Austrian in the race.

Hunt won the French Grand Prix two weeks ago, and is tied with Frenchman Patrick Depailler for second place in the world driver's championship with 26 points. Lauda leads with four victories and 52 points.

The second row for today's race is composed of Mario Andretti in a John Player Special Lotus 77 and Depailler in one of the radical six-wheel Tyrrells. Lauda's Ferrari teammate Clay Regazzoni qualified fifth fastest, followed by the surprise of the meet so far, New Zealander Chris Amon in the lone Mo Nunn-prepared Ensign.

Twenty-six cars will start today's race, which will be for 76 laps and 199.6 miles.

Navy softball begins Monday

Five teams will battle for two district berths in the 11th District, Northern Area, Navy softball tournament this week at Long Beach Support Activity.

The No. 1 and 2 teams will enter the 10-team district finals July 26-30, also on the Support Activity diamonds. Monday's pairings:

5 p.m.- USS Paul Revere vs. Port Hueneme Seabees; Pt. Mugu NAS vs. China Lake Weapons Station.— Los Alamitos NAS will not play until Tuesday in the double elimination play.

Aztecs take on Minutemen

Can George Best make it eight game-winng goals in as many home victories this season for the Los Angeles Aztecs?

That will be the question at 2:30 today at El Camino College when the Aztecs take on the Boston Minutemen in a North American Soccer League match.

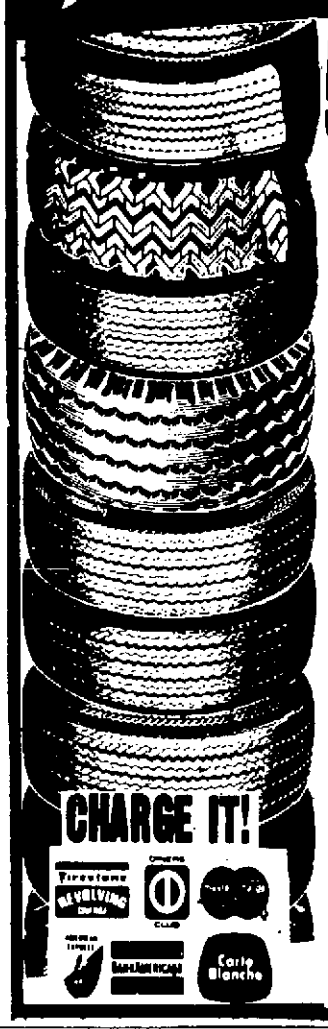

Best's five-yard goal less than five minutes into overtime last Saturday night gave the Aztecs a 2-1 win over St. Louis for their seventh home win of the year. It was nothing new for the NASL's second leading scorer.

He also tallied the game-winning goal in the Aztecs' six previous triumphs at El Camino this season.

Bullfights today

An exciting corrida is expected today when Curro Rivera, Rafael Gil and Marcos Ortega face toros of Trincheras in the downtown bullright, El Toreo de Tijuana, 4 p.m.

Q. If Gerald Ford doesn't make it as President, where will he retire, Grand Rapids, Mich., or Alexandria, Va.?—J. Helman, Dayton, Ohio.

A. Most probably to Alexandria, where the Fords lived for years when Ford was a Congressman from Michigan.

Q. I understand they are making a sequel to "Jaws" called "Jaws II." When will the film be ready? Who will be in it?—Ruth Kahn, Larchmont, N.Y.

A. "Jaws II" will get underway at Martha's Vineyard, Mass., during the summer of 1977. Roy Scheider and Lorraine Gary will star in it. There will be no Richard Dreyfuss, no Robert Shaw. There will, however, be a new shark now going under construction.

GENE KELLY WITH BRIDGET AND TIM

Q. How come someone as attractive, talented, and wealthy as dancer Gene Kelly is not married? — Helene Martinson, Salt Lake City, Utah.

A. Dancer Gene Kelly is 63. Three years ago, his second wife, whom he married in 1960, died of cancer. Kelly has yet to recover from that tragedy. "It's not easy to forget," he says. "Jeannie was such a wonderful girl. I live simply with a housekeeper who's an excellent cook. I'm not too bad at cooking myself. My life these days is built more or less around my two children, Tim, 11, and Bridget, 14. There have been a lot of rumors linking me with one young woman and then another, but at the moment I have no plans to remarry." Kelly's first wife was Betsy Blair, whom he married in 1941. They were divorced in 1957 and have a daughter, Kerry.

Q. I notice that Jimmy Carter smiles a lot, but does he have a sense of humor?—Robert Blake, Albany, Ga.

A. Carter has a sense of humor, but it is not as yet well-developed.

Q. Is it true that Bette Davis once said, "No topflight actress should be married. She should take lovers instead"?—Murray Levine, Wilmington, Del.

A. In her 68 years Bette Davis has said that among many other things. She has also said that a topflight actress can be happily married only to a weak husband. Betie has been married unsuccessfully to a variety of husbands, strong and weak.

Q. How much money has the federal government given to the family of Army chemist Frank Olson who was poisoned by the CIA? What is the true story of that incident?—P.O., Provo, Utah.

A. The Senate recently voted to give $1,250,000 compensation to the family of Frank Olson, U.S. Army chemist who committed suicide after being drugged with LSD. Olson was given the LSD without his knowledge while attending a meeting in New York in 1953 with CIA personnel who were working on the LSD project.

Olson was aware of CIA plans to give the drug to unsuspecting patients but was not told it had been given to him until 20 minutes after the fact. He subsequently developed serious side effects, was hospitalized for psychiatric treatment, later jumped to death from the 10th floor of his hotel. He left a wife and three children who will receive the $1,250,000. Sen. "Mac" Mathias (R., Md.) was highly instrumental in securing compensation for the Olson family.

HENRY KISSINGER AND JILL ST. JOHN AT A 1973 PARTY IN SAN CLEMENTE

Q. Was there ever anything between Henry Kissinger and Jill St. John or the other starlets Kissinger used to date before he married his present and second wife, Nancy?—M.H., Washington, D.C.

A. Nothing serious between Jill St. John and Kissinger, who was frequently used as a front in Hollywood. Much more between Kissinger and starlets Marianne Hill and Judy Brown.

Q. When Robert F. Kennedy was assassinated in Los Angeles, was his wife Ethel pregnant? Is there a chance that she will marry again? — Sam Hall, Charleston, S.C.

A. Robert Kennedy was gunned down in Los Angeles June 5, 1968. His wife gave birth to their daughter Rory Elizabeth Catherine six months later. It was her 11th child. Her friends predict that she will not marry again.

Q. I understand comedian Redd Foxx is dating a black giantess who is 6 feet 6. Can you identify her?—Iona Jones, Philadephia.

A. Among others, Foxx has been dating Tamara Dobson, formerly of Baltimore and star of several films. She is 6 feet 1.

TAMARA DOBSON

Q. Who owns the Book-of-the-Month Club, founded in 1926?—Marvin Corsiglia, Clifton, N.J.

A. The Book-of-the-Month Club is a publicly held corporation, controlled by the family of its founder, Harry Scherman, who died in 1969. It also owns the Dolphin Book Club, the Fortune Book Club, the Cooking and Crafts Book Club and the Quality Paperback Book Club.

Q. How much does the Prime Minister of Great Britain get in annual salary?—Fred Gersh, Des Moines, Iowa.

A. £20,000 a year, or, at the current rate of exchange, less than $40,000.

Q. How old is Betty Furness, and will she replace Barbara Walters on the "Today" TV show? I also notice that Sen. Ed Brooke (R., Mass.) has divorced his wife. Does that mean he soon will marry Barbara Walters?—G.L., Roxbury, Mass.

A. Betty Furness is 60. She is one of the possible replacements for Barbara Walters. It is true that Brooke has instituted proceedings to divorce his wife, but there is practically no chance of his marrying Barbara Walters.

Boxing champ's first love is baseball

Associated Press

The world welterweight boxing champion isn't a boxing fan. He seldom goes to a boxing match that he isn't fighting.

Carlos Palomino's real love is baseball.

"That was my dream when I was young. But everybody said I was not big enough."

Palomino's team is the Dodgers and he regrets that his boxing schedule keeps him away from their games.

The 26-year-old, who won the World Boxing Association title from Britain's John Stracey last month, reflected on his past and put forth his dreams as he sat comfortably—but somehow athletically erect—in the home where he lives with nine other people, his parents, brothers and sisters.

Married right out of high school and divorced 16 months later, he has a 5-year-old son whom he hopes will live with him someday.

Palomino is one of 11 children in a family that moved to Southern California from Mexico in 1960. As he talked, a steady stream of small, black-haired children ran into the room, piping down and smiling when they saw Carlos had company.

Those siblings are part of what took him away from the sport he loved. After a year of baseball in high school, Palomino was compelled to start working as a welder at a workaday pace that bored him.

He began working out at a neighborhood gym to relieve the monotony. A coach picked him for a good man with his fists and told him he could make money as a boxer. Today that man is his co-manager, Noe Cruz. Palomino is the only pro he has ever managed.

"Oh, I enjoy fighting. I enjoy the money," Palomino said.

He earned $10,000 when he vanquished the favored Stracey. He is expected to earn $60,000 for each title defense.

"Welterweight is one of the better money-making classes. Some great fighters come out of it," he said, mentioning Sugar Ray Robinson.

"I want to make what I can, then leave it," he said. "Then I'll do what I really want to do."

That is working with children. Palomino is a semester away from graduation at Long Beach State. He is majoring in recreation and hopes to work for the Westminster parks and recreation department.

"Winning the title has opened a lot of doors for me," he said, adding that several cities have asked him to think about working for them when he's ready.

But Palomino says he'd rather stay in or near Westminster. "I grew up here. I know the kids."

"Most of them were there at the airport when I got back from England and came to our house for a party," he recalled. "The little kids—I really enjoyed them—they were hanging all over me."

Palomino doesn't expect that kind of reception from all his fans. He characterizes himself as easy-going and quiet and says he doesn't aspire to be enormously popular—just a good fighter.

He is choosy about his spectators, preferring a sophisticated crowd.

"I really liked the English crowd. They were very fair," he said. "I had just beaten their champion, and after the fight, they waited for me to come back out. They applauded me."

Tar/Taste Theory Exploded.

Taste-science breakthrough gives low tar MERIT the flavor of cigarettes having 60% more tar.

By locating certain flavor-rich ingredients in cigarette smoke, ingredients that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar, researchers at Philip Morris have disproven the theory that cigarette flavor depends on the amount of tar that goes with it.

They've discovered how to pack flavor—unprecedented flavor—into a cigarette that delivers one of the lowest tar levels in smoking today.

The discovery is called 'Enriched Flavor.' It's extra flavor, natural flavor, and only MERIT has it.

MERIT and MERIT MENTHOL

Tests Verify Taste

In taste tests involving thousands of cigarette smokers like yourself, MERIT was reported to deliver as much—or more—taste than five current low tar leaders.

What's really startling is that these five brands have up to 60% more tar than MERIT.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough.

Now smoke the cigarette.

MERIT. Incredible smoking satisfaction at only 9 mg. tar.

Marthe Keller— Hollywood's Newest Import

by Lloyd Shearer

Marthe Keller assumes a Dietrich-like stance in a French movie. The well-endowed Swiss Miss is also starring in three American pictures.

HOLLYWOOD, CAL.

There is only one bankable film actress in Hollywood — Barbra Streisand. The banks will loan production money on the films in which she stars because they are convinced she is "box office."

They will also secure motion pictures with Robert Redford, Steve McQueen, Paul Newman and a few other so-called male superstars, but Barbra is the only female in the "bankable" category.

For the past year or so Barbra and her roommate, hairdresser Jon Peters, have been busy producing a musical version of "A Star Is Born," the 1937 classic in which the late Fredric March superbly played a fading film star whose career ends in suicide as his actress wife, Janet Gaynor, rises to stardom.

Since Barbra has been busy, and the studios here have developed no other "box office" actresses, they've been compelled to look abroad for distaff talent.

Their latest import is a tall, well-endowed 21-jeweled movement from Switzerland, Marthe Keller, age 30.

If you haven't heard the name, you soon will, for Marthe (pronounced Mart) stars in three biggies scheduled for release within the next year.

They are "Marathon Man," with Dustin Hoffman and Laurence Olivier, in which she plays Hoffman's lover and a courier for a sinister organization headed by Lord Olivier; "Black Sunday," in which she plays a Palestinian terrorist helping to blow up the Super Bowl with 80,000 Americans and the President of the U.S.; and "Bobby Deerfield," a screenplay adapted from the Erich Maria Remarque novel "Heaven Has No Favorites," in which she co-stars opposite Al Pacino, teaching him to live life at its fullest.

Who is Marthe Keller to be signed for three major productions and eventually to be accorded the well-known Hollywood buildup, when a year ago she couldn't even speak English?

She is one of Europe's top stars, immensely talented, free-wheeling, free-loving, talkative beyond description, uninhibited, colorful, yet marvelously disciplined and thoroughly trained.

It was John Schlesinger, director of "Marathon Man," who ran into her at the Cannes Film Festival last year and suggested she fly to New York for a screen test opposite Dustin Hoffman, "just to see if the chemistry of their personalities was compatible."

As Marthe tells it in her broken English: "They sent to me in Switzerland in English a script of 'Marathon Man.' I cannot speak English, so how I am to do screen test?

'Beautiful'

"I have this friend who speaks English, a ski champion. He read to me the scenes, and I memorize them by sounds. When I meet Schlesinger, the director, he explain everything to me, everything. I understand nothing, so I say to everything, 'Beautiful, beautiful, beautiful.'

"He is satisfied, but when I arriving in New York, I am sick with nerves. I cannot sleep night before screen test. When I get up I drink bottle of red wine for breakfast.

"When I arriving for screen test I meet Dustin. He is so short. I am so tall. He is beautiful. At once he makes 'chokes' by taking off his shoes. I am tipsy with wine. But the screen test go well. Everyone is so happy. I say to myself, 'What the hell you nervous for?' I get the part, and I am in Hollywood."

In time Marthe Keller, protected and warned by filmland's press agents and front office executives, will undoubtedly become less frank and open. At the moment she is still refreshingly forthright, especially for a Swiss, about the most intimate aspects of her life.

Some weeks ago, for example, Donald Zec, an English reporter, asked her about her love affair with French

Observations™

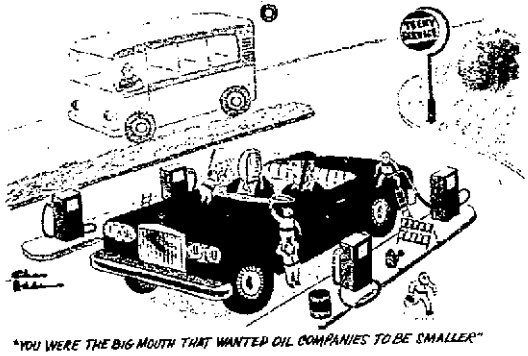

Awakening? We're heartened by a recent Roper poll, showing that three out of four Americans now rate development of a sound national energy policy as one of the two greatest needs from Congress. It's right up there with tax reform, which is great news for those who believe the legislators will eventually heed the people. Because recognizing that a problem exists is just a step ahead of finding a solution.

Paper Tiger. Forty years ago, the Federal Register, which lists all the federal regulations, contained 2,619 pages. Last year it had 60,221, including this regulatory goodie on ladders from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration: "The angle (a) between the loaded and unloaded rails and the horizontal is to be calculated from the trigonometric equation:

$$\text{Sine } a = \frac{\text{Difference in deflection}}{\text{Ladder width}}$$

Understand now?

Another voice. Professor M. A. Adelman of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a frequent critic of the oil industry, writes in the Washington Post: "Congress should reject the proposals for disintegration of oil companies into separate entities for producing, refining, and marketing. 'Vertical divestiture' would be expensive. It would diminish competition at home. It would waste our chance to increase competition abroad. . . . [It] would keep Congress and the oil industry busy for years, spinning their wheels, going no place, postponing investment decisions, losing a chance for active defense against the cartel, admitting finally: 'I wasted time, and now doth time waste me.'"

"YOU WERE THE BIG-MOUTH THAT WANTED OIL COMPANIES TO BE SMALLER"

Helping minority businessmen: 3,690 of them last year, to be exact. That's the special contribution of a unique non-profit agency, the Interracial Council for Business Opportunity. In Los Angeles, New York, St. Louis, Atlanta, Newark, Dallas and Waco, Tex., more than 600 volunteers from established corporations have helped black, Puerto Rican and other minority entrepreneurs with picking locations, bookkeeping, feasibility studies and obtaining financing. Typical success: a young man in New Jersey who dreamed of a business transporting handicapped children to their special schools today operates nearly 40 vehicles and employs some 60 persons. Many corporations help minority businesses by buying from them, by encouraging minority vendors to make their pitch to their purchasing agents. If you believe in a social role for private enterprise, you just have to like this program.

Marthe with Dustin Hoffman in a scene from "Marathon Man." One of the leading stars in Europe, she has learned to speak English—sort of.

director Philippe de Broca, by whom she has a 4-year-old son, Alexandre, born out of wedlock.

"How come," Zec asked, "you didn't marry de Broca?"

"Happens," Marthe blithely explained, "he was married to someone else at that time. After, when he got divorce, I want him no longer. When I don't want a man, I walk away."

Marthe played much the same scene with another lover, French director Claude Lelouch who starred her in "And Now My Love," a film which first brought her to the attention of American moviegoers.

"When you are in love," Marthe explains, "you hate man you love, because man you love has power to make you suffer, so you fight much. When you love less, you fight less, become friends more. Intelligent men understand me. I am European. This is sometimes difficult for American men. They are too much on sex. Right away, sex. No flirt. No warmup. Right away, sex.

"I remember when I am 16, studying at Stanislavsky acting school in Munich, I receive phone call to come to Paris. Big producer wants to audition me. I am young, innocent, virgin. I go to Paris hotel to meet producer.

Turns down 'big deal'

"He is wearing bathrobe and cigar. Right away he offers me big deal—sex for stardom. I say no. Later people say I am crazy. But that is how I am. When I in love, I give everything. Not in love, I give nothing. For Marthe only one affair at a time."

Marthe Keller was born Jan. 20, 1946, in Basel, Switzerland, where her father, a jockey and horse-breeder, wanted her to become a ballerina. He enrolled her in the Basel Opera School of Ballet at 8, but an accident on the ski slopes ended her dancing career at age 15.

"Was lucky for me," Marthe confesses. "I had no talent as dancer, so I move to acting."

As a young actress, Marthe Keller spent two years learning to lower her high-pitched voice, then won a three-year scholarship to the Stanislavsky School of Dramatic Art in Munich and the Brecht Theater in East Berlin. She also joined the famed Schiller Theater in Berlin for two years, specialized in Shakespearean roles.

Her first film role was a small one in "Funeral in Berlin." This was followed by several French television roles, one of which caught the eye of de Broca, who cast her opposite Yves Montand in a romantic comedy, "Le Diable par la Queue" (Devil by the Tail).

Eventually Marthe and de Broca became lovers, and she gave birth to his child, an event that interrupted her steadily rising career only temporarily.

Big hit on French TV

In Paris, she played the lead in "La Demoiselle d'Avignon," one of the most popular series in the history of French TV. She acted a princess working as an au pair girl, and the show's ratings hit an all-time high.

After several years as "La Demoiselle," Marthe was signed for a string of highly successful European films, among them Claude Lelouch's "Toute Une Vie" (And Now My Love), in which she played the spoiled daughter of a Jewish shoe manufacturer. The film received an Academy Award for best screenplay, won the Los Angeles Film Critics' annual award for best foreign film, and Marthe Keller, in Hollywood production eyes, became someone to watch.

Once she landed the female lead in "Marathon Man," to be released in October, she gave such an outstanding performance that producer Robert Evans signed her again to play the fanatical terrorist in "Black Sunday."

She learned English three weeks before going to work in "Marathon," and when "Marathon" was finished, she started the next day on "Black Sunday."

Now she is hard at work in Switzerland, Italy and France on "Bobby Deerfield," for which she is receiving $200,000, which is exactly $165,000 more than what she was paid for "Marathon Man."

A tall (5 feet 8½ inch), green-eyed honey-blonde, Marthe Keller has a villa in Verdier, Switzerland, an apartment off the Boulevard St.-Germain in Paris and possibly the brightest future of any young actress in motion pictures. In Hollywood parlance, she is hot and getting hotter by the film.

10 Major Advances in Hospital Treatment

by Donald Robinson

A 52-year-old attorney walked out of Barnes Hospital in St. Louis recently with his face aglow. He'd been completely blind for 15 years. Now he could see perfectly! He was so thrilled that he and his wife drove around the city every day for two weeks just so he could feast his eyes on all the new buildings.

The lawyer's vision was restored by a remarkable new form of microsurgery that promises to help blind victims of diabetes to see again. The American Hospital Association describes the procedure as "one of the great new advances in hospital care."

The AHA has conducted a nationwide survey of medical advances, and its president, J. Alexander McMahon, stated: "We found American hospitals are doing things for patients we didn't dream were possible a few years ago."

Here are the 10 most significant advances:

1. NEW SIGHT FOR THE BLIND. The largest single cause of blindness in the United States today is diabetes. Each year as many as 5000 men and women go blind because of a condition called diabetic retinopathy, in which old clotted blood in the eye evolves into fatty, fibrous tissues that "black out" the retina. Until lately, these people had no hope of ever seeing again. Then a brilliant ophthalmologic surgeon, Dr. Robert Machemer of the University of Miami Hospitals in Florida, pioneered a technique for safely extracting the fibrous material from inside diabetic eyes. Two other ophthalmologic surgeons, Dr. Nicholas Douvas of Port Huron Hospital in Michigan and Dr. Edward Okun of Barnes Hospital, modified and improved the procedure. Peering through a special operating microscope, they insert an infinitesimally tiny instrument into the eye. The instrument sucks the ugly fibers into a microscopically small hole where a roto-cutter chops them into fine pieces that are expelled by the suction. Light can reach the retina once more and the patient can see.

More than 2000 persons have undergone this operation in 100 hospitals throughout the country with a success rate of more than 60 percent.

Dr. Edward Okun of St. Louis with a microscope and tiny instruments cleans the eyes of a patient made blind by diabetes. The technique has been used 2000 times.

The reactions of the formerly blind patients and their families are poignant. Not long ago, a 30-year-old man who had been totally blind for three years received his sight back from Dr. Okun. He'd gotten married while blind to a woman he'd never seen. She was nervous as to what he'd think of her. When Dr. Okun took off his bandages, the patient smiled. "Not bad," he said.

2. AN ARTIFICIAL WRIST. A new kind of artificial wrist has been developed at Arizona Medical Center in Tucson for people whose wrists have been helplessly contorted by rheumatoid arthritis, other crippling diseases, or injuries. They can do things they haven't been able to do for many years: for example, zipping zippers, buttoning buttons, turning doorknobs. They can lift heavy objects. Best of all, their excruciating pain is relieved.

The artificial wrist was designed by Dr. Robert Volz, orthopedic surgeon at Arizona Medical Center. It is a small plastic and metal mechanism comprising two interfitting parts that are inserted in the wrist within an inch-square space. Most other artificial wrists permit only unnatural and unstable motions. The Volz wrist provides both mobility and stability.

The first man to receive the Volz wrist was William Hoag, a Tucson printer and part-time professional organist. He'd been compelled to give up his musical career after his right wrist had been maimed in a fall. Today, he is playing the organ again.

3. COUGHING TO KEEP YOUR HEART ALIVE. It can happen at any time in any hospital. Suddenly, without warning, a patient's heart stops; this is termed cardiac arrest. In 11 seconds, the patient can lose consciousness. Death usually follows.

If the condition is detected in time, an application of electricity directly to the patient's heart can often make it beat normally again. The problem is how to keep the patient alive during those crucial moments before the right equipment can be readied to treat him. Strenuously massaging the outside of the chest can frequently do this, but it can be dangerous. It can cause broken ribs and other complications. Fortunately, a better, safer technique—wonderful in its simplicity—has been developed by Dr. F. Mason Sones, the world-famous cardiologist at Cleveland (Ohio) Clinic. He just tells the patients to cough, forcefully and rhythmically. There is a good chance the heart will start beating normally again.

A team of cardiologists at the UCLA Harbor General Hospital in Torrance, Cal., tested the Sones technique on patients undergoing catheterization whose hearts had stopped. The team reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association that every one of these patients was saved.

4. TEST FOR DEAFNESS. Two scientists at the University of Chicago Medical School—Dr. Ralph F. Naunton, chief of otolaryngology, and Dr. Stanley Zerlin, a mechanically minded clinical psychologist—have solved one of the most difficult problems facing ear specialists: how to tell whether infants and young children are totally deaf. With standard

Q. If Gerald Ford doesn't make it as President, where will he retire, Grand Rapids, Mich., or Alexandria, Va.?—J. Helman, Dayton, Ohio.
A. Most probably to Alexandria, where the Fords lived for years when Ford was a Congressman from Michigan.

Q. I understand they are making a sequel to "Jaws" called "Jaws II." When will the film be ready? Who will be in it?—Ruth Kahn, Larchmont, N.Y.
A. "Jaws II" will get underway at Martha's Vineyard, Mass., during the summer of 1977. Roy Scheider and Lorraine Gary will star in it. There will be no Richard Dreyfuss, no Robert Shaw. There will, however, be a new shark now going under construction.

GENE KELLY WITH BRIDGET AND TIM

Q. How come someone as attractive, talented, and wealthy as dancer Gene Kelly is not married? — Helene Martinson, Salt Lake City, Utah.
A. Dancer Gene Kelly is 63. Three years ago, his second wife, whom he married in 1960, died of cancer. Kelly has yet to recover from that tragedy. "It's not easy to forget," he says. "Jeannie was such a wonderful girl. I live simply with a housekeeper who's an excellent cook. I'm not too bad at cooking myself. My life these days is built more or less around my two children, Tim, 11, and Bridget, 14. There have been a lot of rumors linking me with one young woman and then another, but at the moment I have no plans to remarry." Kelly's first wife was Betsy Blair, whom he married in 1941. They were divorced in 1957 and have a daughter, Kerry.

Q. I notice that Jimmy Carter smiles a lot, but does he have a sense of humor?—Robert Blake, Albany, Ga.
A. Carter has a sense of humor, but it is not as yet well-developed.

Q. Is it true that Bette Davis once said, "No topflight actress should be married. She should take lovers instead"?—Murray Levine, Wilmington, Del.
A. In her 68 years Bette Davis has said that among many other things. She has also said that a topflight actress can be happily married only to a weak husband. Bette has been married unsuccessfully to a variety of husbands, strong and weak.

Q. How much money has the federal government given to the family of Army chemist Frank Olson who was poisoned by the CIA? What is the true story of that incident?—P.O., Provo, Utah.
A. The Senate recently voted to give $1,250,000 compensation to the family of Frank Olson, U.S. Army chemist who committed suicide after being drugged with LSD. Olson was given the LSD without his knowledge while attending a meeting in New York in 1953 with CIA personnel who were working on the LSD project.

Olson was aware of CIA plans to give the drug to unsuspecting patients but was not told it had been given to him until 20 minutes after the fact. He subsequently developed serious side effects, was hospitalized for psychiatric treatment, later jumped to death from the 10th floor of his hotel. He left a wife and three children who will receive the $1,250,000. Sen. "Mac" Mathias (R., Md.) was highly instrumental in securing compensation for the Olson family.

HENRY KISSINGER AND JILL ST. JOHN AT A 1973 PARTY IN SAN CLEMENTE

Q. Was there ever anything between Henry Kissinger and Jill St. John or the other starlets Kissinger used to date before he married his present and second wife, Nancy?—M.H., Washington, D.C.
A. Nothing serious between Jill St. John and Kissinger, who was frequently used as a front in Hollywood. Much more between Kissinger and starlets Marianne Hill and Judy Brown.

Q. When Robert F. Kennedy was assassinated in Los Angeles, was his wife Ethel pregnant? Is there a chance that she will marry again? — Sam Hall, Charleston, S.C.
A. Robert Kennedy was gunned down in Los Angeles June 5, 1968. His wife gave birth to their daughter Rory Elizabeth Catherine six months later. It was her 11th child. Her friends predict that she will not marry again.

Q. I understand comedian Redd Foxx is dating a black giantess who is 6 feet 6. Can you identify her?—Iona Jones, Philadephia.
A. Among others, Foxx has been dating Tamara Dobson, formerly of Baltimore and star of several films. She is 6 feet 1.

TAMARA DOBSON

Q. Who owns the Book-of-the-Month Club, founded in 1926?—Marvin Corsiglia, Clifton, N.J.
A. The Book-of-the-Month Club is a publicly held corporation, controlled by the family of its founder, Harry Scherman, who died in 1969. It also owns the Dolphin Book Club, the Fortune Book Club, the Cooking and Crafts Book Club and the Quality Paperback Book Club.

Q. How much does the Prime Minister of Great Britain get in annual salary?—Fred Gersh, Des Moines, Iowa.
A. £20,000 a year, or, at the current rate of exchange, less than $40,000.

Q. How old is Betty Furness, and will she replace Barbara Walters on the "Today" TV show? I also notice that Sen. Ed Brooke (R., Mass.) has divorced his wife. Does that mean he soon will marry Barbara Walters?—G.L., Roxbury, Mass.
A. Betty Furness is 60. She is one of the possible replacements for Barbara Walters. It is true that Brooke has instituted proceedings to divorce his wife, but there is practically no chance of his marrying Barbara Walters.

Tar/Taste Theory Exploded.

Taste-science breakthrough gives low tar MERIT the flavor of cigarettes having 60% more tar.

By locating certain flavor-rich ingredients in cigarette smoke, ingredients that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar, researchers at Philip Morris have disproven the theory that cigarette flavor depends on the amount of tar that goes with it.

They've discovered how to pack flavor—unprecedented flavor—into a cigarette that delivers one of the lowest tar levels in smoking today.

The discovery is called 'Enriched Flavor.'™ It's extra flavor, natural flavor, and only MERIT has it.

MERIT and MERIT MENTHOL

Tests Verify Taste

In taste tests involving thousands of cigarette smokers like yourself, MERIT was reported to deliver as much—or more—taste than five current low tar leaders.

What's really startling is that these five brands have up to 60% more tar than MERIT.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough.

Now smoke the cigarette.

MERIT. Incredible smoking satisfaction at only 9 mg. tar.

Marthe Keller— Hollywood's Newest Import

by Lloyd Shearer

Marthe Keller assumes a Dietrich-like stance in a French movie. The well-endowed Swiss Miss is also starring in three American pictures.

HOLLYWOOD, CAL.

There is only one bankable film actress in Hollywood — Barbra Streisand. The banks will loan production money on the films in which she stars because they are convinced she is "box office."

They will also secure motion pictures with Robert Redford, Steve McQueen, Paul Newman and a few other so-called male superstars, but Barbra is the only female in the "bankable" category.

For the past year or so Barbra and her roommate, hairdresser Jon Peters, have been busy producing a musical version of "A Star Is Born," the 1937 classic in which the late Fredric March superbly played a fading film star whose career ends in suicide as his actress wife, Janet Gaynor, rises to stardom.

Since Barbra has been busy, and the studios here have developed no other "box office" actresses, they've been compelled to look abroad for distaff talent.

Their latest import is a tall, well-endowed 21-jeweled movement from Switzerland, Marthe Keller, age 30.

If you haven't heard the name, you soon will, for Marthe (pronounced Mart) stars in three biggies scheduled for release within the next year.

They are "Marathon Man," with Dustin Hoffman and Laurence Olivier, in which she plays Hoffman's lover and a courier for a sinister organization headed by Lord Olivier; "Black Sunday," in which she plays a Palestinian terrorist helping to blow up the Super Bowl with 80,000 Americans and the President of the U.S.; and "Bobby Deerfield," a screenplay adapted from the Erich Maria Remarque novel "Heaven Has No Favorites," in which she co-stars opposite Al Pacino, teaching him to live life at its fullest.

Who is Marthe Keller to be signed for three major productions and eventually to be accorded the well-known Hollywood buildup, when a year ago she couldn't even speak English?

She is one of Europe's top stars, immensely talented, free-wheeling, free-loving, talkative beyond description, uninhibited, colorful, yet marvelously disciplined and thoroughly trained.

It was John Schlesinger, director of "Marathon Man," who ran into her at the Cannes Film Festival last year and suggested she fly to New York for a screen test opposite Dustin Hoffman, "just to see if the chemistry of their personalities was compatible."

As Marthe tells it in her broken English: "They sent to me in Switzerland in English a script of 'Marathon Man.' I cannot speak English, so how I am to do screen test?

'Beautiful'

"I have this friend who speaks English, a ski champion. He read to me the scenes, and I memorize them by sounds. When I meet Schlesinger, the director, he explain everything to me, everything. I understand nothing, so I say to everything, 'Beautiful, beautiful, beautiful.'

"He is satisfied, but when I arriving in New York, I am sick with nerves. I cannot sleep night before screen test. When I get up I drink bottle of red wine for breakfast.

"When I arriving for screen test I meet Dustin. He is so short. I am so tall. He is beautiful. At once he makes 'chokes' by taking off his shoes. I am tipsy with wine. But the screen test go well. Everyone is so happy. I say to myself, 'What the hell you nervous for?' I get the part, and I am in Hollywood."

In time Marthe Keller, protected and warned by filmland's press agents and front office executives, will undoubtedly become less frank and open. At the moment she is still refreshingly forthright, especially for a Swiss, about the most intimate aspects of her life.

Some weeks ago, for example, Donald Zec, an English reporter, asked her about her love affair with French hearing tests, a patient listens to a series of sounds and, as the sound is progressively lowered, indicates whether he can hear it. This sort of test is useless with most infants and little children.

The Chicago scientists have developed a procedure called electrochochleography which requires no participation by the patient. It can determine the exact condition of his hearing while he sleeps. A very fine wire electrode is passed through the eardrum into the middle ear and a computer measures the patient's electrical responses to a complete range of sound stimuli. The test spots defective hearing in infancy and the child can get a hearing aid and special training.

The Chicago test can also identify children who don't have hearing trouble. A few months ago, a 2-year-old boy was taken to the University of Chicago Hospital because he didn't seem to hear clattering dishes, the telephone, TV—in fact, any of the noises around him. Two ear specialists said that he was deaf. Drs. Naunton and Zerlin tested the child and found that his hearing mechanism was in perfect working order. His problem was emotional. He could hear, but he didn't want to. He had found an effective way to shut out his parents' endless bickering.

5. CURE FOR TIC DOULOUREUX. Many medical authorities say that the pain of tic douloureux is the most terrible that humans can experience—stabbing, agonizing pains that shoot across victims' faces like jolts of burning electricity. Anything can set off the pains: eating, shaving, washing one's face. In the past, drugs have given merely short-term relief, and surgery has left the face numb.

A new type of artificial wrist enabled William Hoag of Tucson, Ariz., to resume his work as a part-time organist.

Now, there is a cure. Dr. Peter J. Jannetta, a distinguished neurosurgeon at the University of Pittsburgh Medical School, discovered that the pain of tic douloureux is due to the pressure of an artery at the base of the brain on the trigeminal nerve as it sweeps down to the face. Dr. Jannetta devised a surgical technique for removing this pressure. He inserts a minuscule plastic sponge between the artery and the nerve.

The Jannetta operation has been successfully performed on 300 persons throughout the U.S. This writer watched Dr. Ronald I. Apfelbaum of New York City's Montefiore Hospital operate on a 61-year-old man who'd gone through the hell of tic douloureux for eight years. Working under an operating microscope, Dr. Apfelbaum made a two-inch incision behind the man's ear, exposing his brain. With beautiful delicacy, he pulled back the artery that was pressing on the trigeminal nerve and placed a diminutive plastic sponge between them. The operation lasted a scant two hours. Two days later, the man was happily sitting up in bed, his pain gone permanently.

"I feel I've been reborn," he said.

6. EARLY TEST FOR EMPHYSEMA. Hospitals can now tell whether a child—even an infant in arms—is likely to develop emphysema or some other chronic obstructive lung disease 30 years later by means of a sensitive new blood test called Rapi/tex AAT, developed by Behring Diagnostics.

Technicians take a small sample of blood from the child and measure the protein in it called alpha-1-antitrypsin. It has been discovered that children deficient in this protein are apt to develop emphysema or other obstructive lung diseases.

Loma Linda University Medical Center in Loma Linda, Cal., employs the test on children as young as six weeks of age. It strongly recommends the test for any child whose family has a history of emphysema.

7. COLLEGE FOR THE HANDICAPPED. All of the 700 patients at Goldwater Memorial Hospital on Franklin D. Roosevelt Island in New York City are severely disabled, confined to wheelchairs. Many are quadriplegics, unable to move their arms or legs a single inch. Some have been in the hospital for 40 years.

To impart more meaning to her patients' lives, Matilda Lang, chief of rehabilitation counseling, operates an educational program in the hospital where patients can obtain high school equivalency diplomas. Afterwards, patients who are physically able can attend neighboring colleges. They are driven back and forth.

Most important, Goldwater Hospital has pioneered a program that allows quadriplegic patients to attend college, too, by remote control. A conference room at the hospital has been hooked up by telephone to various classrooms at nearby Queensborough Community College. By means of an amplifying system, the quadriplegics listen to a professor lecturing as well as the responses of his students. The patients can pose any questions they wish. They dictate their homework and examination papers to hospital aides.

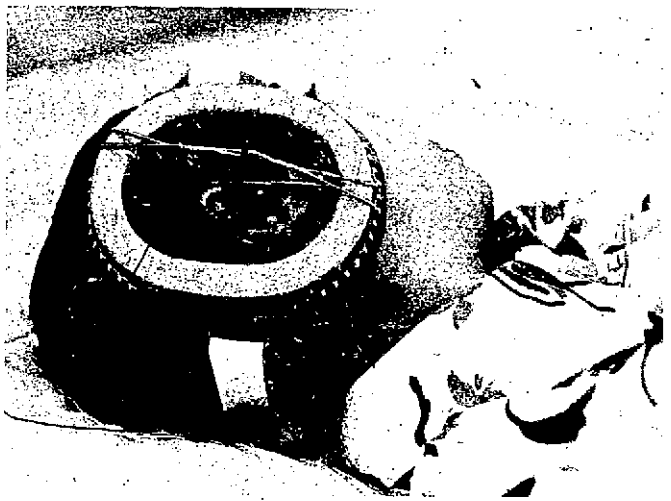

Already three quadriplegics have earned bachelor's degrees, and a fourth will soon receive one.

Herbert J. Larken, a 26-year-old patient, once a star athlete who lost the use of his arms and legs five years ago in an accident, is enrolled in this college program. He is majoring in psychology and hopes to become a youth counselor.

"It's a real challenge for me," he declares.

Observations

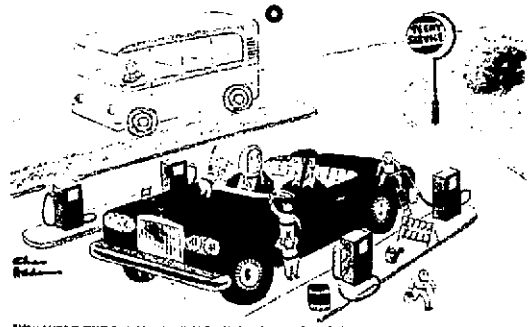

Awakening? We're heartened by a recent Roper poll, showing that three out of four Americans now rate development of a sound national energy policy as one of the two greatest needs from Congress. It's right up there with tax reform, which is great news for those who believe the legislators will eventually heed the people. Because recognizing that a problem exists is just a step ahead of finding a solution.

Paper Tiger. Forty years ago, the Federal Register, which lists all the federal regulations, contained 2,619 pages. Last year it had 60,221, including this regulatory goodie on ladders from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration: "The angle (a) between the loaded and unloaded rails and the horizontal is to be calculated from the trigonometric equation:

$$\text{Sine } a = \frac{\text{Difference in deflection}}{\text{Ladder width}}"$$

Understand now?

Another voice. Professor M. A. Adelman of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a frequent critic of the oil industry, writes in the Washington Post: "Congress should reject the proposals for disintegration of oil companies into separate entities for producing, refining, and marketing. 'Vertical divestiture' would be expensive, it would diminish competition at home. It would waste our chance to increase competition abroad. . . . [It] would keep Congress and the oil industry busy for years, spinning their wheels, going no place, postponing investment decisions, losing a chance for active defense against the cartel, admitting finally: 'I wasted time, and now doth time waste me.' "

"YOU WERE THE BIG MOUTH THAT WANTED OIL COMPANIES TO BE SMALLER"

Helping minority businessmen: 3,690 of them last year, to be exact. That's the special contribution of a unique non-profit agency, the Interracial Council for Business Opportunity. In Los Angeles, New York, St. Louis, Atlanta, Newark, Dallas and Waco, Tex., more than 600 volunteers from established corporations have helped black, Puerto Rican and other minority entrepreneurs with picking locations, bookkeeping, feasibility studies and obtaining financing. Typical success: a young man in New Jersey who dreamed of a business transporting handicapped children to their special schools today operates nearly 40 vehicles and employs some 60 persons. Many corporations help minority businesses by buying from them, by encouraging minority vendors to make their pitch to their purchasing agents. If you believe in a social role for private enterprise, you just have to like this program.

Marthe with Dustin Hoffman in a scene from "Marathon Man." One of the leading stars in Europe, she has learned to speak English—sort of.

director Philippe de Broca, by whom she has a 4-year-old son, Alexandre, born out of wedlock.

"How come," Zec asked, "you didn't marry de Broca?"

"Happens," Marthe blithely explained, "he was married to someone else at that time. After, when he got divorce, I want him no longer. When I don't want a man, I walk away."

Marthe played much the same scene with another lover, French director Claude Lelouch who starred her in "And Now My Love," a film which first brought her to the attention of American moviegoers.

"When you are in love," Marthe explains, "you hate man you love, because man you love has power to make you suffer, so you fight much. When you love less, you fight less, become friends more. Intelligent men understand me. I am European. This is sometimes difficult for American men. They are too much on sex. Right away, sex. No flirt. No warmup. Right away, sex.

"I remember when I am 16, studying at Stanislavsky acting school in Munich, I receive phone call to come to Paris. Big producer wants to audition me. I am young, innocent, virgin. I go to Paris hotel to meet producer.

Turns down 'big deal'

"He is wearing bathrobe and cigar. Right away he offers me big deal—sex for stardom. I say no. Later people say I am crazy. But that is how I am. When I in love, I give everything. Not in love, I give nothing. For Marthe only one affair at a time."

Marthe Keller was born Jan. 20, 1946, in Basel, Switzerland, where her father, a jockey and horse-breeder, wanted her to become a ballerina. He enrolled her in the Basel Opera School of Ballet at 8, but an accident on the ski slopes ended her dancing career at age 15.

"Was lucky for me," Marthe confesses. "I had no talent as dancer, so I move to acting."

As a young actress, Marthe Keller spent two years learning to lower her high-pitched voice, then won a three-year scholarship to the Stanislavsky School of Dramatic Art in Munich and the Brecht Theater in East Berlin. She also joined the famed Schiller Theater in Berlin for two years, specialized in Shakespearean roles.

Her first film role was a small one in "Funeral in Berlin." This was followed by several French television roles, one of which caught the eye of de Broca, who cast her opposite Yves Montand in a romantic comedy, "Le Diable par la Queue" (Devil by the Tail).

Eventually Marthe and de Broca became lovers, and she gave birth to his child, an event that interrupted her steadily rising career only temporarily.

Big hit on French TV

In Paris, she played the lead in "La Demoiselle d'Avignon," one of the most popular series in the history of French TV. She acted a princess working as an au pair girl, and the show's ratings hit an all-time high.

After several years as "La Demoiselle," Marthe was signed for a string of highly successful European films, among them Claude Lelouch's "Toute Une Vie" (And Now My Love), in which she played the spoiled daughter of a Jewish shoe manufacturer. The film received an Academy Award for best screenplay, won the Los Angeles Film Critics' annual award for best foreign film, and Marthe Keller, in Hollywood production eyes, became someone to watch.

Once she landed the female lead in "Marathon Man," to be released in October, she gave such an outstanding performance that producer Robert Evans signed her again to play the fanatical terrorist in "Black Sunday."

She learned English three weeks before going to work in "Marathon," and when "Marathon" was finished, she started the next day on "Black Sunday."

Now she is hard at work in Switzerland, Italy and France on "Bobby Deerfield," for which she is receiving $200,000, which is exactly $165,000 more than what she was paid for "Marathon Man."

A tall (5 feet 8½ inch), green-eyed honey-blonde, Marthe Keller has a villa in Verdier, Switzerland, an apartment off the Boulevard St.-Germain in Paris and possibly the brightest future of any young actress in motion pictures. In Hollywood parlance, she is hot and getting hotter by the film.

10 Major Advances in Hospital Treatment

by Donald Robinson

A 52-year-old attorney walked out of Barnes Hospital in St. Louis recently with his face aglow. He'd been completely blind for 15 years. Now he could see perfectly! He was so thrilled that he and his wife drove around the city every day for two weeks just so he could feast his eyes on all the new buildings.

The lawyer's vision was restored by a remarkable new form of microsurgery that promises to help blind victims of diabetes to see again. The American Hospital Association describes the procedure as "one of the great new advances in hospital care."

The AHA has conducted a nationwide survey of medical advances, and its president, J. Alexander McMahon, stated: "We found American hospitals are doing things for patients we didn't dream were possible a few years ago."

Here are the 10 most significant advances:

1. NEW SIGHT FOR THE BLIND. The largest single cause of blindness in the United States today is diabetes. Each year as many as 5000 men and women go blind because of a condition called diabetic retinopathy, in which old clotted blood in the eye evolves into fatty, fibrous tissues that "black out" the retina. Until lately, these people had no hope of ever seeing again. Then a brilliant ophthalmologic surgeon, Dr. Robert Machemer of the University of Miami Hospitals in Florida, pioneered a technique for safely extracting the fibrous material from inside diabetic eyes. Two other ophthalmologic surgeons, Dr. Nicholas Douvas of Port Huron Hospital in Michigan and Dr. Edward Okun of Barnes Hospital, modified and improved the procedure. Peering through a special operating microscope, they insert an infinitesimally tiny instrument into the eye. The instrument sucks the ugly fibers into a microscopically small hole where a roto-cutter chops them into fine pieces that are expelled by the suction. Light can reach the retina once more and the patient can see.

More than 2000 persons have undergone this operation in 100 hospitals throughout the country with a success rate of more than 60 percent.

Dr. Edward Okun of St. Louis with a microscope and tiny instruments cleans the eyes of a patient made blind by diabetes. The technique has been used 2000 times.

The reactions of the formerly blind patients and their families are poignant. Not long ago, a 30-year-old man who had been totally blind for three years received his sight back from Dr. Okun. He'd gotten married while blind to a woman he'd never seen. She was nervous as to what he'd think of her. When Dr. Okun took off his bandages, the patient smiled. "Not bad," he said.

2. AN ARTIFICIAL WRIST. A new kind of artificial wrist has been developed at Arizona Medical Center in Tucson for people whose wrists have been helplessly contorted by rheumatoid arthritis, other crippling diseases, or injuries. They can do things they haven't been able to do for many years: for example, zipping zippers, buttoning buttons, turning doorknobs. They can lift heavy objects. Best of all, their excruciating pain is relieved.

The artificial wrist was designed by Dr. Robert Volz, orthopedic surgeon at Arizona Medical Center. It is a small plastic and metal mechanism comprising two interfitting parts that are inserted in the wrist within an inch-square space. Most other artificial wrists permit only unnatural and unstable motions. The Volz wrist provides both mobility and stability.

The first man to receive the Volz wrist was William Hoag, a Tucson printer and part-time professional organist. He'd been compelled to give up his musical career after his right wrist had been maimed in a fall. Today, he is playing the organ again.

3. COUGHING TO KEEP YOUR HEART ALIVE. It can happen at any time in any hospital. Suddenly, without warning, a patient's heart stops; this is termed cardiac arrest. In 11 seconds, the patient can lose consciousness. Death usually follows.

If the condition is detected in time, an application of electricity directly to the patient's heart can often make it beat normally again. The problem is how to keep the patient alive during those crucial moments before the right equipment can be readied to treat him. Strenuously massaging the outside of the chest can frequently do this, but it can be dangerous. It can cause broken ribs and other complications. Fortunately, a better, safer technique—wonderful in its simplicity—has been developed by Dr. F. Mason Sones, the world-famous cardiologist at Cleveland (Ohio) Clinic. He just tells the patients to cough, forcefully and rhythmically. There is a good chance the heart will start beating normally again.

A team of cardiologists at the UCLA Harbor General Hospital in Torrance, Cal., tested the Sones technique on patients undergoing catheterization whose hearts had stopped. The team reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association that every one of these patients was saved.

4. TEST FOR DEAFNESS. Two scientists at the University of Chicago Medical School—Dr. Ralph F. Naunton, chief of otolaryngology, and Dr. Stanley Zerlin, a mechanically minded clinical psychologist—have solved one of the most difficult problems facing ear specialists: how to tell whether infants and young children are totally deaf. With standard

ADVANCES CONTINUED

Conn., states, "When a patient walks into a hospital, he is reduced to a child. He is stripped of his clothing. His authority is taken away and he is full of fear. He needs information and reassurance."

Danbury Hospital has embarked upon a broad program employing transactional analysis techniques to teach its 1350 nurses, technicians and other employees that patients are people. Special classes are held in which trained experts explain the psychological reasons for patients' reactions and what hospital aides can do to make them feel better. A patient who rings vainly for a nurse for 20 minutes feels unimportant, a second-class citizen. The nurse is urged to explain carefully the cause for the delay and make the patient realize how important he is.

Gail Vallely, assistant director of dietetics, says that the transactional anaiysis training has done wonders for her. "Meals are the one thing patients look forward to, the one thing that doesn't hurt them," she declares. "It's one of the few pleasant things that happen to them in the hospital. If a meal is not what they expected, patients can be extremely nasty. Your first reaction is to get mad. But transactional analysis has given me a lot of insight. I can get along with patients much better."

The hospital says that patient complaints have dropped appreciably. The program has been so effective that it has been adopted by Yale-New Haven Hospital and Day Kimball Hospital in Putnam, Conn.

9. STOPPING SUICIDES. Would-be suicides who take overdoses of sleeping pills and other drugs are getting a second chance for life at Albert Einstein Medical Center in Philadelphia. After 10 years of research, Dr. Jerry L. Rosenbaum, a kidney specialist, has perfected a new device for filtering poisons out of human blood. The device, known as the EX 60 Cartridge, consists of a short plastic column filled with an absorbent resin. When a patient is brought into the hospital, his poisoned blood is quickly withdrawn, pumped into the column, and heparin added to prevent clotting. As the blood circulates through the resin material, the poisons are filtered out. The cleansed blood is then returned to the patient.

The EX 60 Cartridge has proven amazingly effective. Most poison patients in deep comas who might have died or, at the least, remained comatose for four to five days, are being "brought back to life" in three to four hours. Recenily, a 58-year-old woman who'd swallowed 40 sleeping pills was brought to Einstein Center in a deep coma and on the verge of death. Her blood was pumped through the column, and in two hours she was responding to verbal commands. She fully recovered.

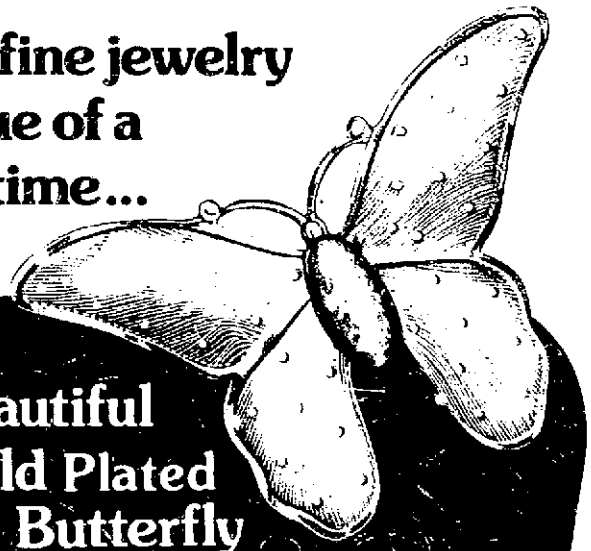

10. MICROSCOPE WITH A MEMORY. Counting and classifying white blood cells is one of the most critical assignments a hospital hematology laboratory can have. It can determine whether patients have parasitic, bacterial or viral infections, asthma, appendicitis or leukemia. In many hospitals, this is done with a hand-counting machine—a tiring, boring task and liable to human error. At Good Samaritan Hospital in Cincinnati a computerized microscope does the work. A television camera inside the computer scans the white cells through the microscope, and the computer identifies and classifies them. If it cannot classify an abnormal cell, it instantly notifies the operator.

The hematologists at Good Samaritan say that the apparatus (called LARC for Leukocyte Automatic Recognition Computer) has vastly speeded up their reports. "And we are a lot surer of our findings," they state.

Dr. Jerry Rosenbaum of Philadelphia holds a fast-acting, resin-filled filter that he developed to purify blood of people who try to kill themselves with drugs.

hearing tests, a patient listens to a series of sounds and, as the sound is progressively lowered, indicates whether he can hear it. This sort of test is useless with most infants and little children.

The Chicago scientists have developed a procedure called electrochochleography which requires no participation by the patient. It can determine the exact condition of his hearing while he sleeps. A very fine wire electrode is passed through the eardrum into the middle ear and a computer measures the patient's electrical responses to a complete range of sound stimuli. The test spots defective hearing in infancy and the child can get a hearing aid and special training.

The Chicago test can also identify children who don't have hearing trouble. A few months ago, a 2-year-old boy was taken to the University of Chicago Hospital because he didn't seem to hear clattering dishes, the telephone, TV—in fact, any of the noises around him. Two ear specialists said that he was deaf. Drs. Naunton and Zerlin tested the child and found that his hearing mechanism was in perfect working order. His problem was emotional. He could hear, but he didn't want to. He had found an effective way to shut out his parents' endless bickering.

5. CURE FOR TIC DOULOUREUX. Many medical authorities say that the pain of tic douloureux is the most terrible that humans can experience—stabbing, agonizing pains that shoot across victims' faces like jolts of burning electricity. Anything can set off the pains: eating, shaving, washing one's face. In the past, drugs have given merely short-term relief, and surgery has left the face numb.

A new type of artificial wrist enabled William Hoag of Tucson, Ariz., to resume his work as a part-time organist.

Now, there is a cure. Dr. Peter J. Jannetta, a distinguished neurosurgeon at the University of Pittsburgh Medical School, discovered that the pain of tic douloureux is due to the pressure of an artery at the base of the brain on the trigeminal nerve as it sweeps down to the face. Dr. Jannetta devised a surgical technique for removing this pressure. He inserts a minuscule plastic sponge between the artery and the nerve.

The Jannetta operation has been successfully performed on 300 persons throughout the U.S. This writer watched Dr. Ronald I. Apfelbaum of New York City's Montefiore Hospital operate on a 61-year-old man who'd gone through the hell of tic douloureux for eight years. Working under an operating microscope, Dr. Apfelbaum made a two-inch incision behind the man's ear, exposing his brain. With beautiful delicacy, he pulled back the artery that was pressing on the trigeminal nerve and placed a diminutive plastic sponge between them. The operation lasted a scant two hours. Two days later, the man was happily sitting up in bed, his pain gone permanently.

"I feel I've been reborn," he said.

6. EARLY TEST FOR EMPHYSEMA. Hospitals can now tell whether a child—even an infant in arms—is likely to develop emphysema or some other chronic obstructive lung disease 30 years later by means of a sensitive new blood test called Rapi/tex AAT, developed by Behring Diagnostics.

Technicians take a small sample of blood from the child and measure the protein in it called alpha-1-antitrypsin. It has been discovered that children deficient in this protein are apt to develop emphysema or other obstructive lung diseases.

Loma Linda University Medical Center in Loma Linda, Cal., employs the test on children as young as six weeks of age. It strongly recommends the test for any child whose family has a history of emphysema.

7. COLLEGE FOR THE HANDICAPPED. All of the 700 patients at Goldwater Memorial Hospital on Franklin D. Roosevelt Island in New York City are severely disabled, confined to wheelchairs. Many are quadriplegics, unable to move their arms or legs a single inch. Some have been in the hospital for 40 years.

To impart more meaning to her patients' lives, Matilda Lang, chief of rehabilitation counseling, operates an educational program in the hospital where patients can obtain high school equivalency diplomas. Afterwards, patients who are physically able can attend neighboring colleges. They are driven back and forth.

Most important, Goldwater Hospital has pioneered a program that allows quadriplegic patients to attend college, too, by remote control. A conference room at the hospital has been hooked up by telephone to various classrooms at nearby Queensborough Community College. By means of an amplifying system, the quadriplegics listen to a professor lecturing as well as the responses of his students. The patients can pose any questions they wish. They dictate their homework and examination papers to hospital aides.

Already three quadriplegics have earned bachelor's degrees, and a fourth will soon receive one.

Herbert J. Larken, a 26-year-old patient, once a star athlete who lost the use of his arms and legs five years ago in an accident, is enrolled in this college program. He is majoring in psychology and hopes to become a youth counselor.

"It's a real challenge for me," he declares.

U.S. War Resisters in Sweden

by Charles Peterson

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN. Several years ago when the Vietnam war was raging, approximately 700 American draft resisters and deserters took refuge in Sweden, a country which felt strongly that the U.S. had no legitimate war role in Vietnam.

Some of these 700 draft resisters came from the U.S., and some of the deserters came from Vietnam to Japan where they were smuggled by the Japanese underground aboard Soviet vessels that carried them to Sweden. Other deserters left U.S. Army camps in West Germany and made their way to Stockholm.

Today, a little more than a year since the war ended, there are 200 such Americans remaining in Sweden. Most of them work at menial jobs–washing dishes, waiting tables, collecting bus tickets, serving as hospital orderlies. Most of them are married to or live with Swedish girls from whom they've learned Swedish. Sweden also offers free language instruction to immigrants.

William Schiller, 33, a draft resister from Chicago, is probably the most successful of the Americans who journeyed to Sweden to avoid participating in the Vietnam war. A journalism major from the University of Illinois, he is employed as a newsman for the Swedish Broadcasting Corp.

In Peace Corps

Schiller, whose mother works for the Veterans Administration in Minneapolis, is a former member of the Peace Corps in Peru. "I quit the Peace Corps," he explains, "and got my draft notice right after that. I was opposed to the U.S. intervention in Vietnam, so I went over to Europe, washed dishes in London, made my way to Austria where I have relatives who own a farm.

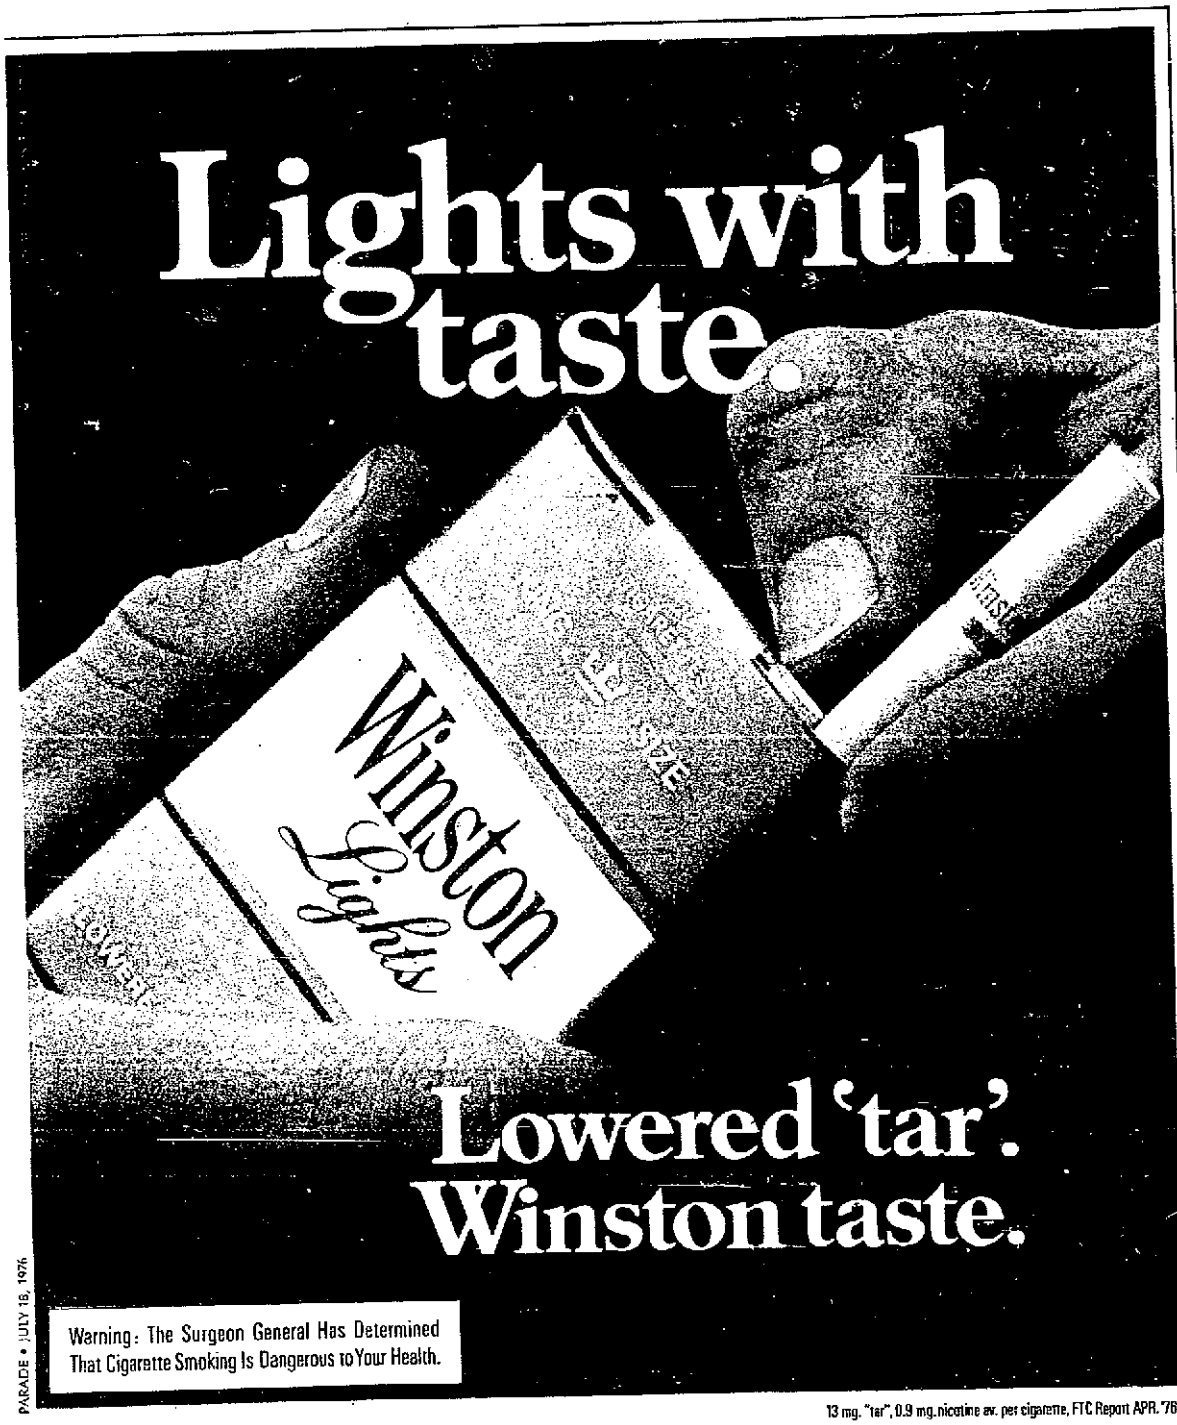

"I worked in Vienna, then in Athens on an English-language newspaper, then I came to Sweden where my U.S. passport expired. I reported to the U.S. Embassy and asked for a new one.

"My name was on a list of war resisters, so they wouldn't give me a new passport. In fact, some weeks later I got a letter from the embassy with a warrant for my arrest. I was warned that further use of my old passport would only add to my legal violations. I was advised to turn myself in.

Alien's passport

"Fortunately," Schiller narrates, "I also got a letter from the Swedish authorities telling me that they would issue me an alien's passport and that I was welcome to stay in Sweden. For a young man who'd been wandering for years not knowing where he was going to end up, that letter made me feel that I was saved at last, that I was in paradise, that I'd found a home."

In 1974, eight days after President Ford pardoned Richard Nixon, Ford established a clemency board for Vietnam war resisters and deserters. The board offered clemency to approximately 120,000 young men but required them to perform up to two years of alternative service and to sign loyalty oaths. More than 80 percent of those eligible for the clemency program boycotted it.

Conn., states, "When a patient walks into a hospital, he is reduced to a child. He is stripped of his clothing. His authority is taken away and he is full of fear. He needs information and reassurance."

Danbury Hospital has embarked upon a broad program employing transactional analysis techniques to teach its 1350 nurses, technicians and other employees that patients are people. Special classes are held in which trained experts explain the psychological reasons for patients' reactions and what hospital aides can do to make them feel better. A patient who rings vainly for a nurse for 20 minutes feels unimportant, a second-class citizen. The nurse is urged to explain carefully the cause for the delay and make the patient realize how important he is.

Gail Vallely, assistant director of dietetics, says that the transactional analysis training has done wonders for her. "Meals are the one thing patients look forward to, the one thing that doesn't hurt them," she declares. "It's one of the few pleasant things that happen to them in the hospital. If a meal is not what they expected, patients can be extremely nasty. Your first reaction is to get mad. But transactional analysis has given me a lot of insight. I can get along with patients much better."

The hospital says that patient complaints have dropped appreciably. The program has been so effective that it has been adopted by Yale-New Haven Hospital and Day Kimball Hospital in Putnam, Conn.

9. STOPPING SUICIDES. Would-be suicides who take overdoses of sleeping pills and other drugs are getting a second chance for life at Albert Einstein Medical Center in Philadelphia. After 10 years of research, Dr. Jerry L. Rosenbaum, a kidney specialist, has perfected a new device for filtering poisons out of human blood. The device, known as the EX 60 Cartridge, consists of a short plastic column filled with an absorbent resin. When a patient is brought into the hospital, his poisoned blood is quickly withdrawn, pumped into the column, and heparin added to prevent clotting. As the blood circulates through the resin material, the poisons are filtered out. The cleansed blood is then returned to the patient.

The EX 60 Cartridge has proven amazingly effective. Most poison patients in deep comas who might have died or, at the least, remained comatose for four to five days, are being "brought back to life" in three to four hours. Recently, a 58-year-old woman who'd swallowed 40 sleeping pills was brought to Einstein Center in a deep coma and on the verge of death. Her blood was pumped through the column, and in two hours she was responding to verbal commands. She fully recovered.

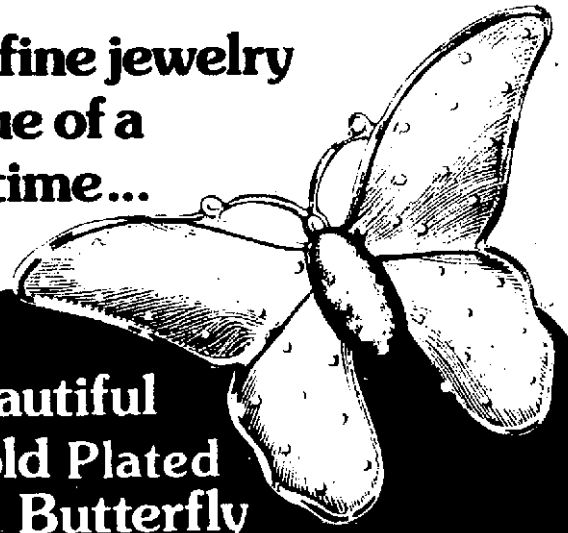

10. MICROSCOPE WITH A MEMORY. Counting and classifying white blood cells is one of the most critical assignments a hospital hematology laboratory can have. It can determine whether patients have parasitic, bacterial or viral infections, asthma, appendicitis or leukemia. In many hospitals, this is done with a hand-counting machine—a tiring, boring task and liable to human error. At Good Samaritan Hospital in Cincinnati a computerized microscope does the work. A television camera inside the computer scans the white cells through the microscope, and the computer identifies and classifies them. If it cannot classify an abnormal cell, it instantly notifies the operator.

The hematologists at Good Samaritan say that the apparatus (called LARC for Leukocyte Automatic Recognition Computer) has vastly speeded up their reports. "And we are a lot surer of our findings," they state.

Dr. Jerry Rosenbaum of Philadelphia holds a fast-acting, resin-filled filter that he developed to purify blood of people who try to kill themselves with drugs.

U.S. War Resisters in Sweden

by Charles Peterson

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN.

Several years ago when the Vietnam war was raging, approximately 700 American draft resisters and deserters took refuge in Sweden, a country which felt strongly that the U.S. had no legitimate war role in Vietnam.

Some of these 700 draft resisters came from the U.S., and some of the deserters came from Vietnam to Japan where they were smuggled by the Japanese underground aboard Soviet vessels that carried them to Sweden. Other deserters left U.S. Army camps in West Germany and made their way to Stockholm.

Today, a little more than a year since the war ended, there are 200 such Americans remaining in Sweden. Most of them work at menial jobs–washing dishes, waiting tables, collecting bus tickets, serving as hospital orderlies. Most of them are married to or live with Swedish girls from whom they've learned Swedish. Sweden also offers free language instruction to immigrants.

William Schiller, 33, a draft resister from Chicago, is probably the most successful of the Americans who journeyed to Sweden to avoid participating in the Vietnam war. A journalism major from the University of Illinois, he is employed as a newsman for the Swedish Broadcasting Corp.

In Peace Corps

Schiller, whose mother works for the Veterans Administration in Minneapolis, is a former member of the Peace Corps in Peru. "I quit the Peace Corps," he explains, "and got my draft notice right after that. I was opposed to the U.S. intervention in Vietnam, so I went over to Europe, washed dishes in London, made my way to Austria where I have relatives who own a farm.

"I worked in Vienna, then in Athens on an English-language newspaper, then I came to Sweden where my U.S. passport expired. I reported to the U.S. Embassy and asked for a new one.

"My name was on a list of war resisters, so they wouldn't give me a new passport. In fact, some weeks later I got a letter from the embassy with a warrant for my arrest. I was warned that further use of my old passport would only add to my legal violations. I was advised to turn myself in.

Alien's passport

"Fortunately," Schiller narrates, "I also got a letter from the Swedish authorities telling me that they would issue me an alien's passport and that I was welcome to stay in Sweden. For a young man who'd been wandering for years not knowing where he was going to end up, that letter made me feel that I was saved at last, that I was in paradise, that I'd found a home."

In 1974, eight days after President Ford pardoned Richard Nixon, Ford established a clemency board for Vietnam war resisters and deserters. The board offered clemency to approximately 120,000 young men but required them to perform up to two years of alternative service and to sign loyalty oaths. More than 80 percent of those eligible for the clemency program boycotted it.

William Schiller, 33, a draft resister from Chicago, is employed as a newsman and has "found a life" in Sweden. He concedes that a lot of Americans found the going tough, but says, "Most of us here feel we have done nothing wrong."

"Most of us in Sweden," says Schiller, "rejected the program because we felt it was wrong. Most of us Americans here feel that we have done nothing wrong. Many of us are proud of the fact that we didn't kill any Vietnamese. We believe we're entitled to an amnesty, that we're not criminals. Jimmy Carter says he's prepared to pardon all of us. The pardon infers we're guilty of a crime. I don't think I am."

Schiller concedes that not all of the Americans who came to Sweden to avoid the war were or are idealists.

"A lot of them," he says, "especially those who deserted from Vietnam, were dope addicts when they arrived here. They got into trouble quickly and more than 150 were deported for narcotics offenses, armed robbery, and other crimes. Others were very young. They had no marketable skills. They were frightened and lonely. They couldn't find a job, and they, too, turned to drugs. One guy tried to steal a plane to fly home to the States.

Marriages, families

"But others who were older and more mature and had some education met Swedish girls, started families and are now reconciled to staying here.

"When I first came here, I didn't speak the language. I couldn't get a job in journalism, so I started off washing dishes and then I washed hospital patients, and eventually, after I got to know the language, I got a job with Swedish Broadcasting. But of course I still miss America and my family.

"I have one brother, married with children I've never seen except in photographs. I'd like to see them. Luckily my mother comes over once a year to visit me. That's a comfort.

"When President Ford issued his clemency program, my mother said, 'Thank God, my boy's coming home.' When I explained to her the points of the program and said I didn't want any provisional clemency, it was tough on her, but eventually she understood.

Defends choice

"I'm still an American, and if I had to do it all over again, make the choice of coming over here or fighting in Vietnam, I'd make the same choice. I think if the government wants you to go and kill other people in the name of American glory or interests, whether your government is right or wrong, then you've got to make a decision. Is there very much difference between U.S. soldiers massacring innocent women and children at My Lai and Hitler's men massacring the Jews?

"Hubert Humphrey was over here a while back, and when the journalists interviewed him, he said he was opposed to amnesty because several of his neighbors' sons had been killed in the war . . . But the real question is who sent the sons of Hubert Humphrey's neighbors to die in the war? Who made them go and kill and be killed? I think that's what unconditional amnesty is all about."

Schiller likes Sweden and the Swedish way of life. "It gives you a perspective," he says, "and makes you realize what is really good in the United States. There's so much that's taken for granted in the States that one has to leave the country to recognize its goodness. But there's much that's good here in Sweden, and here is where I've found a life."

Keeping Up... With Youth

Pool Warning

Last year an estimated 65,000 persons required hospital emergency room treatment for injuries associated with swimming pools, swimming pool slides and diving boards. And most of the victims were young people.

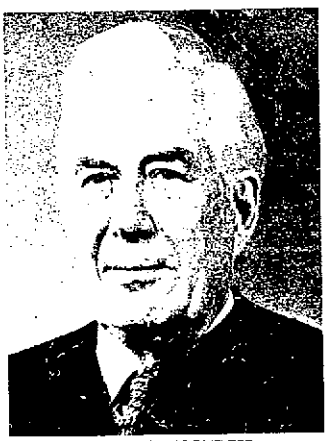

According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission's National Electronic Injury Surveillance System, which monitors 119 hospital emergency rooms nationwide, 27 percent of all swimming pool injuries and 33 percent of all diving board injuries treated last year involved children between 10 and 14 years of age. Of the reported injuries associated with swimming pool slides, 37 percent involved children between 5 and 9 years of age.

The major accident patterns associated with swimming pools, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, include falling on slippery walkways, decks, diving boards or ladders; striking the bottom or sides of the pool because of insufficient depth for diving or sliding, and drowning when swimming alone and without adult supervision.

Burger Changes

On May 28, in a commencement address at the University of Pennsylvania, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, an infrequent supporter of the younger generation, admitted the youth of the 1960's had made a significant contribution to American life.

"In the disorders that began in the 1960's, I suspect that my reactions were much like most others of my generation. I resented that young people who were given what seemed unparalleled opportunities for education, without the barriers of birth or class that exist in other societies, saw fit to tear down, to occupy, to burn rather than learn," explained Burger. "Occasionally I went into rowdy crowds not to talk but to listen.

CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER

On the streets in Washington, in Georgetown . . . I observed objectionable conduct, but I also saw peaceful protests, including the quiet demonstrations of young men and women with saffron robes and shaved heads, singing and praying in public. I watched others with long hair, simple clothes, knapsacks and bedrolls—most of them orderly and clean, and only a few otherwise.

"...Perhaps without knowing all the reasons, they were ahead of many others in seeing that something was missing in modern life. Some people perceived the conduct of youth as a step toward the disintegration of our society—the beginning of an 18th-century revolution—and no doubt a nihilist spirit pervaded the minds of some leaders of the violent protests. The perception of a true revolution in the making rested on the burning and bombing of college buildings and other public buildings, but I overlooked the positive side — the protest against materialism, against the misuse of natural resources, against pollution of the quality of life, and against a war that could not be satisfactorily explained. It was like the age-old yearning of Thoreau for Walden Pond, and even if unrealistic and unattainable, perhaps it has helped all of us to a renewed awareness of values of the spirit."

Call-Up Girls

France is planning to draft young women into the national service for six months' work on community projects.

The project is not definite. It is one of 102 ideas recently put forward by Françoise Giroud, France's minister for the feminine condition. The other 101 ideas would give women the same rights as men. This one, however, stands a good chance of being adopted.

Stones Cancel

The Rolling Stones have canceled their proposed U.S. mini-tour this summer. Reason: Mick Jagger and his troupe are exhausted from their European tour.

The British rock stars planned originally to give outdoor concerts in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago, Detroit, Atlanta and Philadelphia and pick up a million.

Come fall, however, they plan to make their Latin America debut and then tour the States.

Metal from decaying satellites and missiles falls to earth. Hollow, 20-pound sphere (l), probably of Soviet origin, was found in May, 1975, near Winter Haven, Fla. Charred aluminum was picked up near Marietta, Ohio, in January.

Space Junk

by Cole Richards

Watch out!

You could be hit by metal parts of missiles and satellites falling from the sky.

This "space junk" falls into the atmosphere nearly every day, and most of it burns up. Some falls into the sea. But a few pieces land in populated areas in the U.S. and around the world.

Debris from space comes from both U.S. and Soviet space equipment. The junk has ranged from mere nuts and bolts to a Soviet body the size of a railroad car, says Mike Harloff, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) public information officer.

Here are some examples:

In September, 1962, a cylindrical metal object (diameter 15 centimeters, weight 21 lbs.) landed on a street intersection in Manitowoc, Wis. It was identified as part of Soviet Sputnik IV, launched May 15, 1960.

In May, 1964, a charred piece of electronic equipment (weight 175 lbs.) was found near La Fria, Venezuela. It was later identified as part of a U.S. satellite launched April 27, 1964, that decayed a month later.

In October, 1966, Wisconsin was the target again. Near Tomahawk, a titanium spherical pressure vessel (diameter 14.7 inches, weight 30 lbs.) hit and was identified as Soviet in origin.

From Cosmos 316

The most frightening report came in August, 1970, when five oblong pieces of steel (2 to 2.5 feet long, average weight 150 lbs.) and one flat steel plate (4 by 4 feet, weight 640 lbs.) lacerated the earth in Kansas, Texas and Oklahoma. They came from Soviet Cosmos 316, launched Dec. 23, 1969.

In September, 1974; May, 1975, and January, 1976, areas around Lowell, Ohio; Winter Haven, Fla., and Marietta, Ohio, were hit with space junk. The Winter Haven fragments landed at a country road intersection.

The USAF Space Object Fragment Summary notes activity around the world. South Africa, Cuba, Brazil, Australia, Argentina, Canada, Malawi, India, Spain, Zambia, Peru, Swaziland, Saudi Arabia, Mexico, Finland, Angola, Chad and Nepal have all been hit by debris.

While it is impossible to tell just how much and where such fragments have fallen at sea, in June, 1969, pieces (average weight about 22 lbs.) fell onto a Japanese freighter off De-Kastri port, U.S.S.R., and in July, 1969, a small fragment (about 30 centimeters long) fell on the deck of a German ship in the Atlantic. Other pieces fell in the water near the ship. They were from the first stage of a Saturn booster used to launch Apollo 11, July 16, 1969.

What worries NORAD

While human injury is possible from the debris, there is greater danger, says a North American Air Defense (NORAD) spokesman who wishes to remain anonymous. "Pieces of falling debris from space could easily appear on radar display screens as a reentering ICBM [intercontinental ballistic missile] and trigger a Soviet missile attack upon the United States," warns the officer stationed at NORAD Headquarters, Colorado Springs, Colo.

To avoid such a disaster, NORAD attempts to predict when a decay will take place and where it could possibly reenter the earth's atmosphere. The data are then relayed to NASA and the Pentagon. The Pentagon advises its counterparts in the Soviet Union. How often do we communicate such information? According to the NORAD source: "Constantly."

The Satellite Situation Report—data compiled by the Goddard Space Flight Center, NORAD, and the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory — puts the number of objects in orbit as of Feb. 29, 1976, at 3828 and decayed objects at 4881. "On the average, something decays each day," states the NORAD officer.

Plans are now being considered to exhibit the space junk at the new Smithsonian Air and Space Museum, Washington, D.C., and at NORAD Headquarters in Colorado Springs.

U.S.S.R., and in July, 1969, a small fragment (about 30 centimeters long) fell on the deck of a German ship in the Atlantic. Other pieces fell in the water near the ship. They were from the first

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

AUTOMATIC TENNIS PARTNER: For practice sessions at home or on the court, a new machine holds up to 80 tennis balls and can deliver one for your return every 3½, 7 or 14 seconds. It can offer you services and smashes at speeds of 85 mph and provide six minutes of hard play, 12 of rallies or 18 of easy lob returns. It's portable, weighs 27 lbs. With an optional random oscillator sweep attachment, it will provide full-court coverage. Details: O. J. Barnett, Dept. PP, Box 783, Upper Montclair, N. J. 07043.

BOAT REEL: To eliminate the clutter that a loose mooring line can create, a new "boat rein" neatly stores 20' of 1250-lb. test, ¼" braided nylon rope on a spring-loaded reel under the deck or gunwale. Requiring only the drilling of a ½" hole, it can be installed in five minutes. When not in use, the only visible part is the chromed wingnut-type handle and ring at the end of the rope. A pull on the ring draws out as much rope as needed; then, a twist of the handle locks the rope, preventing it from rewinding onto the concealed reel. $19.95 in stores. Ingenious Devices Inc., Dept. PP, 2728 N. Pace Blvd., Pensacola, Fla. 32505. (above)

110 FROM YOUR CAR: With a new electrical device that works from the alternator and is easy to install in your car, you can get 110-volt power to operate power tools, light bulbs, electric heaters, coffee pots and other appliances. Providing plug-in convenience, the unit requires no belts or pulleys and will not affect the life of the alternator (claims the maker). Models for various types of cars, from $21.95. Details: Cliff Granberry Corp., Dept. PP, Box 9505, Dallas, Tex. 75214.

FOR YOUR BIKE: All within a camera-design case that comes with a bracket for mounting to the handlebars are a transistor radio, powerful headlight, pushbutton horn and two D-size batteries. When the bike is parked, you can detach the radio in seconds for use as a portable. Blue, red or orange, 5¼" x 3¼" x 3¼". $18.95 ppd. Distributor Sales, Dept. PP, Box 363, Woodstock, Ill. 60098.

GARAGE DOOR LUBRICANT: Produced especially for the purpose, a new silicone-containing lubricant is said to stop garage door squeaks, make the door easy to lift, and increase the life of springs, cables, rollers, hinges and door tracks. It's also said to be adaptable for use on throttle linkages and wheel bushings of mowers and other lawn equipment, bike chains and springs, and automobile hood and trunk latches and springs: 20-oz. can, $3.79 ppd. Wibco Inc., Dept. PP, 3989 Green Park Rd., St. Louis, Mo. 63125.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Pool Warning

Last year an estimated 65,000 persons required hospital emergency room treatment for injuries associated with swimming pools, swimming pool slides and diving boards. And most of the victims were young people.

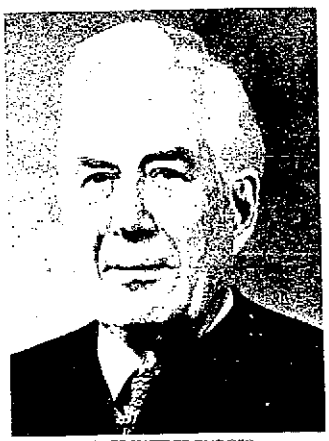

According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission's National Electronic Injury Surveillance System, which monitors 119 hospital emergency rooms nationwide, 27 percent of all swimming pool injuries and 33 percent of all diving board injuries treated last year involved children between 10 and 14 years of age. Of the reported injuries associated with swimming pool slides, 37 percent involved children between 5 and 9 years of age.

The major accident patterns associated with swimming pools, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, include falling on slippery walkways, decks, diving boards or ladders; striking the bottom or sides of the pool because of insufficient depth for diving or sliding, and drowning when swimming alone and without adult supervision.

Burger Changes

On May 28, in a commencement address at the University of Pennsylvania, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, an infrequent supporter of the younger generation, admitted the youth of the 1960's had made a significant contribution to American life.

"In the disorders that began in the 1960's, I suspect that my reactions were much like most others of my generation. I resented that young people who were given what seemed unparalleled opportunities for education, without the barriers of birth or class that exist in other societies, saw fit to tear down, to occupy, to burn rather than learn," explained Burger. "Occasionally I went into rowdy crowds not to talk but to listen.

CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER

On the streets in Washington, in Georgetown . . . I observed objectionable conduct, but I also saw peaceful protests, including the quiet demonstrations of young men and women with saffron robes and shaved heads, singing and praying in public. I watched others with long hair, simple clothes, knapsacks and bedrolls—most of them orderly and clean, and only a few otherwise.

"...Perhaps without knowing all the reasons, they were ahead of many others in seeing that something was missing in modern life. Some people perceived the conduct of youth as a step toward the disintegration of our society—the beginning of an 18th-century revolution—and no doubt a nihilist spirit pervaded the minds of some leaders of the violent protests. The perception of a true revolution in the making rested on the burning and bombing of college buildings and other public buildings, but I overlooked the positive side — the protest against materialism, against the misuse of natural resources, against pollution of the quality of life, and against a war that could not be satisfactorily explained. It was like the age-old yearning of Thoreau for Walden Pond, and even if unrealistic and unattainable, perhaps it has helped all of us to a renewed awareness of values of the spirit."

Call-Up Girls

France is planning to draft young women into the national service for six months' work on community projects.

The project is not definite. It is one of 102 ideas recently put forward by Françoise Giroud, France's minister for the feminine condition. The other 101 ideas would give women the same rights as men. This one, however, stands a good chance of being adopted.

Stones Cancel

The Rolling Stones have canceled their proposed U.S. mini-tour this summer. Reason: Mick Jagger and his troupe are exhausted from their European tour.

The British rock stars planned originally to give outdoor concerts in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago, Detroit, Atlanta and Philadelphia and pick up a million.

Come fall, however, they plan to make their Latin America debut and then tour the States.

ELIZABETH RAY

COLLEEN GARDNER

JOAN HITCHCOCK

JUDITH CAMPBELL EXNER

THE KISS AND TELL EPIDEMIC

This is not only the year of the Bicentennial, it is the year of the Kiss and Tell.

First we had the confessions of Judith Campbell Exner, telling of her nights in Las Vegas, Miami and Washington with John F. Kennedy, a President of the U.S., Sam Giancana, a leader of the Chicago Mafia, Johnny Rosselli, a Hollywood Mafia chieftain, and how she owed it all to Frank Sinatra who introduced her to the boys.

Mrs. Exner's confessional was followed by Joan Hitchcock's, a San Francisco matron who detailed how after John F. Kennedy allegedly impregnated her, he grew surly and suspicious when he had to pay twice for one abortion.

Of more recent vintage is the sexual saga of Elizabeth L. Ray, who came to Washington, D.C., from Marshall, N.C., to graduate into a semi-public utility of sorts.

Between July 1, 1972, and May 24, 1976, when she was fired after alleging that Chairman Wayne L. Hays (D., Ohio) had kept her on the House Administration Committee payroll as his mistress, Elizabeth Ray was paid a total of $35,000.

During those four years she worked for Rep. Kenneth J. Gray (D., Ill.), who served in the House from 1955-75. She clerked for Rep. Mendel J. Davis (D., S.C.), and she was listed as a secretary for Congressman Hays, at 65 apparently one of the great Lotharios of the legislature.

Miss Ray's rolls in the hay have been confirmed by secretary Colleen Gardner. She says she performed similar tricks for Congressman John Young (D., Tex.).

Publisher & FDR

There is also the case of Dorothy Schiff, the 73-year-old publisher who owns the New York Post and who claims in print to have engaged in high jinks of a type with the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt. The high jinks don't appear to have been sexual, although Mrs. Schiff describes Roosevelt as "a warm, sexy guy."

Why are these women kissing and telling all in print? Money in many cases seems to spin the plot.

Explicit paperback

Elizabeth L. Ray--known as Betty Lou to her North Carolina mountain kin--is the author of a $1.75 paperback entitled "The Washington Fringe Benefit." It is thinly disguised fiction and frankly pornographic, leaving little to the imagination except the names of the roving legislators she serviced while on the government payroll.

Miss Ray's outstanding heroine in life has always been the late Marilyn Monroe, who was passed around for lunch by Hollywood studio executives. What was good enough for Marilyn Monroe served as an example for Miss Ray. In the prime of her career Marilyn Monroe reportedly enjoyed a sexual relationship with a President of the United States. The best Elizabeth Ray could manage, at least to date, was a U.S. Senator or two, although she did on occasion set her cap for "Kid" Kissinger, the Secretary of State. But she failed to ensnare Henry.

In any event, publishing sources estimate that possibly 5 million copies of Miss Ray's scandalous paperback will be sold before the year is out.

There's money in it

Revealing one's sexual intimacies with politicians is developing into a profitable cottage industry. Judith Campbell Exner reportedly received a $350,000 advance for her 436-page memoirs involving John F. Kennedy. No matter how well or poorly written, the Exner book is destined to make the best-seller list.

For years women have enjoyed gossiping about their sex lives with the famous and near-famous because it heightens their self-esteem. Now it has reached the point where it heightens their bank accounts as well.

Metal from decaying satellites and missiles falls to earth. Hollow, 20-pound sphere (l), probably of Soviet origin, was found in May, 1975, near Winter Haven, Fla. Charred aluminum was picked up near Marietta, Ohio, in January.

Space Junk

by Cole Richards

Watch out!

You could be hit by metal parts of missiles and satellites falling from the sky.

This "space junk" falls into the atmosphere nearly every day, and most of it burns up. Some falls into the sea. But a few pieces land in populated areas in the U.S. and around the world.

Debris from space comes from both U.S. and Soviet space equipment. The junk has ranged from mere nuts and bolts to a Soviet body the size of a railroad car, says Mike Harloff, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) public information officer.

Here are some examples:

In September, 1962, a cylindrical metal object (diameter 15 centimeters, weight 21 lbs.) landed on a street intersection in Manitowoc, Wis. It was identified as part of Soviet Sputnik IV, launched May 15, 1960.

In May, 1964, a charred piece of electronic equipment (weight 175 lbs.) was found near La Fria, Venezuela. It was later identified as part of a U.S. satellite launched April 27, 1964, that decayed a month later.

In October, 1966, Wisconsin was the target again. Near Tomahawk, a titanium spherical pressure vessel (diameter 14.7 inches, weight 30 lbs.) hit and was identified as Soviet in origin.

From Cosmos 316

The most frightening report came in August, 1970, when five oblong pieces of steel (2 to 2.5 feet long, average weight 150 lbs.) and one flat steel plate (4 by 4 feet, weight 640 lbs.) lacerated the earth in Kansas, Texas and Oklahoma. They came from Soviet Cosmos 316, launched Dec. 23, 1969.

In September, 1974; May, 1975, and January, 1976, areas around Lowell, Ohio; Winter Haven, Fla., and Marietta, Ohio, were hit with space junk. The Winter Haven fragments landed at a country road intersection.

The USAF Space Object Fragment Summary notes activity around the world. South Africa, Cuba, Brazil, Australia, Argentina, Canada, Malawi, India, Spain, Zambia, Peru, Swaziland, Saudi Arabia, Mexico, Finland, Angola, Chad and Nepal have all been hit by debris.

While it is impossible to tell just how much and where such fragments have fallen at sea, in June, 1969, pieces (average weight about 22 lbs.) fell onto a Japanese freighter off De-Kastri port, U.S.S.R., and in July, 1969, a small fragment (about 30 centimeters long) fell on the deck of a German ship in the Atlantic. Other pieces fell in the water near the ship. They were from the first stage of a Saturn booster used to launch Apollo 11, July 16, 1969.

What worries NORAD

While human injury is possible from the debris, there is greater danger, says a North American Air Defense (NORAD) spokesman who wishes to remain anonymous. "Pieces of falling debris from space could easily appear on radar display screens as a reentering ICBM [intercontinental ballistic missile] and trigger a Soviet missile attack upon the United States," warns the officer stationed at NORAD Headquarters, Colorado Springs, Colo.

To avoid such a disaster, NORAD attempts to predict when a decay will take place and where it could possibly reenter the earth's atmosphere. The data are then relayed to NASA and the Pentagon. The Pentagon advises its counterparts in the Soviet Union. How often do we communicate such information? According to the NORAD source: "Constantly."

The Satellite Situation Report—data compiled by the Goddard Space Flight Center, NORAD, and the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory — puts the number of objects in orbit as of Feb. 29, 1976, at 3828 and decayed objects at 4881. "On the average, something decays each day," states the NORAD officer.

Plans are now being considered to exhibit the space junk at the new Smithsonian Air and Space Museum, Washington, D.C., and at NORAD Headquarters in Colorado Springs.

More of the good things that so many cigarette smokers are going for:

The long lean burnished brown look.

The smooth easy draw.

The slower-burning smoke that gives you more puffs for your money, more time for enjoyment.

More what? More of a cigarette. That's what.

More. The smooth 120mm taste.

CARTER OF ANNAPOLIS If Jimmy Carter is elected President he will be the first to have been graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy.

Carter was appointed to Annapolis by Georgia Congressman Stephen Pace. He entered the Academy in 1943 after a year as a Naval ROTC student at Georgia Tech in Atlanta, taking courses recommended by the Navy. He graduated from the Naval Academy in 1947, ranking 59 in a class of 820.

He loved the Navy, as did his wife, Rosalynn. When Carter's father died in 1953, the Carters engaged in what the former Governor of Georgia describes as "the first really serious argument in our marriage. My wife Rosalynn simply did not agree that we should leave the Navy and return to Plains [Ga.], and it was with mixed feelings that we made the decision."

MIDSHIPMAN JIMMY CARTER

Jimmy Carter served in the U.S. Navy 11 years. Presidents John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson and Gerald Ford also served in the Navy, but none was graduated from Annapolis. Kennedy did his undergraduate at Harvard, Johnson at Southwest Texas State Teachers College, Ford at the University of Michigan.

JIMMY CARTER AND WIFE ROSALYNN

WORDS TO PONDER "But what is government itself but the greatest of all reflections on human nature? If men were angels, no government would be necessary. If angels were to govern men, neither external nor internal controls on government would be necessary. In framing a government which is to be administered over men, the great difficulty lies in this: you must first enable the government to control the governed; and in the next place oblige it to control itself."

—James Madison, No. 51 of the Federalist Papers.

OIL SNAFU The acronym which best describes the federal government's energy conservation program is SNAFU (Situation Normal--All Fouled Up).

Supposedly we are running out of oil in this country, yet the public trend is back to bigger, heavier, gas-guzzling cars. The intermediate-size vehicles are selling better than the smaller jobs, although by 1985 the government fuel economy standards are supposed to call for cars which will average 27.5 miles per gallon.

Much has also been made of the fact that instead of buying less foreign oil, the U.S. is now importing approximately 40% of its oil.

Is this good or bad? Has it ever occurred to the government masterminds that by importing oil from the OPEC countries, we are helping to preserve our own energy resources?

If we become oil independent, it simply means that we will exhaust our reserves before the OPEC countries--Saudi Arabia, Iran, Kuwait, and the rest of them--exhaust theirs.

Is that such a wise policy? It is time to rethink our energy conservation policy--if we have one.

COOL PROFIT Employers who want to get the most from personnel should keep their work premises cool.

Dr. T. P. Cullinane, assistant professor of mechanical engineering at Notre Dame, contends that too much heat not only slows workers, it also causes more mistakes. If air conditioning isn't feasible for your plant, advises Cullinane, try fans, dehumidifiers and protective clothing. They all help to increase productivity.

EYE LANGUAGE Pupillometrics is the study of changes in the pupil of the eye; supposedly such changes reflect a person's attitude.

A recent study by University of Chicago Professor Eckard H. Hess reveals that the size of a person's pupil can be interpreted in terms of sexual interest and honesty. A person with dilated pupils is usually thought to be attractive and sincere, while those with smaller pupils are associated with negative factors.

This is one explanation why young children seem so innocent. Their innocence can be attributed in part to their pupil size, which is normally larger than that of older persons.

WILLIAM COLEMAN

ANSWERS, ANYBODY? Last year, approximately 2.4 million Americans flew across the Atlantic.

Of this number, fewer than half flew on U.S. carriers. According to Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Jr., who some weeks ago approved the Concorde SST flights to the U.S. for a period of 16 months, "This disparity brought about a loss in American jobs and had an adverse effect on our balance of payments."

The share of international air traffic carried by U.S. airlines is continuing to decline, and Coleman would like to know why.

If you have answers or suggestions, Coleman would welcome your views. You can write the Secretary of Transportation at Washington, D.C. 20590.

'cool it'—with Lemon

by beth MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Flavor it lemon. Add the sprightly tartness of this cool fruit to a creamy mixture, then freeze. Result: Lemon Ice Cream. Each spoonful is refreshing, with a chilly tang. You'll be amazed at the speed and ease with which you can make this lovely dessert.

Start your dinner with jellied consommé garnished with a sprig of fragrant mint. For the main course, serve your favorite meat loaf hot or cold, crisp potato chips and a lavish salad of ripe red tomatoes with blue cheese dressing. Finally, treat everyone to Lemon Ice Cream with sugar wafers and tall, frosty glasses of iced tea or coffee.

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

AUTOMATIC TENNIS PARTNER: For practice sessions at home or on the court, a new machine holds up to 80 tennis balls and can deliver one for your return every 3½, 7 or 14 seconds. It can offer you services and smashes at speeds of 85 mph and provide six minutes of hard play, 12 of rallies or 18 of easy lob returns. It's portable, weighs 27 lbs. With an optional random oscillator sweep attachment, it will provide full-court coverage. Details: O. J. Barnett, Dept. PP, Box 783, Upper Montclair, N. J. 07043.

BOAT REEL: To eliminate the clutter that a loose mooring line can create, a new "boat rein" neatly stores 20' of 1250-lb. test, ¼" braided nylon rope on a spring-loaded reel under the deck or gunwale. Requiring only the drilling of a ½" hole, it can be installed in five minutes. When not in use, the only visible part is the chromed wingnut-type handle and ring at the end of the rope. A pull on the ring draws out as much rope as needed; then, a twist of the handle locks the rope, preventing it from rewinding onto the concealed reel. $19.95 in stores. Ingenious Devices Inc., Dept. PP, 2728 N. Pace Blvd., Pensacola, Fla. 32505. (above)

110 FROM YOUR CAR: With a new electrical device that works from the alternator and is easy to install in your car, you can get 110-volt power to operate power tools, light bulbs, electric heaters, coffee pots and other appliances. Providing plug-in convenience, the unit requires no belts or pulleys and will not affect the life of the alternator (claims the maker). Models for various types of cars, from $21.95. Details: Cliff Granberry Corp., Dept. PP, Box 9505, Dallas, Tex. 75214.

FOR YOUR BIKE: All within a camera-design case that comes with a bracket for mounting to the handlebars are a transistor radio, powerful headlight, pushbutton horn and two D-size batteries. When the bike is parked, you can detach the radio in seconds for use as a portable. Blue, red or orange, 5¼" x 3¼" x 3¼". $18.95 ppd. Distributor Sales, Dept. PP, Box 363, Woodstock, Ill. 60098.

GARAGE DOOR LUBRICANT: Produced especially for the purpose, a new silicone-containing lubricant is said to stop garage door squeaks, make the door easy to lift, and increase the life of springs, cables, rollers, hinges and door tracks. It's also said to be adaptable for use on throttle linkages and wheel bushings of mowers and other lawn equipment, bike chains and springs, and automobile hood and trunk latches and springs: 20-oz. can, $3.79 ppd. Wibco Inc., Dept. PP, 3989 Green Park Rd., St. Louis, Mo. 63125.

JUDITH CAMPBELL EXNER

THE KISS AND TELL EPIDEMIC

This is not only the year of the Bicentennial, it is the year of the Kiss and Tell.

First we had the confessions of Judith Campbell Exner, telling of her nights in Las Vegas, Miami and Washington with John F. Kennedy, a President of the U.S., Sam Giancana, a leader of the Chicago Mafia, Johnny Rosselli, a Hollywood Mafia chieftain, and how she owed it all to Frank Sinatra who introduced her to the boys.

Mrs. Exner's confessional was followed by Joan Hitchcock's, a San Francisco matron who detailed how after John F. Kennedy allegedly impregnated her, he grew surly and suspicious when he had to pay twice for one abortion.

Of more recent vintage is the sexual saga of Elizabeth L. Ray, who came to Washington, D.C., from Marshall, N.C., to graduate into a semi-public utility of sorts.

Between July 1, 1972, and May 24, 1976, when she was fired after alleging that Chairman Wayne L. Hays (D., Ohio) had kept her on the House Administration Committee payroll as his mistress, Elizabeth Ray was paid a total of $35,000.

During those four years she worked for Rep. Kenneth J. Gray (D., Ill.), who served in the House from 1955-75. She clerked for Rep. Mendel J. Davis (D., S.C.), and she was listed as a secretary for Congressman Hays, at 65 apparently one of the great Lotharios of the legislature.

Miss Ray's rolls in the hay have been confirmed by secretary Colleen Gardner. She says she performed similar tricks for Congressman John Young (D., Tex.).

Publisher & FDR

There is also the case of Dorothy Schiff, the 73-year-old publisher who owns the New York Post and who claims in print to have engaged in high jinks of a type with the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt. The high jinks don't appear to have been sexual, although Mrs. Schiff describes Roosevelt as "a warm, sexy guy."

Why are these women kissing and telling all in print? Money in many cases seems to spin the plot.

Explicit paperback

Elizabeth L. Ray--known as Betty Lou to her North Carolina mountain kin--is the author of a $1.75 paperback entitled "The Washington Fringe Benefit." It is thinly disguised fiction and frankly pornographic, leaving little to the imagination except the names of the roving legislators she serviced while on the government payroll.

Miss Ray's outstanding heroine in life has always been the late Marilyn Monroe, who was passed around for lunch by Hollywood studio executives. What was good enough for Marilyn Monroe served as an example for Miss Ray. In the prime of her career Marilyn Monroe reportedly enjoyed a sexual relationship with a President of the United States. The best Elizabeth Ray could manage, at least to date, was a U.S. Senator or two, although she did on occasion set her cap for "Kid" Kissinger, the Secretary of State. But she failed to ensnare Henry.

In any event, publishing sources estimate that possibly 5 million copies of Miss Ray's scandalous paperback will be sold before the year is out.

There's money in it

Revealing one's sexual intimacies with politicians is developing into a profitable cottage industry. Judith Campbell Exner reportedly received a $350,000 advance for her 436-page memoirs involving John F. Kennedy. No matter how well or poorly written, the Exner book is destined to make the best-seller list.

For years women have enjoyed gossiping about their sex lives with the famous and near-famous because it heightens their self-esteem. Now it has reached the point where it heightens their bank accounts as well.

my favorite jokes

EDITOR'S NOTE: Television has always been Danny Thomas's medium. Even after years of headlining in top clubs and starring in the movies ("The Big City," "Call Me Mister," "I'll See You in My Dreams" and "The Jazz Singer"), Danny's TV show "Make Room for Daddy," which was based on 11 years of his own life, was the vehicle through which he could be most versatile.

Says Danny: "If there is a basic reason for the success of TV shows, it is their preoccupation with trouble. Nothing else is shared by so many people!" And in his current series, "The Practice" on NBC, Danny's involved in the comic side of trouble. He plays Dr. Jules Bedford, who thinks doctors should make house calls—even on Wednesdays. "We do things on the show that happen in real life. You go to the doctor; he says, 'Cough.' You cough. Then he says, 'How long have you had that cough?'"

Here are some of Danny's quips and stories:

A friend of mine, a star pitcher, injured his arm during pre-game practice. He was terribly upset until the club doctor assured the pitcher that his arm would be OK for a shaving commercial.

When my uncle Tonoose came to this country, he only knew how to say "hello" and "good-bye." He got a job on the docks in Toledo and lived alone in a rooming house. At lunch hour he was afraid to eat at the diner, because he didn't know how to order. So he went to my father and in his native tongue, Lebanese, said: "Teach me how to ask for something to eat, something sweet, so I can stay alive between breakfast and dinner. My father taught him "apple pie and coffee."

Then one day Tonoose went into the diner and said to the waitress, "Apple pie and coffee." He got it—every day for three weeks. But how long can you keep that up? So he said to my father: "Got to have something different, maybe cheese." My father taught him to ask for a cheese sandwich. He rehearsed it, and meanwhile kept eating apple pie and coffee. Finally the big day came. He sat down and said to the waitress, "Hello, cheese sandwich." The waitress said, "White or rye?" He looked at her and said, "Apple pie and coffee."

I remember the comment that Robert Young (Dr. Marcus Welby) made when we started on "The Practice." He said: "I didn't mind when Danny used to come over and chew the fat on the set, but now when he comes over he gives me a second opinion!"

I'm not like the other TV doctors—I'm going to present all my patients with bills.

A young fella applies for a job as a truck driver. He's got a partner named Leroy, and he tells the personnel man: "You know, it won't cost you any extra money to hire both of us. Me and Leroy, we drive and we switch. I drive, and then it's the other way round. We just go right across country. We stop for gas and coffee, no hotel, no motel."

The personnel manager says: "Let me ask you a safety question. Suppose you're barreling downhill and there's a truck passing a car coming up the hill. What would you do?"

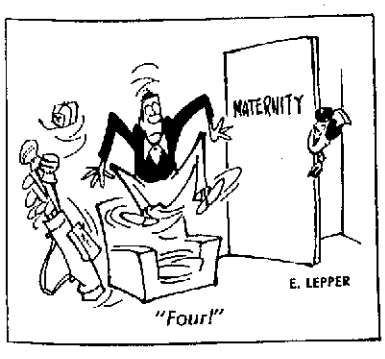

"The first thing I'd do," says the fella, "is wake Leroy, 'cause I know he's never seen a crash like that."

I was thrilled when Memphis named a street after me. The kind people who turned out for the occasion came for laughs. I told them my first thrill came when the street was named after me and my second big moment came when I got a parking ticket on it.

There is a lot of discussion these days about reincarnation. As a matter of fact, I knew a waiter who came back as a clock—and he was still complaining: "Please, I only have two hands!"

"Four!"

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation. Relieves Pain & Itch...

Gives prompt temporary relief in many cases from hemorrhoidal pain and burning itch in such tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H® —the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

Mike makes $2 million in quiet Philadelphia

By GEORGE MAKSIAN
New York News

NEW YORK— Everybody is aware of the boodles of money Johnny Carson makes at NBC. And who doesn't know about Barbara Walters' widely-publicized $1 million at ABC? But quietly stashed away in little ole Philadelphia is easy-going Mike Douglas, waltzing merrily along with a cool $2 million a year TV contract with Westinghouse Broadcasting Co.

The two mill doesn't come easy. He has to come up with a talk-variety show five times a week. It is produced in both 60-and 90-minute versions by Westinghouse, in association with Mike Douglas Entertainment, Inc., and distributed by Group W Productions and the two mill is ALL his. Production costs, etc., are extra.

ASKED how this choice bit of news has never made headlines before this, Douglas said: "I prefer it that way. I don't go for all that show business razzmatazz. That's also why I like living in Philadelphia. It's away from all the Hollywood and New York circus atmosphere."

Douglas, often called the darling of daytime TV and the crown prince of the kaffeeklatsch, said the big money deal came about at the signing of his last contract. "Then," he said, "people were coming out of the woodwork and asking, 'What'll it take to buy Mike Douglas?' 'Two million a year for three years' was the reply, and I got it. Now, we're in the process of renewing the whole pact. The pencil is so sharp, the paper is bleeding," he said, with a big smile.

"The Mike Douglas Show" is televised nationally over 130 stations and will celebrate its 15th anniversary Dec. 11.

"Originally, the program was only on one station, KTW—TV, the Westinghouse station in Cleveland in 1961. In a year, four other Westinghouse stations were added, and by 1963, the series was in national syndication. In 1965, the show moved to Philadelphia, and in 1972 a special studio was built in that city's historic Independence Hall.

"THE SHOW grew in popularity strictly by word of mouth," said Douglas during a recent visit. "At first nobody would go to Cleveland for a mere $100, the scale then. But the word got around that it was a good show to do.

"We even got Barbra Streisand to come for scale. Her manager asked us if we could get her a job to supplement her appearance on the TV show. So we booked her at the Chateau Club in nearby Lakewood, Ohio, where she

'Veteran' actor, 14, mindful of his roles

By KENT SCHOKNECHT
Staff Writer

Michael LeClair is a veteran actor. In the last five years, he has appeared in six stage productions, two feature films and over 10 television shows.

LeClair is 14 years old.

He lives with five brothers and sisters in Downey, where he is a junior at Warren High School. He discusses roles, agents and salaries as glibly as someone who has been in the business since vaudeville.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roger LeClair, say they too have learned a lot about the entertainment field from their talented youngster.

The young actor said that "each show has someone in charge of casting, and he sends openings to the agents telling them what he's looking for. If I fit the role, my agent sends me to audition. Then, if I get the part, he gets 10 per cent off the top.

MICKEY LeCLAIR

"I STARTED when I was four, in the play Carrousel. Then I retired until I was nine," LeClair said. He attributed his temporary retirement to a "lack of suitable roles."

Most recently, he has completed a feature role in the soon-to-be-released, Frankovich-Self production of From Noon Til Three, a Western love story starring Charles Bronson.

"But I don't want to just stay in acting, I want to go into other fields, too: Producing, directing, writing," he said. He almost achieved that goal when he started writing a script for an episode of the TV show Sara. Later, however, he abandoned the project as being too difficult.

LeClair said that if he did stay in acting; he'd like to have his own TV series, preferably a variety show in which he could demonstrate his various talents. Besides act, he can sing, dance and perform magic tricks.

But LeClair— who likes to be called Mickey— is a cautious person. He knows what is and what should be important in his life. "I don't want to miss childhood," he said. In his opinion, too many young actors try to become adults too quickly, and pass by the fun of growing up.

"I DON'T GO to fancy parties, I play baseball. Last week, I was with some friends who are actors, too. We didn't even talk about what roles we've had. We talked about skateboarding and stuff."

One of the friends LeClair mentioned was Brandon Cruz, the star of the TV show The Courtship of Eddie's Father; and more recently, the pitcher of the baseball team that opposed Walter Mathau's in The Bad News Bears.

At the advice of his agent, LeClair turned down the Bears role in favor of the Charles Bronson film for two reasons. Bears was filled with youngsters, allowing no one actor the opportunity to be noticed above the others. Also, the part of the pitcher was a relatively small one.

His role as Cody Taylor in From Noon til Three is more important because there is more exposure— LeClair is the only youngster in the film and his part is central to the plot.

"I ride up on a horse and tell (Bronson's wife) about a robbery that's very important in the movie.

"It's one of those roles you have to remember when you leave the theater," he said.

He talked about film making and some of the details he must consider in playing a role in any film, including completing schoolwork that might otherwise be neglected. He said this worried his parents at first and probably bothers those of other aspiring young actors.

"THERE ARE LAWS requiring me to have at least three hours daily study time and I am assigned a teacher welfare worker to tutor me. I take all my regular books and assignments and take makeup tests when I get back to school, but I don't mind. His plans are to finish high school, then decide on college.

Where does Mickey go from here? Next immediate concern is an audition for the part of drug addict's friend for a future ABC Movie of the Week.

From there? Who knows— after all he's only a kid.

Get a lot of music. Go a little crazy.

Take any 11

This is the beginning of a fling.
A crazy fling.
A fling filled with music.
The music you love most.
More music than you've ever been able to get at once.

Part One of the fling: you go over the list of albums on these 3 pages. And you choose the 11 you want most. Then mail the coupon.

Part Two of the fling: your 11 records or tapes arrive in the mail.

This, of course, is the part where you really go crazy. You can tease yourself and play one a day. Or you can play them all at once in the most incredible concert you've ever had in your room. You can invite good friends over to share the fun. And, of course, you can play them again and again and again.

picked up $2,500!"

Douglas, 51 on Aug. 11, said he started out making only $400 a week. "Only in America could something like this happen," he said. "But don't get the idea that the job is easy. It's very hard work."

"There are times I wish I didn't have all this success; that I could go out with my children and not be stared at. I don't mind giving out autographs, but once you start the mob is at you."

"THAT'S WHY we like living in Philadelphia," piped in Mrs. Douglas, his wife for over 30 years. "We can live quiet, decent lives."

The Douglases may go for the quiet life, but it's not simple. They live outside of Philadelphia in a 31-room Tudor house on a 14-acre estate, complete with pool and a tennis court. With them is their teen-aged daughter Kelly.

Douglas said he doesn't think about the competition. "I know it's there," he said. "But, in the latest national Nielsen for syndicated shows we were No. 1. Dinah Shore was second and Griffin was third."

Often called a square because he doesn't drink, smoke or gamble, Douglas said: "I wish there were more squares like me. The world would be better."

Questions, answers about TV

By BETTELOU PETERSON
Knight News Wire

Q. What has happened to Carol Burnett? What will become of her next season when "Rich Man, Poor Man" takes over her time spot? K.J.

A. TV can't win. Everyone complains about reruns. CBS ditches Burnett reruns for new summer shows and still gets gripes. Bit of confusion, there on next fall, though. "RM, PM" will be Burnett's competitor on ABC at 10 p.m. Saturdays, same time she's on CBS.

Q. Please tell me if Grandpa Hughes of "As the World Turns" died in real life. They had such a lovely memorial service for him in the story; I cried. K.M.

A. Santos Ortega, who played Grandpa Hughes, died April 10 in Florida of an undisclosed ailment. He was 76 and had been ailing for some time. Ortega was one of the original members of the 23-year-old serial's cast and the producers decided to pay tribute on the air. It took two months to find a place the service would fit into the story line.

Q. There's a man who does commercials for the Kroger markets on TV. He looks just like the man who was the host of that lovely show, "The Girl in My Life." Whoever he is, he is very pleasant, even on a commercial. M.J.A.

A. Fred Holliday was selling groceries at the same stand before he hosted "Girl." He hoped the show would get him out of the supermarket but it didn't work out. No real grief, though. Selling is a better way to maximize his dollars.

Q. What happened to Melody Patterson? She was Wrangler Jane on "F Troop". Why hasn't she been making more movies? R.H.

A. Melody married James MacArthur of "Hawaii Five-O." MacArthur didn't want his wife in Hollywood working while he was in Hawaii working. So Melody gave up her career.

Q. I have a letter to send to "Sixty Minutes" but I can't find the azwess. J.H.

A. Sounds like you don't watch the show, then. Address is given each week during the letters section. Write: 257 W. 57th St., New York, N.Y., 10019.

Q. Have been watching "Donny and Marie" show regularly and wonder if you can tell me if they are man and wife. They surely are a charming couple. L.W.

A. I suppose there had to be someone, some place, who's never heard of the Osmond Brothers and sister Marie. For some reason, folks seem to find brother and sister acts hard to believe. Many still figure Richard and Karen Carpenter are married rather than brother and sister.

Q. My 4 1-2 year-old daughter is an avid fan of "Emergency." We plan to be in California this fall and she would like to see her favorites. Could we visit them at their studio? MRS. C.S.

A. You might be lucky. "Emergency" is made by Universal and Universal has studio tours. Could be you'd see some of the "Emergency" company on the lot or lunching in the studio commissary (you won't be in the same lunch room but public and staff restaurants share building and common lobby). You won't actually see "Emergency" being filmed (If the company's at work on the lot and not on location). Sound stages are off limits when actual filming's being done. Too many whispers can ruin a show.

Q. What happened to news reporter Sander Van Ocur? I haven't seen him for months. B.MG.

A. Van Ocur went over to the opposition. He writes about television, as reporter and critic, for a Washington newspaper.

Q. I heard that Johnny Carson has forbidden certain people to be guests on his "Tonight" show. One of them is Barbra Streisand. How does he dare do it? D.K.

A. It's his show. Carson's beef with Streisand is over a "no-show" a few months ago. She was booked to do "Tonight," but didn't appear; didn't excuse herself. Carson staff had to scramble for last minute fill-in. Carson said, "Who needs her?" Can't say I blame him.

Q. My friend insists that Dennis Weaver played Luke McCoy in "The Real McCoys." I'm sure Richard Crenna was in the show at the end. L.C.

A. At the beginning, too. He was the only Luke. Crenna's TV career started as crack voiced Walter Denton in "Our Miss Brooks," a role he did in the radio version, too. He uent on to do the "McCoys," then played a politician in "Slattery's People." He took time out to do movies, produce TV shows in partnership with Danny Thomas. Next fall, he'll be back on TV in a new Norman Lear comedy, "All's Fair." He plays a conservative newspaper columnist who runs into a liberal lady photographer, played by Bernadette Peters.

Carter's TV $s to increase now

By LEE WINFREY
Knight News Wire

NEW YORK — Gerald Rafshoon created and distributed almost $3 million worth of television commercials for Jimmy Carter as the former Georgia governor marched successfully through the Presidential primaries.

Now, with Carter's anointment as the Democratic Presidential nominee, Rafshoon is already making plans to spend two or three times that much to put his client in the White House.

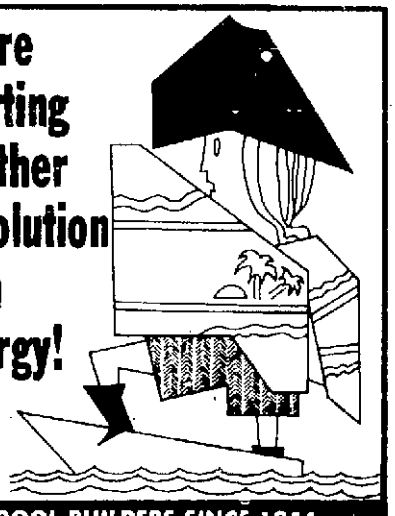

Rafshoon, 42, is president of Gerald Rafshoon Advertising, Inc., of Atlanta. He has directed Carter's TV, radio and print advertising for the past decade. He discussed future plans in an interview here.

Rafshoon said much of Carter's TV commercial approach can be planned and executed no matter whether President Ford or former California Gov. Ronald Reagan is the Republican nominee.

WHAT RAFSHOON calls the "positive Carter stuff" won't change. So this fall you can look for multiple images of Carter calling for reorganization of the federal government and overhaul of the tax system. Plus brisk and flowing footage of working man Carter striding through his farm fields and

'Education' series by KOCE-TV

"Education," a three-part series which focuses on the problems, the financing, the philosophies and the responsibilities of education will be examined on "Focus," Monday, at 7:30 p.m. on KOCE-TV, Channel 50.

The first "Education" program will feature the results of an education survey conducted in Orange County.

"In general, our poll found a wide desparity between the public view of education and the view held by most education experts," said program host Paul Cabbell.

CABBELL will also interview radical educator Jerry Farber, a professor of English at San Diego State University and author of "Student as Nigger." The question of where the power in education actually lies-with teachers, administrators or students-will be discussed by Farber.

Jan Flory, a reporter for "Education," will present a film report on three types of alternative schools—free schools, open classroom schools and fundamental schools.

Classes of '53, '76 scrutinized, analyzed

"Same Pomp, Different Circumstances," an NBC News special examining two graduation classes from the same Redwood City, Calif. high school — the Class of '76 and the Class of '53 — and how they differ in terms of values, perceptions, goals and behavior, will be presented Wednesday, July 28 (10-11 p.m.), on NBC TV, Ch. 4.

In comparing today's 1?-year-olds with yesterday's — who have turned 40 — the program will show how our society changes. It will deal meaningfully with questions that trouble virtually everyone: Where are we going? What's happening to our values?

Producer Mike Gavin, himself a member of the '53 class of Sequoia High School, keyed the program to an examination of two generations who will share their high school experiences and reminisce about growing up American style.

"We did not attempt to profile each member of the classes," Gavin said, "but selected representatives from several subgroups that are as identifiable today as they were in 1953. They say you can't go home again — but I was a member of the class of '53 at Sequoia High and have a special feeling where its members are concerned."

STUDYING THE CLASS of '76, Gavin and his crew filmed on- and off-campus stories ranging from individual profiles and interviews to activities such as this year's graduation ceremonies and the dance.

Gavin filmed mini-profiles of selected '53 graduates, and NBC brought almost the entire class together June 25 to film it at a gala reunion party.

To show how today's graduates differ from those of '53, Gavin said several basic issues were explored:

"We compared how they felt about their jobs and career objectives; the value of their respective educations; marriage and divorce; the new morality in sex and business; their drinking habits; how they related to the drug scene; their religious beliefs; how they felt about their parents and children; and how they felt about America and its leaders."

The special will feature also vintage film of major events from the 1940s to the present, stills and home movies of the class of '53 and music from the generations.

Parks 22-33

Bert Parks, who will mark his 22nd consecutive year as emcee of the Miss America Pageant (color-cast on NBC-TV, Sept. 11), and his wife, Annette, have celebrated their 33rd wedding anniversary.

The BIBLE Says

IS THERE NO STANDARD OF AUTHORITY?

Recently the Independent Press-Telegram's editor "repented" of having ever printed any letters or articles stating that Jehovah's Witnesses (so called) or Mormons were not Christians. In fact, Mr. Clutter has given his sanction to every person who even claims to be religious. However, I am not as concerned with what Mr. Clutter has to say as I am with what God has to say. But, his article did bring to mind a number of questions that I would like for each of our readers to consider.

1. Is there no standard of authority in religion? Your answer I am sure would be, "Yes, there is a standard. The Bible."

2. Since the Bible is our standard of authority, where could Mr. Clutter, or any other person, read in the Bible that you may believe whatever you wish to believe regarding salvation and worship? If one cannot read from the Bible (and especially the New Testament which we are living under today) that which he is teaching and practicing in religion, there is but one other alternative. It is from man and not from God. If we are following the teachings of man and not God, then we should consider what God had to say about that.

"This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me. But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men" (Matthew 15:8-9). That's what Jesus said about teaching the commandments of men. I'll take Jesus instead of the IPT editor. Again, the apostle Paul said in Gal. 1:8 "But though we, or an angel from heaven, (which is what the Mormons claim, JTS) preach any other gospel unto than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." Also, John said in II John 1:9, "Whosoever goeth onward and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son." And finally, read Revelation 22:18-19 regarding adding to and taking from the Word of God.

If two people differ on the length of something, how do we settle the matter? Measure it with a yardstick. If we differ on religious matters how will we settle it? By using God's yardstick — The Bible. The Bible, not man, is right.

Will Moyers fill Schorr's void at CBS?

'Can you succeed in TV and lead a sane life...?'

By KAY GARDELLA
New York News

HOLLYWOOD— When Bill Moyers deserted public broadcasting for CBS News last June to become anchorman and chief reporter for "CBS Reports" he was not expecting to be thrown into the political arena to provide analysis on both conventions with Eric Sevareid.

"I'm pleased to instantly become a part of the CBS News team but that is not my strength," he said. "I've not done instant journalism since I've been in the business. I'm not that good at it. I think my strength is longer programs and reflective journalism. That's why I elected to join CBS over other alternatives. I'm anxious to produce "CBS Reports," which is the chief reason I joined the network."

TALK WAS that Moyers would fill the void left by Daniel Schorr. Although he's been backed by CBS, Schorr is still personna non grata at the network's Washington Bureau after leaking the Pike Committee report on the CIA. His suspension from CBS News reportedly will be permanent after all legal matters are resolved.

"True, they talked about that but it was never confirmed," said Moyers, a thoughtful man who speaks deliberately with a decided Texas accent. "Sevareid and I will be sharing commentary, analysis, interpretation and reflection. This was Eric's idea. He suggested it after we paired up for the Democratic primaries in California. CBS was eager for me to do it so I will took time off from 'CBS Reports' long for the Democrats in New York and I'll do the same for the Republicans in Kansas City."

BILL MOYERS

Moyers is satisfied that "CBS Reports" is as close to what he's been doing in public broadcasting as any vehicle in commercial television. His "Bill Moyers' Journals" even garnered praise from the widow of the late Edward R. Murrow, one of Moyers' two boyhood heroes when he was growing up in Texas. The other was Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution.

"JANET MURROW has written me often to say that my 'Journal' was closer to whe work of her husband's on television than anything else."

His affection and admiration for Murrow is one of many things that makes him sentimental toward CBS and helped swing the decision to join the network. "I've a long history with CBS," said Moyers. He explained:

"I've known Dick Salant and Bill Small (two news executives) for a long time. I've also known Bill Paley (chairman of the board) for a long time. Arthur Taylor and I have known each other. I've been on the board of a company, Hart-Hanks Newspapers Inc.,— that owns some CBS stations. I'm a very good friend of Frank Stanton. Even the Texas station owned by the late LBJ — KTVC — where I first worked had good relations with CBS. So that's what I mean about being sentimental toward the network."

Moyers said he's severed all business ties to take on his news assignment. He's currently hashing out ideas with the series producers for future "CBS Reports" subjects. One phase that intrigues him is Jimmy Carter's "Twice Born."

HE HOPES to be able to treat it in some documentary fashion. "There are 40 million Evangelical Christians in the country and what they all have in common is the phenomena, the experience Carter describes as 'twice born.'"

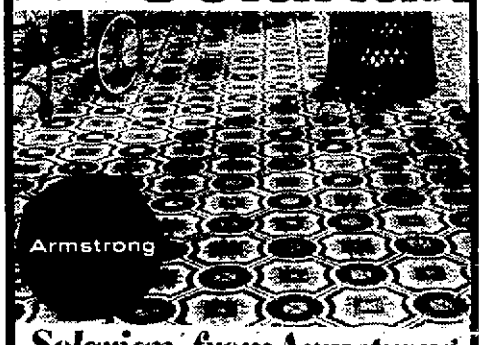

"We also talked about Rhodesia, South Africa, bioethics— medical techniques and technology that give rise to ethical and moral considerations— genetics engineering, human behavior modification and the portrait of a candidate who wins the election in November."

Moyers said that one of the orders to his producers is "keep them guessing." Said he: "I don't think you'll find any 'CBS Reports' that will look alike. Style and technique should change depending upon the subject matter. You should never try to impose upon an issue or subject or personality the straight jacket of a preconceived format. Let the story tell itself. Let the person emerge. You have to let the information develop; you must shape the vehicle to the message you're trying to deliver."

WHAT WORRIES Moyers now is this: "Can you succeed in television and lead a sane life? I orphaned my children and widowed my wife when I was in the White House," said the former press secretary to LBJ. "I don't intend to do it again."

CARTER OF ANNAPOLIS If Jimmy Carter is elected President he will be the first to have been graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy.

Carter was appointed to Annapolis by Georgia Congressman Stephen Pace. He entered the Academy in 1943 after a year as a Naval ROTC student at Georgia Tech in Atlanta, taking courses recommended by the Navy. He graduated from the Naval Academy in 1947, ranking 59 in a class of 820.

He loved the Navy, as did his wife, Rosalynn. When Carter's father died in 1953, the Carters engaged in what the former Governor of Georgia describes as "the first really serious argument in our marriage. My wife Rosalynn simply did not agree that we should leave the Navy and return to Plains [Ga.], and it was with mixed feelings that we made the decision."

MIDSHIPMAN JIMMY CARTER

Jimmy Carter served in the U.S. Navy 11 years. Presidents John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson and Gerald Ford also served in the Navy, but none was graduated from Annapolis. Kennedy did his undergraduate at Harvard, Johnson at Southwest Texas State Teachers College, Ford at the University of Michigan.

JIMMY CARTER AND WIFE ROSALYNN

WORDS TO PONDER "But what is government itself but the greatest of all reflections on human nature? If men were angels, no government would be necessary. If angels were to govern men, neither external nor internal controls on government would be necessary. In framing a government which is to be administered over men, the great difficulty lies in this: you must first enable the government to control the governed; and in the next place oblige it to control itself."

—James Madison, No. 51 of the Federalist Papers.

OIL SNAFU The acronym which best describes the federal government's energy conservation program is SNAFU (Situation Normal--All Fouled Up).

Supposedly we are running out of oil in this country, yet the public trend is back to bigger, heavier, gas-guzzling cars. The intermediate-size vehicles are selling better than the smaller jobs, although by 1985 the government fuel economy standards are supposed to call for cars which will average 27.5 miles per gallon.

Much has also been made of the fact that instead of buying less foreign oil, the U.S. is now importing approximately 40% of its oil.

Is this good or bad? Has it ever occurred to the government masterminds that by importing oil from the OPEC countries, we are helping to preserve our own energy resources?

If we become oil independent, it simply means that we will exhaust our reserves before the OPEC countries--Saudi Arabia, Iran, Kuwait, and the rest of them--exhaust theirs.

Is that such a wise policy? It is time to rethink our energy conservation policy--if we have one.

COOL PROFIT Employers who want to get the most from personnel should keep their work premises cool.

Dr. T. P. Cullinane, assistant professor of mechanical engineering at Notre Dame, contends that too much heat not only slows workers, it also causes more mistakes. If air conditioning isn't feasible for your plant, advises Cullinane, try fans, dehumidifiers and protective clothing. They all help to increase productivity.

EYE LANGUAGE Pupillometrics is the study of changes in the pupil of the eye; supposedly such changes reflect a person's attitude.

A recent study by University of Chicago Professor Eckard H. Hess reveals that the size of a person's pupil can be interpreted in terms of sexual interest and honesty. A person with dilated pupils is usually thought to be attractive and sincere, while those with smaller pupils are associated with negative factors.

This is one explanation why young children seem so innocent. Their innocence can be attributed in part to their pupil size, which is normally larger than that of older persons.

WILLIAM COLEMAN

ANSWERS, ANYBODY? Last year, approximately 2.4 million Americans flew across the Atlantic.

Of this number, fewer than half flew on U.S. carriers. According to Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Jr., who some weeks ago approved the Concorde SST flights to the U.S. for a period of 16 months, "This disparity brought about a loss in American jobs and had an adverse effect on our balance of payments."

The share of international air traffic carried by U.S. airlines is continuing to decline, and Coleman would like to know why.

If you have answers or suggestions, Coleman would welcome your views. You can write the Secretary of Transportation at Washington, D.C. 20590.

inspecting his peanut warehouse.

Sizing up the potential opposition, Rafshoon said: "With Ford, the issue of him not taking control of the government and being considered a bumbler will be there implicitly.

"With Reagan, some of his rash statements, and perceptions people have about him, will have to be brought in."

Carter won 18 out of 30 primaries without any of his commercials ever attacking any of his opponents by name. Asked if that would not change during the General Election, Rafshoon smiled and said, "We really won't have to tell people by name who our opponent is."

Rafshoon also promised, in his upcoming election presentations, "a little more solid delineation of what a Carter presidency would be." Of all the charges that have been leveled against their tiger, the Carter campaigners are most sensitive to the accusation that he is vague on exactly what he would do if elected.

ONE GREAT PROBLEM that Rafshoon will no longer face is a chronic shortage of cash that afflicted all the Democratic candidates during the primaries.

During the primaries, Rafshoon said Carter spent $2.2 million on media advertising in 38 different states. Another $750,000 was spent on production and printing.

But scraping up money was a constant hassle, with the Carter campaign often spending only half as much in a primary or caucus state as it would have liked. A federal allotment of $22 million for the fall campaign will end all that.

Like Carter's other top staffers, Rafshoon works without the salve of flattery from the candidate. Carter is a perfectionist notoriously sparing in his compliments.

After Carter got off on the right foot during the Iowa caucuses in January, Rafshoon suggested that his advertising helped push him out front of all the other aspirants. But Carter only replied, "Uncommitted came in first and he didn't have any media."

'cool it'—with LEMON

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Flavor it lemon. Add the sprightly tartness of this cool fruit to a creamy mixture, then freeze. Result: Lemon Ice Cream. Each spoonful is refreshing, with a chilly tang. You'll be amazed at the speed and ease with which you can make this lovely dessert.

Start your dinner with jellied consommé garnished with a sprig of fragrant mint. For the main course, serve your favorite meat loaf hot or cold, crisp potato chips and a lavish salad of ripe red tomatoes with blue cheese dressing. Finally, treat everyone to Lemon Ice Cream with sugar wafers and tall, frosty glasses of iced tea or coffee.

LEMON ICE CREAM

- 2 eggs
- ½ cup sugar
- ½ cup light corn syrup
- 1¼ cups milk
- 1 cup whipping cream
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- 2 teaspoons grated lemon peel

Beat eggs until light and lemon-colored. Add sugar gradually, beating constantly. Add corn syrup, milk, cream, lemon juice and grated peel; mix well. Freeze until firm. Turn out into chilled bowl; beat until light. Return to freezing tray. Freeze until firm. Makes six servings.

'Rescue at Entebbe' due by Universal Pictures

"Rescue at Entebbe," the spectacular story of the rescue of 103 hijacked hostages from Entebbe Airport in Uganda July 3-4, will be dramatized into a major motion picture by Academy Award winning director George Roy Hill as a Pan Arts presentation, it was announced by Universal Pictures.

The project was in development by Hill and Pan Arts, for Universal, moments after news was learned of the incredible rescue by the brilliant and daring Israeli Commandos.

Arrangements were finalized before the July 4 weekend concluded.

Hill won his "Oscar" for directing Universal's "The Sting," which took a total of seven Academy Awards including Best Picture. Hill also won the Directors Guild Award for Most Outstanding Directorial Achievement for directing "The Sting."

He is now completing postproduction work for Universal on "Slap Shot," which stars Paul Newman. Hill also directed "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," "The Great Waldo Pepper," "Slaughterhouse-Five," "The World of Henry Orient," "Hawaii."

THIS DRINK COULD COST YOU AN ARM AND A LEG.

That's what it cost a fine young actor, recently. And he wasn't drinking.

There's a chance it's also going to cost someone else plenty; the bar that served the drinks to the driver who hit the actor.

The court called it comparative negligence and awarded the actor a $1.9 million judgement.

But you're involved too, because there's a proposed law that says you may be responsible if someone gets in an accident after you've served him one too many in your own home!

This week, watch "The Million Dollar Martini," an Eyewitness Closeup with reporter Ann Martin. And find out why next time you pour one for the road, it better be coffee.

Long form shows seen in future

By VAL ADAMS
New York News

NEW YORK— What will be the broad trends in TV programming 10 years from now? NBC has predicted that by 1985 half of the entertainment schedule "will consist of long-form programs," more made-for-TV films, mini-series and special events.

NBC also forecast that the notion of a new TV season, which usually occurs in September, will gradually fade away. Premieres of various shows will be scattered throughout the year.

Mention of the so-called "long-form programs" was a reference to a show that might be presented over a period of a few weeks, maybe three, four, five or six, depending on the property.

"LONGER forms in specials or shorter series have the advantage of attracting top actors, writers, producers and directors unwilling to commit to a continuing series," said the NBC soothsayers. "Television will be able to compete with theatrical motion pictures for literary rights by expanding the play hours of mini-series beyond the standard two hours."

NBC forecast that the day is not far off when television can no longer rely on theatrical motion pictures and must increase its production of TV movies.

"There will be new impetus to made-for-TV films," said NBC, "since the existing inventory of suitable motion pictures virtually depleted and new production is not likely to keep pace with television's past rate of usage."

The NBC projections were presented at the just-ended annual meeting of network affiliates in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. The chief soothsayers were William Rubens, vice president of research and corporate planning, and Alfred Ordover, vice president of corporate planning.

AMONG other things, Rubens and Ordover forecast that there will be an increasing demand for news and information on TV. A trend by viewers toward "conspicious cultivation" of names in the news, current events and cultural activities, they said, will lead viewers "more and more to news programs and talk and interview shows."

An expansion of early evening network news from its present 30-minutes to an hour is what NBC, also ABC and CBS, have long wanted to do. Another speaker at the affiliates meeting was Richard C. Wald, president of NBC News, who discussed the subject.

my favorite jokes

by danny thomas

EDITOR'S NOTE: Television has always been Danny Thomas's medium. Even after years of headlining in top clubs and starring in the movies ("The Big City," "Call Me Mister," "I'll See You in My Dreams" and "The Jazz Singer"), Danny's TV show "Make Room for Daddy," which was based on 11 years of his own life, was the vehicle through which he could be most versatile.

Says Danny: "If there is a basic reason for the success of TV shows, it is their preoccupation with trouble. Nothing else is shared by so many people!" And in his current series, "The Practice" on NBC, Danny's involved in the comic side of trouble. He plays Dr. Jules Bedford, who thinks doctors should make house calls—even on Wednesdays. "We do things on the show that happen in real life. You go to the doctor; he says, 'Cough.' You cough. Then he says, 'How long have you had that cough?'"

Here are some of Danny's quips and stories:

A friend of mine, a star pitcher, injured his arm during pre-game practice. He was terribly upset until the club doctor assured the pitcher that his arm would be OK for a shaving commercial.

When my uncle Tonoose came to this country, he only knew how to say "hello" and "good-bye." He got a job on the docks in Toledo and lived alone in a rooming house. At lunch hour he was afraid to eat at the diner, because he didn't know how to order. So he went to my father and in his native tongue, Lebanese, said: "Teach me how to ask for something to eat, something sweet, so I can stay alive between breakfast and dinner. My father taught him "apple pie and coffee."

Then one day Tonoose went into the diner and said to the waitress, "Apple pie and coffee." He got it - every day for three weeks. But how long can you keep that up? So he said to my father: "Got to have something different, maybe cheese." My father taught him to ask for a cheese sandwich. He rehearsed it, and meanwhile kept eating apple pie and coffee. Finally the big day came. He sat down and said to the waitress, "Hello, cheese sandwich." The waitress said, "White or rye?" He looked at her and said, "Apple pie and coffee."

I remember the comment that Robert Young (Dr. Marcus Welby) made when we started on "The Practice." He said: "I didn't mind when Danny used to come over and chew the fat on the set, but now when he comes over he gives me a second opinion!"

I'm not like the other TV doctors—I'm going to present all my patients with bills.

A young fella applies for a job as a truck driver. He's got a partner named Leroy, and he tells the personnel man: "You know, it won't cost you any extra money to hire both of us. Me and Leroy, we drive and we switch. I drive, and then it's the other way round. We just go right across country. We stop for gas and coffee, no hotel, no motel."

The personnel manager says: "Let me ask you a safety question. Suppose you're barreling downhill and there's a truck passing a car coming up the hill. What would you do?"

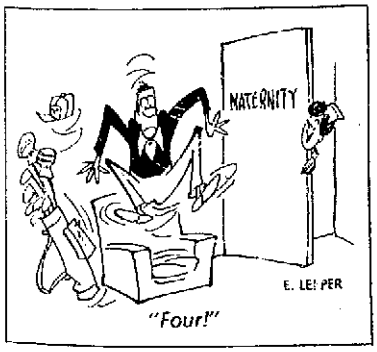

"The first thing I'd do," says the fella, "is wake Leroy, 'cause I know he's never seen a crash like that."

I was thrilled when Memphis named a street after me. The kind people who turned out for the occasion came for laughs. I told them my first thrill came when the street was named after me and my second big moment came when I got a parking ticket on it.

There is a lot of discussion these days about reincarnation. As a matter of fact, I knew a waiter who came back as a clock—and he was still complaining: "Please, I only have two hands!"

"Four!"

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation. Relieves Pain & Itch...

Gives prompt temporary relief in many cases from hemorrhoidal pain and burning itch in such tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H® —the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.
